"Better for us, perhaps it might appear,
Were there all harmony, all virtue here."

Texas man is shipping fish to Northern markets from the Gulf of Mexico by airplane, but why not deal exclusively in flying fish and make them transport themselves under their own power?

LOST.

IN INDIANA, on May 8, one complete set of Pennsylvania delegates. Finder please return to H. H., 2300 S street. Reward.

* * * *

The Italian Senate, which knows how to deal with third party movements and farm blocs, in one fell swoop abolishes democracy and enthrones Mussolini on the seven hills, the greatest dictator the modern world has ever beheld.

"Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than one man?
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome

* * * *

Buddy will be pleased to learn that the new national committeeman from Pennsylvania is his old friend Gen. Attaboy! (If you weren't in the A. E. F., you won't get that.)

* * * *

The farm bill has been whipped into shape but we fear that it needs more than one good licking to make it behave.

* * * *

John Garner is in sympathy with the demand of some of the farm leaders for higher tariffs on agricultural products—including, doubtless, that famous animal immortalized during the debate on the Payne-Aldrich bill, "Garner's Goat of Texas."

* * * *

The spectacle of Rev. Clarence True Wilson introducing Jack Johnson as a prohibition speaker at the Kansas City conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church is hardly calculated to win recruits for the dry cause in the good old wet-drinking dry-voting South.

* * * *

The Democrats are getting ready to draft a platform that Al Smith can stand on without wearing rubber boots.

* * * *

Jim Good neglected to inform the Senate committee that Lowden now has seven more pledged delegates than Hoover, but maybe Frank hadn't tipped him off.

* * * *

Mr. Otto Kahn resigns from the Film Bureau because it sanctions the showing of the picture play "Dawn," depicting the execution of Edith Cavell, shot by a German firing squad. Things have come to a pretty pass in this country if a war story can be censored because it recalls certain unpleasant incidents leading up to America's entrance into the World War—first thing we know we won't be allowed to sing "Over There."

* * * *

It is to be hoped that the decision of Al Smith's friends to discuss prohibition in the Democratic platform under the head of "Law Enforcement" will not make it necessary for the esteemed keynoter to revise his scintillating manuscript.

* * * *

"If I were damned of body and soul,
I know whose prayers would make me whole,

It would indeed be a rash person who on this day dedicated to motherhood would try to improve on Kip.

Secretary Hoover goes on a fishing trip to Pennsylvania. Too late!

* * * *

Mr. Hoover gets the Pennsylvania delegation—almost.

"The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon
Turn ashes—or it prospers; and anon,
Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face,
Lighting a little hour or two—is gone."

* * * *

The Secretary of Commerce is presented with a nice little boutonniere for his lapel but bouquets answer no roll calls.

* * * *

A couple of California dry agents steal some Coast Guard stuff—they kill a liquor suspect and interrogate him afterwards.

* * * *

Gov. Lowden will appear before the Senatorial Snoopers tomorrow and we do hope that nobody asks him how he's getting along out in Missouri.

* * * *

Those Pennsylvania delegates must remind Secretary Hoover of the old story about the colored gemmen who bagged a 'possum and cooked it at his cabin fire. While waiting for it to crisp he dropped asleep and a friend who happened in ate the dainty morsel, threw the bones on the hearth, and smeared some grease on the slumbering gentleman's mouth. Mose eventually concluded that it was the "most unsatisfactory 'possum I ever ate."

SMOOT-WELCH BILL LAID BEFORE SENATE GREATLY INCREASED

Favored by Committee, Measure May Reach Vote This Week.

RELATIVE STANDING PROVISION RETAINED

Dale Makes Total $20,000,000; Others $25,000,000; Coolidge View Unknown.

The Senate civil service committee made a favorable report on the Smoot-Welch salary bill late yesterday, after having added a large number of increases. The Senate is expected to vote on the bill early this week.

The additional raises tacked on by the Senate committee total between $2,000,000 and $5,000,000. As passed by the House, it was estimated that the bill would add $18,000,000 to the Government pay roll. Hence, the Senate bill would add either $20,000,000 or $23,000,000, depending on which estimate of the cost of the additional Senate raises is correct, $2,000,000 or $5,000,000.

Senator Dale (Republican), of Vermont, chairman of the committee, said that he and his colleagues believed that the additional raises would cost not more than $2,000,000. There were others, however, who estimated $5,000,000. Just which figure is correct will be determined tomorrow by the Bureau of the Budget.

The bill approved yesterday would give an average annual increase of $150 to the employes in the lower grades of the clerical, administrative and fiscal service, about $30 more than provided by the House bill.

It would give an average increase of $200 to those in the middle grades of the clerical, administrative and fiscal services, about $50 more than the House bill.

Relative Standing Retained.

With the exception of the additional increases, the bill as approved by the Senate committee yesterday is the same bill that passed the House recently. The so-called "relative standing" provision, which Senator Smoot (Republican), of Utah, had asked the committee to remove, was kept in the bill.

The committee, however, believes that this provision is no longer subject to controversy because of the tacking on of the many increases. The addition of these increases was the idea of Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa.

What Senator Smoot's attitude toward the amended bill will be remains to be seen. He declared last night that he would make no comment until he had seen the bill.

Coolidge Attitude Unknown.

The attitude of President Coolidge toward a more expensive bill also is a mystery, and the members of the committee say so frankly.

Senator Smoot, who is chairman of the Senate finance committee, is regarded as the President's spokesman on matters affecting the Treasury. Therefore, whatever his attitude toward the

Morrow at Resort After His Flu Attack

Mexico City, May 12 (A.P.).—In the benign climate of Cuernavaca, Dwight W. Morrow, American Ambassador, today was convalescing from an attack of influenza. Leaving the embassy for the first time in a week, Mr. Morrow drove by automobile to the famous Mexican health resort to be the guest of the British Minister.

It was expected that the lower altitude in the shaded and flower-embowered town would complete his cure. He will return to the capital on Tuesday.

Spanish Fliers Ready Again for Record Hop

Seville, Spain, May 12 (A.P.).—The plane in which Capt. Jiminez and Iglesias hope to set a new world record for endurance flying has been completely repaired where the wing was torn in the attempted take-off Friday. Tests made this afternoon were satisfactory, but the fliers declined to say whether they would start tomorrow.

1842 Power Plant For Ford Museum

Providence, R. I., May 12 (A. P.).—A steam power plant, which was built in 1842 is being dismantled here for shipment to Henry Ford's museum at Dearborn, Mich., for preservation as an example of early American machinery.

The engine has been in use for 86 years in a local jewelry manufacturing plant.

Four Die, Fifth Burned In Ranch Home Fire

Greeley, Colo., May 12 (A.P.).—Four persons perished and another was severely burned when fire last night destroyed the ranch home of Adolph Maize, near La Salle, Colo. The dead Mrs. Maize, 34, and three children, Ramon, 6; Mary, 4, and a baby 4 months old. Albert, 8, ran from the house with his clothes in flames.

POLICE FACE MYSTERY IN SHOOTING OF WOMAN

VICTIM AND 2 MEN HELD

Miss Viola Smith, 24 years old, 918 Seventh street southwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital last night suffering from a bullet wound in the right arm. She said she was motoring on the Marlboro pike with two men when she was shot from the roadside.

Miss Smith, whose condition is not serious, was taken to the hospital by Richard Kennedy, 31 years old and married, 1225 Fifteenth street northwest, and George McGee, 19 years old, 424 Eighth street southwest.

She said she was riding with them when the bullet struck her, but they denied this, saying that she stopped them at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue and asked them to take her to the hospital.

Headquarters Detectives Kuehling and Wilson took the two men in custody and questioned them at police headquarters.

They were later arrested and held at the First Precinct Station for investigation. Miss Smith also was arrested and held for investigation at the House of Detention.

Standard Oil Plane Fired On in Missouri

St. Louis, May 12 (A.P.).—The big Standard Oil Co. tri-motored monoplane Standolind, was fired upon yesterday afternoon as it passed over the farm district south of Gumbo, St. Louis County, it was learned today.

Rodney S. Lamont and James L. Phelps, the pilots, told Lambert-St. Louis field flyers they were flying at an altitude of about 500 feet, en route from Springfield, Mo., when they felt a bullet strike the wing and saw a man on the ground firing at them with a rifle.

Pilots operating out of Lambert-St. Louis field have encountered opposition from Missouri River bottom farmers, who object to airplanes flying over their farms, contending they frighten the livestock.

$24,000,000 ADDED TO SENATE TAX CUT BILL BY 40-38 VOTE

Reduced Graduated Levy on Small Corporations Wins After Fight.

12½ PER CENT RATE PROGRAM SUSTAINED

(Associated Press.)

Senate Republicans held the main plank of their $200,000,000 tax reduction scheme in the revenue bill yesterday in obtaining a 12½ per cent corporation tax, but only after Democrats had upset their program earlier by voting into the bill a graduated scale of lower rates on corporations with small incomes.

As on previous votes in the tax contest, the divisions yesterday were on party lines. The 12½ per cent corporation rate was put into the bill over the 11½ per cent figure approved by the House by a vote of 40 to 34. The present corporation levy is 13½ per cent.

Each 1 per cent reduction in the corporation tax involves $82,000,000, and had the Democrats been successful today in their fight for retention of the 11½ per cent rate they would have virtually won their fight to increase the proposed $200,000,000 reduction to $325,000,000.

$24,000,000 Added to Bill.

As it was, $24,000,000 was added to the $200,000,000 reduction provided by the Republican bill when the Senate accepted the graduated scale of rates on corporations with incomes of $15,000 and less. Lining up solidly for this proposal, advanced by Senator Simmons (Democrat), of North Carolina, Democrats received the support of two Republicans—Norbeck and McMaster, of South Dakota—and won by a vote of 40 to 38.

Surprised by the first break in his ranks, Senator Smoot, of Utah, in charge of the Republican fight, announced he would ask for another roll call on the graduated scale of corporation rates which was fostered in the House by Representative Garner (Democrat), of Texas.

Senators Harrison, of Mississippi, and Walsh, of Massachusetts, carried the attack for the Democrats yesterday on the graduated scale of rates for corporations, arguing that it was only fair to allow lower rates for corporations with small incomes in place of the flat tax now imposed on all corporation incomes. This was challenged by Senators Smoot and Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, who contended the change meant discrimination.

Garner Rates Restored.

The Garner rate schedules, which were restored to the bill, provide for a tax of 5 per cent on corporations with incomes of $7,000 and less; 7 per cent on incomes between $7,000 and $12,000, and 9 per cent on incomes between $12,000 and $15,000. The regular flat

First Penitentiary Dry Law Sentence

The first penitentiary sentence to be imposed in this jurisdiction for a violation of the prohibition law was imposed yesterday by Justice Frederick L. Siddons in Criminal Court No. 2, when James H. Hickey was sentenced to serve a year and a day and to pay a fine of $200 for a second offense of selling and possession.

According to the evidence introduced by Assistant District Attorney Walter M. Shea the defendant sold a half-pint and three drinks of red whisky on June 25, 1927, to Policeman A. D. Hansfield and M. A. Anderson in a near-beer saloon on Seventh street southwest. The records show that Hickey paid a fine of $100 in Police Court on November 13, 1922, for a first offense of selling and possession.

LINDBERGH IN VAST AVIATION PROJECT, IS NEW YORK VIEW

News to Startle World, It Is Said; Many Big Concerns Figure.

MAPPED AIR ROUTES IN U. S., REPORT SAYS

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—A year ago today a comparatively unknown young aviator, Charles A. Lindbergh, flew from San Diego to New York via St. Louis to set forth alone on a transatlantic flight, the completion of which at Paris left the world fairly speechless with adoration.

Today the word aviation is virtually synonymous with Lindbergh, but it is Col. Lindbergh now and since his return from abroad to unprecedented acclaim, Lindbergh has gone right on, adding new achievements to his first epochal one.

Recently he completed an apparently almost aimless tour by air of the country, dropping out of the sky, it seemed, wherever the whim seized him.

May Have Mapped Air Routes.

Today reports, widely circulated, and credited here, were that these apparently aimless flights were really for the purpose of charting and mapping for the Governmen, and others a system of airplane passenger routes that are to be Nation-wide. Every move in Lindbergh's aviation program has been closely watched.

Although none of the men reported to be principals in the enterprise will discuss it yet, there is developing a gigantic aeronautical enterprise, it is believed, announcement of which will startle the world. The reports involve the Fords, the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the B. F. Mahoney Aircraft Corporatin, the Guggenheim Foundation for the promotion of aviation and the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co.

Wall street, judging by the activity of Wright and Curtiss in the closing stock market sessions of the week, is considered impressed by the stories being spread.

Conferred With Fords.

On Thursday Lindbergh conferred with Henry Ford and Edsel Ford in Detroit and made a quick flight to New

Juror, Who Held Thief Has Rights, Convicted

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Lawrence O'Toole, a juror, who thought a burglar with a gun had some rights, today was adjudged in contempt of court because of his replies to qualification questions during the trial of five youths for murder. The youths were given a prison sentence of 25 years after a majority of the jury favored sending them to the chair for killing a grocer in a holdup.

"I don't believe anybody has a right to hold up people," said O'Toole, reiterating an expression made after the verdict was reached. "But I think it was foolish for the grocer to resist the holdup men."

He is to be sentenced Monday.

6 Die, Town in Panic As River Overflows

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, May 12 (A.P.).—Six men were drowned, the population thrown into panic and much material damage caused when the River Hron overflowed its banks last night, inundating the whole countryside.

The River Neutra also is rising to an alarming extent, menacing towns and villages along its banks and causing the populations to flee.

Hoover Is to Fish, Forgetting Politics

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Hoover arranged yesterday to abandon his presidential campaign and forego his official duties for a five-day vacation, which he plans to spend fishing near Williamsport, Pa. He will leave Washington by automobile early today.

During the stay he will make his residence in the fishing lodge of Jay Cook, outside of Williamsport. The waters he plans to fish were visited on several occasions by Theodore Roosevelt when the latter was President.

23 Oil Wells, Ablaze, Form Gigantic Torch

Bucharest, Roumania, May 12 (A.P.).—Twenty-three oil wells of the Astroromano Co. were blazing like a gigantic torch tonight in the Orcui district. Two engineers were burned to death when they were trapped by the rapidly spreading flames. The property damage is enormous.

Firemen called from all surrounding districts were battling desperately to prevent the flames from being carried by the strong winds to other adjacent oil wells.

John Joy Edson Improved, May Recover, Doctors Say

Financier Regains Consciousness, Talking With Daughter and Business Associate—Only Fear Now Is Pneumonia—Skull Fracture Menace Passed.

John Joy Edson, Washington banker, philanthropist and civic leader, whose life was despaired of Friday night when an injury suffered in an auotmobile accident was diagnosed as skull fracture, grew steadily stronger yesterday, and was said by Emergency Hospital physicians to have a good change of recovery.

Mr. Edson's respiration noticeably improved during the day, according to Dr. Ed Grass, resident physician. Most of the danger from the skull fracture was reported past, and medical attendants were directing their efforts to prevent an attack of pneumonia, to which they feared his weakened condition would render him subject.

The venerable financier and philanthropist was conscious at intervals during the day. He recognized and was able to exchange a few words with his daughter and his business associate, John B. Larner, president of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. No other visitors were permitted to see him.

Mr. Edson suffered the injury about 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, when he was knocked down by an automobile driven by 16-year-old Robert J. Gutheim, of Chevy Chase, Md. Gutheim, who was backing his car, struck Mr. Edson as he stepped from the curb in front of Equitable Cooperative Building Association, of which he was president.

FLIERS OFF TO RESCUE THE BREMEN

ARMY'S BREMEN RELIEF PLANES REACH ST. JOHN

LANDING PERIL AVERTED

St. John, N. B., May 12 (A.P.).—This port tonight housed the Army air force of two amphibian planes on the way from Washington to the relief of the German transatlantic plane, Bremen, at Greenly Island.

The planes may not be forced to make a perilous landing on Greenly Island or drop one of their number by parachute to the little pile of rock on which the Bremen finally came to rest, it was indicated tonight by Brig. Gen. J. E. Fechet, in command of the expedition. He said he had information that the Bremen had been moved across the ice to the Labrador mainland.

The two planes arrived here at 5:20 p. m., after an uneventful flight from Portland, Me. The two ships are carrying, besides Gen. Fechet, Capt. Ira C. Eaker, his aid, Lieut. Muir Fairchild, and Fred Melchior, Junkers mechanic and pilot.

They had planned to make Pictou, N. S., tonight, but due to fog they decided to stop overnight here. The two planes settled easily into a slip at Sand Point on the western side of the harbor.

Gen. Fechet said that he hopes to hop off at dawn tomorrow if weather conditions are favorable for St. Georges, N. F., when the final flight to the side of the Bremen will be made.

Mayor White greeted the airmen on their arrival tonight and several citizens' committees called on them with offers of entertainment. The fliers

Horned Toad Buried In a Corner Stone

Eastland, Tex., May 12 (A.P.).—When the cornerstone of the new courthouse was laid here today, a Texas horned toad was entombed in it. Three months ago, when the old courthouse was torn down, a horned toad was removed from the cornerstone alive after 31 years imprisonment, according to witnesses.

Several thousand persons witnessed today's ceremonies.

Broker Is Accused Of Murdering Wife

Los Angeles, May 12 (A.P.).—J. W. Randolph, wealthy Hollywood broker, was charged with the murder of his wife, in a complaint signed by Detective Lieut. Homer Cross here.

Randolph is expected to ask his freedom on a writ of habeas corpus. He has been held incommunicado in the Pasadena City jail for three days during the secret exhumation of the body of his wife, who died February 3, last, and a chemical analysis for poison made.

The county chemist reported that traces of poison in sufficient quantities to cause death had been found in the dead woman.

Police Seize Still, Guarded by Tower

Led by Lieut. Sidney J. Marks, of the Eleventh Precinct, a squad of police last night raided a house at 720 Fifty-seventh street northeast, protected by a watchtower from which guards could survey the city for blocks around. They seized a 400-gallon still and confiscated 7,000 gallons of mash.

As the party approached the dwelling they saw a group of men flee through the woods at the rear of the dwelling a pack of about 20 dogs at their heels. A number of signs about the structure read: "Beware of Dogs." No one was found in the house, into wh... raiding party was forced to bre... way with hammers. MAHARAJAH AND BRIDE ARRIVE AT FRENCH HOME

U. S. GIRL NOT TATTOOED

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Paris, May 12.—Sir Tukoojirao Holkar, former Maharajah of Indor, India, and his bride, Sita Devi, formerly Nancy Anne Miller, of Seattle, Wash., entering a western capital for the first time since the conversion of Miss Miller to Brahminism and their marriage, came to Paris today and virtually barricaded themselves in a large estate in the suburbs. They arrived from Marseilles, where they evaded a crowd of French and foreign reporters, dodged another similar crowd at the Gare du Nord and motored to an estate at St. Germain-en-Laye, owned by the former maharajah.

Surrounded by a retinue of 70 Indian servants, 3 aids and a bodyguard troop of 30 French servants, the couple were found there this afternoon by a reporter for The Washington Post and Herald-Tribune. After a complicated relay of messages through intermediaries, the former maharajah said that he intended to give no interviews and would not speak of his personal affairs. During the excitement of barking dogs and invectives hurled by servants at a Paris chauffeur who audaciously parked the reporter's dilapidated taxicab alongside two elegant limousines belonging to the estate, the former Miss Miller stood in the doorway and smiled, but refused to come out and would say nothing.

A glimpse served to refute reports published in Paris that as part of the ceremony of her conversion her face had been tattooed. It also revealed

CLERGYMAN IS FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN ROAD

Man, Believed Rev. John Lehr, Brought From Ardmore, Md.; Skull Fractured.

Found lying unconscious at the side of a road near Ardmore, Md., shortly before midnight last night, a man about 65 years old, believed to be the Rev. John Lehr, of the United Methodist Episcopal Church, was brought to Casualty Hospital here suffering from a probable fracture of the skull and fractures of both legs. His condition is critical.

Police believe that he is the victim of a "hit-and-run" driver. A certificate found in his pocket signed by Bishop Richmond V. Latham stated Lehr was an ordained minister of the United Methodist Episcopal Church.

The man was found by Constable Raymond Coombs who was driving along the road in his automobile. Coombs told police that a short distance down the road from where the man lay is a high bridge and declared that he would investigate to determine whether the man could have jumped or been thrown from the bridge.

Campbell, Nebr., May 12 (A. SECRETARY MELLON PUTS HOOVER FIRST AMONG CANDIDATES

Pledging of Pennsylvania Delegates, However, Is Opposed.

COMMERCE HEAD'S BACKERS JUBILANT

Philadelphia, May 12 (A.P.).—Accepting the chairmanship of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican national convention today, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon told the delegates that of all the candidates for the Presidency, Herbert Hoover "seems to come closest to the standard that we set for this high office."

"However, between now and the convention," Mr. Mellon added, "I recommend that we hold ourselves unpledged and uncommitted to any particular candidate, so that when we meet in caucus in Kansas City before the convention we will have the fullest liberty of choice to do as is best for Pennsylvania and the Nation."

His Election Unanimous.

Mr. Mellon was unanimously elected chairman by the caucus of delegates who also completed their organization for the convention.

Prior to the caucus the Republican State committee held its biennial reorganization meeting in preparation for the coming presidential and State campaign.

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, was unanimously elected the Pennsylvania member of the national committee, and Gen. Edward Martin, auditor general and candidate for State treasurer, was elected chairman of the State committee.

Gen. Atterbury succeeds former Senator George Wharton Pepper, and Gen. Martin takes the place of William L. Mellon, nephew of the Treasury Secretary. Neither of the retiring officers was a candidate for reelection.

Mellon's Statement.

Secretary Mellon's statement was as follows:

"I thank you for the honor you have done me in selecting me as your chairman. It is a very real honor, for ours is a very real responsibility. The man selected by the Republican convention as the nominee of our party will in all human probability be the next President of the United States. At Kansas City, therefore, we will not merely be nominating a candidate but selecting a President.

"Under the leadership of President Coolidge the record of the Republican party has been such as to entitle it to the confidence of the Nation.

"It enjoys that confidence. The people unquestionably will give us a new grant of power if they are satisfied that the policies, principles and wise administrative practices which have given economy and efficiency in government and brought prosperity and contentment to the people are to be continued.

Nominee Most Important.

"Our platform must furnish a definite pledge that they will. But more important than the platform is the nominee. His views, character and record must be such as to furnish a guarantee that Republican principles will be upheld, that no backward steps will be taken and that the policies so successfully inaugurated and followed by our great President will be carried forward.

"We hear much talk of the various candidates and of their policies. Among them all Mr. Hoover seems to come closest to the standard that we set for this high office.

"Between now and the convention, however, I recommend that we hold ourselves unpledged and uncommitted to any particular candidate so that when we meet in caucus in Kansas City before the convention we will have the fullest liberty of choice to do as is best for Pennsylvania and the Nation."

Remarks Eagerly Awaited.

Secretary Mellon's remarks to the national delegates was awaited with the greatest interest. The caucus was held behind closed doors, but copies of the Secretary's speech were given out when he was elected to the chairmanship.

After the caucus Secretary Mellon good-humoredly answered questions put to him by a group of newspaper men, but gave little further information as to his probable attitude in the convention.

He said he felt that earnest consideration should be given to the qualifications of all candidates. If one commits oneself, he said, it is always difficult to get out of in the event of a changed situation. Anything might happen at a political convention and it was best for the delegates to move cautiously.

Secretary Mellon was asked whether there was a possibility that President Coolidge might be renominated, and he replied, "You know as much about that as I do."

Not a Candidate Himself.

Referring to Mr. Hoover, Mr. Mellon said that the candidacy of the Secretary of Commerce "had covered the

CAPITAL CHURCHES TO HONOR MOTHERS AT SERVICES TODAY

40 GOLD-STAR WOMEN TO FORM HONOR COURT

Brightwood Methodists to Give Pageant at Evening Exercises.

All roads will lead homeward to mother today as people everywhere join in celebration of Mother's Day.

Around many hearthstones, sons and daughters will gather to do her reverence. Around others, there will be only memories of mothers departed. From the pulpits, ministers of the gospel will eulogize Mary, Mother of Christ, in whom all mothers are exemplified.

One of the outstanding celebrations of the day will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater under the auspices of the American War Mothers and the Congressional Club.

The ceremony will be attended by War Mothers from all over the country, several of whom are mothers of unknown soldiers. Thirty local patriotic and civic organizations will be present in a body.

Speakers at Arlington.

Mrs. Thomas Spence, of Milwaukee, national president of the War Mothers; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, president of the Congressional Club; Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, United States Army, and the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will deliver addresses. The Army and Navy Band will furnish music for the occasion. The mixed choir of the First Congregational Church and Mary Jordan, American operatic contralto, will sing. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will pronounce the benediction.

Following the ceremony wreathes will be placed upon the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. This procession will pass through a court of honor, formed by 40 Gold Star Mothers, holding two long chains of carnations and laurels. Mrs. Edward Pou, wife of Representative Pou, of North Carolina, and Mrs. Anna Shanahan, of Trenton, N. J., both of whom lost sons that were decorated for bravery in the War, will place the floral tribute and emblem of the War Mothers Association.

The Argo Lodge of the B'nai B'rith will observe Mothers' Day this afternoon at the Jewish Community Center. Rabbi William F. Rosenblum will speak on "Mothers in Israel." Delegates from Baltimore, Norfolk, Richmond, Petersburg and Cumberland will attend the meeting. Seventy-five new candidates will be initiated into the order.

Home Fund Appeal.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman has appealed to members of the Episcopalian churches to give toward the Episcopal Church Home fund in observance of Mothers' Day. The pastors of all the churches under the bishop's jurisdiction will read the appeal from the pulpit today.

In nearly every Washington church the theme of the day's sermons will harmonize with the occasion. The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce will speak on "The Mother of Us All" at All Souls' Unitarian Church; the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, will speak on "Portraits of Mother;" "Mother o' Mine" will be the Rev. William A. Lambeth's topic at the morning services at Mount Vernon M. E. Church South. The Rev. John E. Briggs, pastor at the Fifth Baptist Church will speak on "The True Mother."

Members of the Temple Baptist Church will hear the Rev. Thomas E. Boorde talk on "A Praying Mother." "Honoring Mother" will be the subject of the Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor of the Georgetown Lutheran Church. "The Crown of Motherhood" will be the Rev. William E. La Rue's sermon for the morning services at Takoma Park Baptist Church.

Church Plans Pageant.

A Mothers' Day pageant will be held by the societies of Brightwood Methodist Episcopal Church in the evening at 8 o'clock. The Rev. W. M. Michael, pastor, will officiate at the morning service, which will also be in commemoration of Mothers' Day.

Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia, speaking yesterday before the Senate, declared that mother and home had inspired many of the greatest and most sublime achievements of mankind since the beginning of the world.

Mothers' Day was designated as the second Sunday in May by a resolution introduced in the House by the then Representative J. T. Heflin, now senator from Alabama. Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, sponsored the measure in the Senate.

DOCTOR FINDS KEPHART'S INJURIES ARE SERIOUS

Victim of Attack in Kidnaping Has Contusions at Base of His Skull.

WILSON STOPS COMMENT

With the police of both Montgomery County and the District admittedly baffled as to clews in the mysterious kidnaping of E. Percival Wilson, local banker, and the assault on Leonard W. Kephart, Government explorer and agronomist, last Wednesday night, Kephart yesterday called in Dr. Roy D. Adams, of the Wardman Park Hotel, to determine the extent of his injuries.

Contrary to reports that Kephart had suffered only a few scratches on the back of the neck, Dr. Adams found several contusions at the base of Kephart's skull, and reported that his highly nervous state could have been induced by a blow in the solar plexus, such as Kephart stated he received, and that it also could have rendered him unconscious for five hours.

Friends of Kephart are highly indignant at the suggestion that Wilson was taken to Kephart's house Friday in an effort to have him identify the agronomist as his abductor, and yesterday Wilson denied that he was asked to identify Kephart.

"I think it best," Wilson said, in declining to express himself further, "to make no statement at all. I have nothing at all to say."

At Kephart's home in Takoma Park yesterday, it was stated that he is still sore and stiff, but that he expects to return to his office soon. Dr. A. J. Peters, his chief at the Department of Agriculture, explained that Kephart had just recently returned from an exploring trip in Africa for the department, and that while he has reported back for duty in Washington, Dr. Peters does not know when he will be back to his desk.

So far as he knows, Dr. Peters said, Kephart's monetary accounts for the trip have been settled with the Government, and that he is not expected at his office until he has fully recovered from his attack.

With the investigation of the case by the local police apparently at a standstill, Montgomery County authorities are checking over every phase of it as given by Wilson and Kephart, in the hope of uncovering some clew.

Chief of Police Moxley conferred again yesterday morning with State's Attorney Robert Peters, jr., relative to the case, and Police Sergt. Earl H. Burdine again interviewed Kephart.

Police Board Closes E. M. Taylor's Trial

The Police Trial Board yesterday took under advisement the case of Policeman Edward M. Taylor, suspected in a hijacking case, after Joseph McGee, runner for a professional bondsman had testified to a conference between Taylor and three alleged bootleggers, involved in the loss of a load of liquor.

McGee was out of town for several months, during which the case was held in abeyance. When he returned he told of meeting Taylor and the alleged bootleggers in an office on Fifth street. He said that during the conference one of the bootleggers and Taylor were left alone for part of the time.

WASHINGTON HIGH, '86, HAS ITS 42D REUNION

A reunion of the class of 1886 of the old Washington High School was held last night at a dinner at the Raleigh Hotel, attended by 82 graduates, their husbands and wives. Allan Davis, principal of Business High School and president of the class, presided.

The event marked the forty-second reunion of the class, and included a musical program by a male quartet under the leadership of Fulton Lewis, and accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Buell. Bennie Welch, of Philadelphia, who entertained the class at its reunion three years ago in Philadelphia, was one of the honored guests.

The officers of the class are Allan Davis, president; Walter Clephane, vice president; George Francis Williams, secretary-treasurer; Albert Shoemaker, poet; Charles Bates, historian, and Mrs. Katie Roman, chairman of the music and literary committee. Addresses were made by all of the officers, and many of the members of the class.

Burglar Gets $100 in Loot.

Cash and jewelry totaling more than $100 in value was stolen from the home of Paul F. Grove, sr., 1417 Longfellow street northwest when a burglar broke into the house early yesterday morning, he reported to police.

Festival Planned at Methodist Home

The board of managers of the Methodist Home for the Aged will hold a spring festival at the home, Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street northwest, Wednesday from 3 o'clock to 10 o'clock.

Various articles, some of which were made by the aged women, will be on sale at booths. At 8 o'clock a musical program and readings by popular artists of the city will be given under the supervision of Mrs Isaac Birch. Mrs Ivan Riley is general chairman of the festival. The booths will be in charge of the following women: Mrs Archie T Reid, Mrs. Warren Ross, Mrs John Wright, Mrs. G. F. Day, Mrs. Howell Bartle, Mrs. H W Barber, Mrs Richard Wolfe, Miss Jennie Barker, Mrs Leonard Tilden, Miss Mary Tuthill and Mrs Robert Marshall. Mrs Harry Hoskinson, president of the board of managers, will preside at the tea table.

Garden Party Today At Cathedral Close

The annual garden party for the benefit of the House of Mercy will be held the afternoon of May 21 in the Cathedral Close at Mount St. Albans.

Mrs Samuel Lawrence Heap will have charge of arrangements for the occasion. The House of Mercy is located at Klingle road and Rosemont avenue northwest.

POISON AND GAS FAIL IN ATTEMPT ON LIFE

Prompt action on the part of Dr. S. L. Battles, of Sibley Hospital, and Dr. J. Lawrence Murphy, of Casualty, yesterday saved the life of Herbert F Reese, 30-year-old machinist who attempted by poison and gas to end his life in his apartment at the Montgomery, North Capitol and M streets police reported.

The man, it was said, has been despondent since the death of a sister about a week ago, and informed a brother of his intention in a letter entrusted to a niece, Miss Lillian F Rodgers, a telephone operator of the main exchange. After opening the letter yesterday morning the young woman and her uncle hurried to the apartment where Reese was found in a gas-filled room. A bottle containing a poison was found nearby. The note read: "By the time you receive this I will be dead."

He was revived by the two physicians and later taken to Casualty Hospital where he was said to be recovering.

MacNider Is Chosen Belleau Wood Head

Col. Hanford MacNider was elected president of the Belleau Wood Memorial Association at the annual meeting of the general board yesterday. Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, retiring president, was made honorary president for life for her activities as founder of the association.

Other officers elected were: Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, first vice president; Col. Arthur O'Brien, secretary; and John Walsh, counselor. The association was organized by special act of Congress to acquire the 120 acres at Belleau Wood as a permanent memorial to those who participated in the Aisne-Marne sector.

Maj. Hesse Orders Police Inspection

Annual inspection of the personnel and equipment of the police force will be made May 22 to 24, inclusive, under the terms of an order issued yesterday by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, Superintendent of Police.

Precincts Nos. 9 to 14, inclusive, will be inspected May 22, Precincts 1 to 3 and 5 to 7 May 23 and Precincts 4 and 8, the Traffic Bureau, House of Detention and Harbor Precinct on May 24. The order says that the "inspection will include the entire personnel, buildings, records, equipment and property of the department."

New Trial Asked in $10,000 Case.

The District government submitted to Justice Jennings Bailey a motion for a new trial of the case whe ein it was assessed $0,000 damages in favor of Mrs. Margaret Moore, 2721 Adams Mill road northwest, for the death of her daughter, Alice L. Moore, on July 8, 1925. Miss Moore was struck by a street surfacing department truck at Porter street and Connecticut avenue northwest. The principal complaint against this verdict was that it was excessive.

Woman Robbed in Church.

While worshiping in St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Emma O. Anderson, 3005 Twenty-fifth street northeast, was robbed of her pocketbook containing $5, she told police.

LITTLE STARS TAKE HORSE SHOW PRIZES WITH GREAT STYLE

Miss Katrina McCormick Carries Off Davis Cup for Main Event.

JUDGES HAVE SERIOUS TASK PICKING VICTORS

Children's Riding Is So Good, Ties at Times Seem Inevitable; Trophy Winners.

Maneuvering their restive horses with a skill and poise worthy of older riders, a score or so of Washington's youngest set yesterday competed brilliantly for trophies in the horse show for children held at the Preece Riding School, 2602 Massachusetts avenue. A gallery of admiring parents and veteran followers of the turf viewed the exhibition.

Little Katrina McCormick, daughter of Mrs. Medill McCormick, proved the sensation of the day by winning the Davis Silver Cup, awarded in the principal event. Her determined bearing and steady hand brought her successfully through the various classes, with applause ringing from one end to the other of the crowded paddock. The cup was presented by Mrs. Dwight Davis, wife of the Secretary of War.

So excellent was the performance of the young competitors that the three judges of the show—Turner Wiltshire, Dion Kerr and Arthur White—were kept busy figuring out which rating was better than the others.

Often a tie appeared imminent, and then there followed much consultation and shaking of heads before the winner was finally selected. Refreshments were served to the onlookers at the clubhouse on the grounds by members of the Girl Scouts, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the Girl Scout camp fund.

Diplomats on Side Lines.

Many diplomats appeared among those who watched from the side lines, as well as many widely known members of Capital society. In the "family class" a number of parents rode with their children, adding an interesting sidelight on the aptitude of some of the young equestrians to follow their elders through complicated riding figures.

Secretary of War Davis, with his daughter, Helen; Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson with her youngest daughter, Mrs James F. Curtis with her daughter, Pauline; Capt. C. R. P. Rodgers and his little daughter, Virginia; Mrs. Robert L. Bacon and her three daughters were among those accompanying their children and there were many others.

The committee in charge of the show was headed by Mrs. James F. Curtis. Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, was among the trophy donors.

The program ended with a hunt team class, in which there were three local entries and two from out of town. An interesting innovation was the class in which instructors rode with their pupils.

This event was first put on in the New York horse shows and proved such a success that the committee here decided to offer a prize for the best exhibition of its kind by any Washington riding instructor.

List of Awards.

Awards announced at the conclusion of the show, in addition to Miss Katrina McCormick's prize, were as follows:

Class 1, best rider, small children—Newbold Noyes, jr., first prize; Marsyl Stokes, second prize; Martha Bacon, third prize, and Margaret Garrett, fourth prize.

Class 2, best rider, 12 years and under—Louise Myers, first; Marguerite Hagner, second; Ivy Bacon, third, and Kate Meyer, fourth.

Class 5, best rider, 15 years and under: Anne Rollins, first; Marguerita Rowland, second; Helen Davis, third, and Mary Myers, fourth.

Class 6, pair saddle horses, Alida Robinson and Deborah Dows, first; Anne Rollins and Katrina McCormick, second; Virginia Rodgers and Ivy Bacon, third; Virginia Dean and Nellie McCormick, fourth.

Family class: Mrs Medill McCormick and Katrina, first; Secretary Robinson and Alada, second; Mrs. Robert L. Bacon and Virginia, third, and Mrs William Donovan and Patricia, fourth.

Man Would Bind Wife To Separation Pact

William I. Streett, of Philadelphia, Pa., applied to the Equity Court yesterday for a decree of specific performance against Mrs. Edith M. Streett in connection with an agreement whereby, he says, she bound herself to waive all claims for maintenance against him in consideration of the transfer by him of his interest to her in premises 424 Kenyon street northwest. This property is valued at $10,000.

The property was bought by Streett on May 15, 1915, he says. Differences between Streett and his wife arose, he says, and they separated April 1, 1927, at which time negotiations were entered into. The interest of Streett in the property was deeded to Mrs. Streett, it is averred, but she refused to sign an agreement not to demand support from him. She is about to transfer the property to persons unknown to Streett, the latter charges. Attorney C. H. Doherty appeared for Streett.

Driver Stricken in Auto.

While parking his automobile at Center Market yesterday afternoon, H. Morgan Fuller, 28 years old, of 1412 Euclid street northwest, was taken suddenly ill; and was taken to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for a fainting spell. His condition was reported not serious and he was later taken to his home.

Pocket Picked of $26.

William Claybourne, of 318 D street southwest, reported to police that his pocket had been picked. The thief took a pay envelope containing $26.25, while he was boarding a street car at Ninth and F streets northwest, he said.

ANTHONY MEMORIAL SPLIT BY FACTIONS; DISSOLUTION SOUGHT

10 of 15 Incorporators Sign Petition Asking Action to End Foundation.

DREAM OF MEMBERS CALLED NIGHTMARE

Money Collected Never Was Turned In, It Is Said; Now in Debt; Started 2 Years Ago.

After seven months of dissension among its members, ten of the fifteen incorporators of the Susan B. Anthony Foundation have signed a petition, requesting the dissolution of the organization, it was learned yesterday.

The action was taken, according to Mrs. Mary Allen Adams, of 1779 Massachusetts avenue northwest, acting president of the foundation, to prevent soliciting money from the public for the erection of a memorial to Susan B Anthony.

Two years ago, Mrs. Adams said, the memorial was the dream of 200 members of the foundation, but today the dream is a nightmare. The money already collected, she said, has been used to meet expenses of the organization and today the foundation is without funds and in debt. Some of the money collected for the memorial was never turned in, she charged.

To Ask Dissolution.

The ten incorporators who signed the petition for dissolution are Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Edgar C. Snyder, Miss Mate Lewis, Miss Grace Osgood, Mrs. Mary I. Thompson, Mrs. Edmund Brenan, Mrs. John W Frizzell, Miss Mary E. Heyler, Mrs. L. M McKennan and Mrs. Clara O'Brien.

The foundation was incorporated two years ago under the laws of Virginia, and had as its primary object the erection of the memorial. The ten incorporators have retained the services of Andrew Wilson, local attorney, who has requested the Virginia Corporation Commission, by which the foundation was incorporated, to consider the dissolution plea. If the reply of the commission is favorable, he said, he would apply at once for the dissolution order. The commission's decision in the matter, he said, will be final.

Friction Is Alleged.

The five other incorporators are Mrs. Virginia Peters Parkhurst, Miss Marie H Heath, Mrs. Grace Ross Chamberlin, Mrs. Nannette B. Paul and Mrs. Anna B. Hendley. Shortly after the foundation of the organization, it was said, friction arose among its members and last November the president, Mrs Clara O'Brien McCrone, resigned. Mrs. Adams succeeded her as acting president and the membership split into two factions, one headed by Mrs. Adams and the other by Mrs. Hendley. Last week, Mrs. Adams said she received a letter from the opposing faction, declaring that she was no longer acting as president.

Both factions have held regular meetings on the appointed assembly days, the first Tuesday of each month, but the meetings were held at different places. The elections of the organization were to be held late this month, Mrs. Adams said.

3 CHILDREN INJURED IN DAY'S AUTO TOLL

Boy of 14 May Have Fractured Skull; Girl, 4, and Lad, 9, Also Run Down.

Three children were injured, one seriously, when struck by automobiles on the city streets. Linwood Heller, 14 years old, of 17 Todd place northeast, suffered what physicians say may be a fracture of the skull, when he was knocked down by an automobile in front of 48 R street northwest. The car was driven by Richard Lightfoot, of 3017½ Sherman avenue northwest. The boy is at Emergency Hospital.

Struck by an automobile at Water and G streets southwest, Joseph King, 9 years old, of 930 G street northwest, was knocked down and slightly injured. He was treated at Emergency for cuts and bruises about the legs. The automobile was driven by Darius Prather, of 713 Eighth street, according to the police.

While playing in front of her home yesterday afternoon, 4-year-old Irene Hayward, of 1316 S street southeast, was struck by an automobile driven by Harry Seccord, of 1322 T street southeast. She was treated at her home for cuts and bruises.

Ruth to Autograph Baseballs for Army

Balls and bats autographed by Babe Ruth, famous batter, will be awarded as prizes at this year's citizens' military training camps and July 2 and 3, dates on which the New York Yankees are scheduled to play here, Secretary of War Davis will officially receive them from the "home-run king."

In accordance with a custom of several years' standing, balls and bats autographed by Ruth will be offered as prizes to outstanding athletes in each of the 51 camps. Baseballs are to be donated by Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the New York American League Club, and the bats by the Hillerich & Bradsby Co., Louisville, Ky.

Battery and Band to Escort Coolidge

The band and a battery of the Sixth Field Artillery, Fort Hoyle, Md., and a troop from the Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., were designated yesterday by Secretary of War Davis as an escort to President Coolidge when he goes to Gettysburg, Pa., May 30, to make a Memorial Day address on that Civil War battlefield.

Reckless Driving Charged.

Henry J. Baer, 22 years old, of 1763 Euclid street northwest, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving early yesterday morning, after it is alleged that an automobile driven by him crashed into a parked machine at 1323 Seventh street northwest. Baer, suffering from cuts over the right eye and about the head, was treated at Sibley Hospital and later taken to the Second Precinct police station.

$10,000 Asked in Suit.

David F. Landman, 416 H street northeast, was sued yesterday in Circuit Court for $10,000 damages for alleged personal injuries by Harriett Fellows, 1118 Euclid street northwest. Through Attorney C. T. Clayton the plaintiff says that she was struck by the defendant's automobile at Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest, on December 11, 1927.

DIES SUDDENLY

SENORA MARIA CHRISTINA DE BOGRAN.

SENORA DE BOGRAN, ENVOY'S WIFE, DEAD

Expires Suddenly in New Orleans; Minister Goes to Take Body to Honduras.

New Orleans, La., May 12 (A.P.).—Senora Maria Christina de Bogran, wife of the Honduran minister to the United States, died suddenly here this afternoon from heart trouble. The minister was notified of the death of his wife and planned to leave Washington tonight for this city. Senora de Bogran had been passing the winter in New Orleans.

News of the death of Senora Maria Christina de Bogran shocked members of the Washington diplomatic circle last night. Senora de Bogran was thought to have fully recovered from an attack of pleurisy suffered in January.

Passing the winter in New Orleans, Senora de Bogran was to have been joined there Tuesday by her husband, Senor Luis Bogran. The couple had planned to leave immediately for a trip to their native country. The minister had arranged to leave for New Orleans today. Informed by telegraph of his wife's death, Senor Bogran left last night. The body probably will be taken to Honduras for burial.

Senora de Bogran was married in Honduras in 1922 and in 1925 came to this city with her husband.

RITES FOR JOHN E. ROBEY.

Funeral Services to Be Held This Afternoon With Burial at Cedar Hill.

Funeral services for John E. Robey, 73 years old, who died Thursday at his home, 1009 Fifth street southeast, will be conducted at the residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. Harry C. Goodwin will officiate. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Robey, a native of this city, was one of the oldest residents of southeast Washington. He was the son of the late William E. Robey, who for many years conducted a boat house on the Anacostia River. Mr. Robey was a retired employe of the American Express Co.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie Robey; four daughters, Mrs. R. H. Ryan, Mrs. Price Greenlawn, Mrs. John Cligan, and Mrs. A. J. Goddard; two sons, William E. Robey, jr., and Policeman Hugh D. Robey; sixteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

RICHARD S. MENEFEE DEAD.

Retired Employe of Pension Office Will Be Buried Tomorrow Afternoon.

Word was received in Washington yesterday of the death of Richard S. Menefee, 70 years old, for 20 years an employe of the Pension Office here, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ellis Beauchamp, at Portsmouth, Va. Funeral services will be held at Portsmouth today, and the body will be brought to Washington for burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Menefee came to Washington in 1902 from Missouri and entered the Government service. He retired in 1922. He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Beauchamp, Mrs. Edward Valentine and Mrs. Walter Johnson, of Washington.

Police Seek Parents Of Boy and Sisters

Police last night found one "prisoner" whom they could not impress with their authority. He said that his name was Wesley Billy Stivers, 7 years old, of 515 Third street northwest, and that he was looking out for his two sisters, one 3 years old and the other a year and a half, who were taken into custody with him.

The three children were found wandering in the Capitol Grounds yesterday afternoon by an unidentified woman motorist who took them to the Fourth Precinct. She refused to give police her name and departed. Billy steadfastly refused to answer any questions until he was taken to the House of Dentention. There he gave his name and the address. A policeman sent to the address given by Billy said he found the house vacant. Police have received no report of the disappearance of three children answering the description of Billy and his sisters.

OSBORN WANTS POLICE TO HALT SALE OF WIFE

Says Former Gypsy Princess Will Be Sold in Marriage at Providence Today.

WARRANT OUT FOR KING

Convinced that his wife has been sold into a gypsy marriage for the sum of $3,000, and that the wedding feast is to take place today in Providence, R. I., William "Juice" Osborn, young Washington husband of the former Princess Julia of the Mitchell Gypsy Tribe, last night urged local police to have the girl and her father, King Mitchell, taken into custody at Providence.

Despite the fact that he has received several telegrams, ostensibly from his wife, assuring him that she will return to Washington as soon as her sick mother is out of danger, Osborn believes that the gypsy princess is being held against her wishes, or through a play upon her sympathy, and that the telegrams are a ruse to deceive him until after she is sold in marriage.

The local police, after conferring with Osborn last night, wired the Providence police to take King Mitchell into custody as a fugitive from justice, and to hold Princess Julia as a witness. A warrant for the arrest of the Romany king, charging him with abduction, was issued by Assistant United States Attorney Ralph Given last Monday.

"If the police will take them into custody I will go to Providence and bring my wife back to Washington," Osborn told The Post last night. "Julia's father has caused me a lot of trouble and I am nearly 'broke' because of the expense that my marriage has put me to, but I will go to Providence and I know she will gladly come back with me."

Definite information relative to the intended nuptials in Providence today was received from an authoritative source direct from that city, he said, but he would not reveal the source for fear that vengeance might be wrought upon the informer.

Firemen Save Girl And Woman in Blaze

Firemen carried a young woman and a girl to safety and another woman and child made their escape down a fire escape when flames enveloped the stairway of the Bradford Building, 908 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday morning. The fire was discovered shortly after 9 o'clock by Edward Tipton, proprietor of a cigar store on the first floor.

Miss E. Redmond, a beauty parlor operator, in the establishment of Mrs. Ruth Vitale, on the second floor of the building and Florence Harrison, 12 years old, a patient in the office of Dr. A. B. Wilson, dentist, were carried out by firemen. Barbara Harrison, 8 years old and Mrs. Vitale escaped unaided. The flames were confined to the basement and lower stairway and were quickly extinguished. Damage was estimated at $500 by firemen.

District Democrats Elect J. B. Colpoys

John B. Colpoys has been elected chairman of the Democratic central committee of the District of Columbia, to succeed the late William T. Whelan. The meeting of the committee was held in the offices of John F. Costello, Democratic national committeeman for the District of Columbia, 16 Jackson place.

Following the meeting, the Democratic central committee, which is vested with the authority of calling and conducting a primary election for delegates to the Houston convention, announced that the primary will be held on May 26. Further announcements, with complete details for the election and the addresses of the various polling places will be made, Colpoys said, within the next few days.

Wife Files Second Action for Divorce

Mrs. Helene E. Justice, 806 G street northeast, wife of Frank N. Justice, former automobile dealer, 1604 Q street northwest, filed suit against him yesterday in Equity Court for an absolute divorce. A woman codefendant, living at 1616 Sixteenth street northwest, is named in the bill.

Mrs. Justice, who was married November 17, 1917, has a bill for limited divorce pending which she filed in January, 1927. At that time Justice was required to furnish a $2,000 bond to guarantee that he would not flee the jurisdiction. Attorneys T. Morris Wampler and Robert E. Lynch appeared for Mrs. Justice in both bills.

Girls' Arm Broken In Fall From Horse

Falling from her mount while horseback riding in Potomac Park, near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing yesterday afternoon, Miss Virginia Wright, 18 years old, of 1629 Nineteenth street northwest suffered a broken arm.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital in a passing automobile, and after treatment was sent to her home.

Recovers From Ptomaine Poisoning.

Ensign Chester C. Ward, Naval Reserve Force aviator, who was taken to Emergency Hospital Thursday suffering from ptomaine poisoning and later transferred to the Naval Hospital, was released from that institution yesterday afternoon. It was at first erroneously reported that Ward was suffering from the effects of a poison other than ptomaine. Following his release yesterday from the Naval Hospital he went to his home, 1860 Clydesdale street northwest. He is a student at the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University.

The Problem of Preventing Tuberculosis Consists in maintaining and increasing your general resistance and the vitality born in you. Tuberculosis germs do not thrive in a healthy body.

To Maintain Health

1. Avoid house dust and impure or close air, day or night.
2. Get all the light and sunshine possible into your home.
3. Avoid raw milk, raw cream and butter made of unpasteurized cream.
4. Eat plain, nourishing food, more vegetables, less meat.
5. Get enough sleep by retiring early enough.
6. Try to avoid worry. Be cheerful. Think kindly. Your mind acts on your body.

And Get Yourself Examined

on every birthday by a competent physician. In that way you can have imperfections corrected before they undermine your health.

2 FATAL POISONINGS CONFESSED BY MAN; ONE FOR VENGEANCE

Left by First Wife, He Killed Her Sister Nine Years Ago, Prisoner Says.

CONSCIENCE-STRICKEN WHILE IN JAIL AS THIEF

Slew Brother of His Second Spouse for Insurance in Indiana, He Says.

Los Angeles, May 12 (A.P.).—The confessions of James William Huff to the murder of a girl in Indiana, and a youth here were discounted by investigating officials late today as delusions resulting probably from shell shock and five wounds received in the World War.

Huff's confessions were denied in detail by his wife this afternoon, and sheriff's deputies said that Huff made a partial confession a month ago which differed materially from his latest.

During Friday night the 27-year-old man, who is in the county jail serving a short term for petty larceny, confessed because of an asserted stricken conscience that he fatally poisoned 17-year-old Ruth Little at Summitville, Ind., in 1919. He then confessed to poisoning James L. Carroll, his 18-year-old brother-in-law, here three years ago.

The latter crime, Huff declared, was committed with the aid of his wife, Emma Carroll Huff, to obtain $2,500 insurance on Carroll's life which later was found to have lapsed.

Wife Says He Is "Crazy."

Called before the sheriff's deputies today, Mrs. Huff denied the confessed murders in detail and declared that her husband was "crazy" and had been ever since she married him.

The officers said that Huff's confession of March 12 last accused his wife and another man of murdering Carroll with a hypodermic needle injection which forced an "air bubble" to strike the youth's heart.

The investigating officers indicated Huff would be placed under observation to determine his sanity.

Huff, who said he went under the alias of James Hooven while in Indiana, declared in a dictated confession that he slew the girl for vengeance on his first wife and he and his second wife plotted the death of her brother to obtain $2,500 life insurance. He said he attended the funerals of both of his alleged victims.

Conscience-Stricken in Jail.

Becoming conscience-stricken while serving a six months sentence for petty theft, Huff called Jailer Frank Dewar to his cell. Dewar had become suspicious of Huff, he said, because of the latter's inability to sleep. The confession was taken down in shorthand in the presence of several officers.

Huff, who, according to his story, was born in Carlisle, Wyo., in 1900 and was reared at South Bend, Ind., married Blanche Little soon after service overseas in the World War. She left him for another man, he said.

Fed Poison Broth to Sister.

Vowing vengence, Huff said he decided to kill Ruth Little, her sister. While she was ill, he fed her poisoned quail broth.

"They never suspected me," he said. "I attended her funeral and hung around a week before I left town."

Huff married Emma Carroll here in 1923, the confession read. "She told me about the insurance she had on her brother's life, a $2,500 policy. She wanted to know how we could collect it and we planned it out."

Poisoned oats, used for killing squirrels, Huff's story said, was made into broth and fed to Carrol. Death followed soon.

"Accidental or Suicidal."

The coroner's report at the end of an inquest over Carroll's body, left in doubt the question whether death was "accidental or suicidal."

Huff's confession was telegraphed to officers in Indiana for checking and in return police were asked to question him concerning the death in 1920 of his 5-month-old baby. Huff told officers he was in the Indiana reformatory for automobile theft at the time of the baby's death and had been informed by his former wife and her mother that it died "from pneumonia or something like that."

Checked in Indiana.

Anderson, Ind., May 12 (A.P.).—Authorities here today were checking the confession of James Hooven, in jail at Los Angeles, that he was responsible for the death by poisoning of Ruth Little, age 17, in 1919.

Miss Little was his sister-in-law and lived at the home of her parents at Summitville. Hooven and his wife also lived at the Little home.

When John Stephens attended Ruth Little in her fatal illness he diagnosed her ailment as acute indigestion and it was given as the cause of her death.

It is said that a few days after the girl's death Hooven disappeared with an automobile owned by another man and drove to LaFayette, Ind., where he was arrested. He was charged with theft of the automobile and was sentenced to the Indiana reformatory. His wife, formerly Blanche Little, obtained a divorce.

METHODISTS CLEAR BISHOP M'CONNELL; CHARGES EXPUNGED

BROADWAY TABERNACLE GETS $500,000 GIFT

Sum Offered if $1,000,000 Is Raised to Complete Big New York Structure.

Kansas City, May 12 (A.P.).—Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of Pittsburgh, received a unanimous vote of confidence from the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here today when a complaint against him of "maladministration and immorality" was ordered expunged as wholly without foundation.

Several ovations were extended to the bishop following his dramatic floor appeal that the conference take immediate action in order that he might be relieved of the embarrassment in connection with the technical charge of "immorality."

Bishop McConnell strongly protested use by the Rev. George A. Cooke, of Wilmington, Del., of the word "immorality" in charging him with certifying to incomplete reports of the Wilmington annual conference in March, 1927, and in giving approval to the teachings of evolution.

The conference condemned "the utterly false and mischievous use" of the word in question and ordered the whole complaint dismissed on a resolution by E. H. Cherrington, of Westerville, Ohio, and amended by Dr. Harold Paul Sloan, of Haddonfield, N. J.

Today's appeal was Bishop McConnell's first recognition of the charges, filed a week ago, although leading churchmen then strongly protested Mr. Cooke's use of the word "immorality," because of the wrong impression it gave.

Report Is Ordered.

In order that "it can never be charged we have whitewashed a bishop" the conference ordered the episcopacy committee to examine the Cooke complaint and to make a complete report May 15.

Bishop McConnell was the first of four of the church's 37 effective bishops to be cleared of various charges brought against them in the present conference. Bishop Anton Bast, of Copenhagen, now is on trial before an ecclestiastical court on charges of imprudent conduct.

Complaints that they withheld certain information from the church officials in America in connection with Bishop Bast's civil trial in Denmark in 1925 on charges of misuse of charity funds, are on file against Bishops John L. Nuelsen, of Zurich, Switzerland, and Edgar Blake, of Paris.

The Rev. Andrew W. Shamel, of Pasadena, Calif., who brought the complaints, has stated he would push his charges if Bishop Bast is convicted.

Dr. Cooke was scored by inference in Bishop McConnell's appeal when he said, "It may be that I can assume that the apparent lack of concern on the part of the general conference over the complaint indicates that it is not taking these charges more seriously than annual conferences have been taking similar charges issuing from the same source against Methodist officials during the past 25 years, but such assumption does not relieve me of the embarrassing position in which I have been placed."

The bishop asked action so that he could make definite replies to many "sincerely disturbed Methodists" who were writing to him from all over the country.

Delegate to Presbyterians.

Sending of a fraternal delegate to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, at Tulsa, Okla., May 24 to 30, was authorized today, and the delegate was instructed to advise that assemblage of the Methodist conference's indorsement of church unification.

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of Philadelphia, senior bishop, received a large bouquet of roses today from delegates from the Philadelphia area in honor of his seventy-second birthday anniversary tomorrow. Bishop Berry retires at the close of this conference, but said today he would "carry on in the work of God," as the general conference could retire him, but never end his service.

A second complaint has been filed against Bishop Edward Blake, of Copenhagen concerning his connection with the trial and suspension of Bishop Bast. The latest complaint, filed by Dr James A. Bartholomew, of Rhode Island, charged that Bishop Blake suspended the Rev. John P. Ingerslew, Copenhagen pastor, in violation of church discipline. Mr. Ingerslew was suspended after he accused Bishop Bast of misuse of church charity funds and testified against his superior at a trial in a Danish civil court, which found Bast guilty and sentenced him to three months in jail.

Bast Defense Begins.

Church evidence is all in, and defense evidence now is being submitted in the ecclesiatical trial of Anton Bast, Methodist Episcopal bishop of Copenhagen, Denmark, it was announced here tonight. A verdict was expected within a week.

Bishop Bast strives to gain reinstatement from the suspension under which he was placed at a church tribunal meeting at The Hague in 1926. The suspension followed conviction on charges of misuse of charity funds. He served three months in jail.

Counsel for the church expects to conclude its side of the case with an hour and a half argument, it was said. Procedure before the court of 17 ministers is similar to a jury trial in civil court.

$500,000 Gift Announced.

A gift of $500,000 by Ellis Phillips, public utilities magnate, of Long Island, toward completion of the Broadway Tabernacle of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New York City, was announced here late today by Arthur J. Baldwin, railroad attorney, of Newark, N. J.

The money was given by Mr. Phillips on condition that the directors of the tabernacle raise $250,000 by July 1, and that $750,000 addition be raised by December 1. Mr. Baldwin said if these terms were met completion of the structure would be assured.

The tabernacle, he said, had already cost $2,700,000 and an added $2,800,000 would be necessary to finish it.

Formal announcement of Mr. Phillip's gift was to be made at a dinner in his honor here tonight attended by 75 leaders of the quadrennial general conference. Mr. Phillips is president of the Tabernacle organization and his gift is the largest individual contribution thus far.

"I believe this puts the Broadway Temple over," Mr. Baldwin said. "I feel sure we can meet Mr. Phillips' conditions. I have conducted some investigation and have every assurance that the other money will be forthcoming in compliance with his terms." The $500,000 donated by Mr. Phillips, with the additional $1,000,000 to be raised by next December, would make it possible to borrow the remainder of the money needed, Mr. Baldwin believed.

Poker Game of Chance, Is Ruling for All Italy

Rome, May 12 (A.P.).—Poker is a game of chance, Italy's court of cassation, the highest in the land, has ruled, and the Fascist newspapers, which have been conducting strong antigambling campaigns, rejoice editorially.

Little games of penny ante at home or club are not likely to be disturbed at the decision, since it stipulates that the "aim of lucre" must be esablished as the preliminary to any prosecution.

Also "due account must be taken of the age and social and economic condition of the player," in other words, professional poker and playing for high stakes by the working classes is distinctly discouraged.

Two men were arrested for playing poker in a cafe of Novaro. They were gambling, ruled the judge of the lower court. Mere recreation, maintained both defendants, who then appealed to the court of cassation.

EDITOR MUST FIGHT DUEL, JURY OF HONOR DECIDES

Rome Writer's Letter Sent Former Fascist Secretary Held Excessive.

LATTER IN MANY FRAYS

Rome, May 12 (A.P.).—A "jury of honor" decided today that a duel is the only way that Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist party, and Editor Settimelli of the Impero satisfactorily can settle their dispute.

The jury found that the editor had written a letter to Farinacci couched in excessive and unjustified terms and regretted that the dispute between the pair which had hitherto "been maintained within the usual journalistic bounds, could have had such an epilogue."

Consequently the jury decided that the difference should be followed up by the methods "normally imposed by chivalrous custom." Farinacci has named as his seconds Umberto Guglielmotti, secretary of the Rome Fascists, and Mino Mori, while the editor has selected his coworkers, Mario Carli and Mario Dessy.

The fiery Roberto Farinacci has been in one violent dispute after another since aiding the triumphant growth of fascism. In September, 1924, he was reported to have been wounded in a duel by Prince Pignatelli. In the last two years he has received three other challenges, although the duels were later called off. At least two attempts have been made to assassinate him, while his ungovernable tongue finally led him into a clash with his chief, Mussolini, which was promptly followed by his resigning his post in the party.

LAUNDRY EXPLOSION FATAL TO 4 WOMEN

Six Persons Seriously Hurt, 15 Others Scalded When Mangle Blows Up.

Kokomo, Ind., May 12 (A.P.).—Four women were killed, six persons were seriously injured and fifteen others were suffering from shock and bruises as a result of the explosion of a flat work steam mangle in the Fridlin Laundry here this morning. The women were working on the mangle when the blast occurred. The one-story brick laundry building was wrecked and window panes in buildings for two blocks surrounding the laundry were blown out.

The dead are: Anna Black, 21; Emma Black Ford, sister of Anna; Rozella Courtney, 17; Thelma May Garriot, 20.

The mangle was situated in the center of the main room of the laundry where about 25 women and girls were employed. The explosion tore out the front of the building and blew a large hole in the roof of the structure. Many of the workers were scalded by the steam which filled the room.

2 FORD AVIATORS DIE IN CRASH AT AIRPORT

Loaded Freight Plane Spins to Ground After Hop-Off; Dead Pilot Blamed.

Detroit, May 12 (A.P.).—Two pilots of the Ford Motor Co. were killed today when a loaded trimotor transport plane crashed and caught fire soon after taking off from the Ford Airport at 8:45 a. m. The men killed were William Munn and E. K. Parker, both of Detroit.

The pilots were on their first regular run to Buffalo, N. Y., on a freight route.

Edward C. Hamilton, chief of operations of the Ford Air Line Service, said that the accident occurred when Munn, who was at the controls, forced the plane off the ground without sufficient flying speed.

Soon after rising the big airship stalled, slid off on one wing and spun to the ground near the Michigan Central Railroad tracks close to the airport. The plane was wrecked and both men are believed to have died almost instantly.

Munn formerly was a test pilot for the Hess Airplane Co., of Wyandotte, a suburb. Parker formerly resided at Denver, Colo. Both were married and both only recently had become pilots for the Ford Air Line Service.

LIQUOR LAW BLAMED IN SAMOA UPRISINGS

Europeans Sought Change and Stirred Up Natives, It Is Charged.

San Francisco, May 12 (A.P.).—Interference of Europeans in native affairs caused the unrest and uprisings in British Samoa, Gen. Sir George Richardson, governor general of the province under New Zealand mandate, said on his arrival here on the liner Tahiti.

"The troubles on the islands have been misrepresented to the outside world," said Sir George. "There were two reasons for the activities of Europeans. First, there are rather strict prohibition laws in Samoa to keep liquor from getting into the hands of natives, although Europeans are permitted a certain allowance of liquor. Several Europeans wanted the laws repealed or greatly modified with respect to Europeans. When they found this could not be done, they stirred up agitation among the natives.

"The second cause of unrest resulted from the government's efforts to help the natives get better prices for their copra. This angered the merchants, who retaliated by trying to stir up trouble among the natives."

DRIVE FOR TIENTSIN AS STEP TO PEKING IS MADE BY TROOPS

Southern Advance Guards Have Entered Province of Chihli, Is Report.

TSINAN AGAIN CUT OFF, NAVAL OFFICIALS HEAR

Japan, Holding City, Now Will Try to Curb Banditry by Plain-Clothes Guards.

Outstanding events yesterday in China were:

Nationalist forces quit Tsinan region, but resumed drive on Peking, occupying Techow, which had been abandoned by the northerners.

Nationalist leaders are to be called into council Tuesday at Nanking to decide on their future course and discuss untoward events at Tsinan.

More Japanese naval forces arrived at Shanghai.

Peking government was expected to indorse Nationalist's appeal to League.

(Associated Press.)

The Great Northern Telegraph Co advised the Navy Department yesterday that all communication with Tsinan, China, has been interrupted. The message contained no further information.

London, May 12 (A.P.).—Having cleared Tsinan of Nationalist troops, the Japanese consul and commanders in the Tsinan zone have asked the Chinese Chamber of Commerce there to take complete control of the administration of the city, including the telegraphs, telephones, lighting and police service.

Advices received from Tsingtao from Tsinan say that the Japanese propose to control banditry by plainclothes guards at various strategic places. The large shops at Tsinan are still closed, but the smaller ones, as well as the restaurants, are now running as usual.

Southern Troops Advance

Meanwhile the southern forces, skirting the Tsinan zone, are continuing northward and reports from Tientsin say that cavalry regiments attached to the army of Feng Yu-Hsiang, who is now allied with the Nationalists, have occupied Tehchow on the Shantung-Chihli border in continuation of a drive on Peking.

Advices received in Tientsin said that advance guards had penetrated into the province of Chihli itself and that the northern commander of the eastern district had begun a withdrawal to Machang, 35 miles south of Tientsin. Capture of Tientsin by the Nationalists would be of extreme importance, since it would cut Peking off from the sea and would seriously menace the communications of Chang Tso-Lin, the northern dictator, with his native Manchurians.

Following closely on the heels of yesterday's appeal to the League of Nations at Geneva by the nationalists against the Japanese activities in Shantung, it was learned in authoritative sources today that Japanese officials are considering presenting the Shantung affairs themselves before the league. The attitude of these officials is that Japan is only too willing to have the situation investigated, her position being that her stand has been for the good of the Chinese people themselves.

Japanese Deny Mutilation.

Reports received in Peking indicate that Tsai Kung-Shih, Chinese foreign commissioner at Tsinan, who had disappeared, was killed with a party of Chinese soldiers mowed down by machine guns fired by Japanese soldiers who were holding the bureau of foreign affairs during the recent fighting.

The Chinese charge that Tsai Kung-Shih was murdered by the Japanese and his body mutilated, but this the Japanese denied. A Japanese investigation indicated that the foreign commissioner was not in his office when the Japanese took over his bureau and that he was later killed when he attempted with a party of Chinese soldiers, to approach the building.

Latest estimates on the Japanese casualties in the Tsinan fighting show that since May 3 Japanese troops in Shantung had lost 40 men killed and 145 wounded.

Premier Calls on Diplomats.

Tokyo, May 12 (A.P.).—Premier Tanaka believes that any immediate danger at Tsinan and in the vicinity has been removed and he has instructed competent authorities to use diplomatic means to settle the Tsinan affair.

The premier told newspaper men today that he believed the clash at Tsinan was instigated by communists in the Nationalist Army.

He said that Japan had no intention of interfering with the military operations of the southern troops; but because of the possibility of the southern forces pressing on to Peking and Tientsin with fighting in that region in was necessary for the powers to have a full understanding regarding the protection of foreigners.

Seizure of Province Feared.

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Belief that Japan plans eventually to seize and hold the Province of Shantung was expressed by two generals of the Chinese Nationalist army, who sailed for Europe early today on the Majestic.

Generals Hsu Shang-Chi and Chan Han-yu asserted their country was powerless to offer resistance and that Japan without doubt could overrun Shantung if she wished to do so. They expressed the belief that the United States and other countries that signed the nine power treaty should intervene on behalf of the Chinese and said they had little hope in the ability of the League of Nations to settle the controversy.

Bombing of Theater Alarms Seattle Crowd

Seattle, Wash., May 12 (A.P.).—A theater bombing which left as clews only a sheet-iron stage door riddled with scrap-iron slugs and the conflicting stories of a half-dozen witnesses turned into a mystery today to police who were investigating.

The bomb, manufactured with a motion picture film can and dynamite and loaded with rusty scrap iron, exploded in the alley between the Colonial and Capitol Theaters here last night while both showhouses were filled. It was the sixth theater bombing here since the first of the year.

The detonation rocked the business district, alarmed theater visitors and crowds in adjacent streets and caused a near panic in the audience of the Colonial Theater.

SOVIET BARS AMERICAN EXPLORERS FROM SIBERIA

Stoll-McCracken Ship, Seeking Mongol Mummiesfi Must Not Visit Port.

PLEA TO MOSCOW IS VAIN

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 12 (A.P.).—Charles H. Stoll, of New York City, leader of the Stoll-McCracken expedition to the Siberian Arctic, disclosed in an interview today that the Russian government had refused the expedition permission to land on territory under jurisdiction of the Soviet government.

Accompanied by his wife, he is en route to False Pass, Alaska, to join the exploring party. He said that officials in Moscow had notified him before he left New York that the steamer Morrissey, with members of the expedition aboard, would not be allowed to touch at the Soviet port of Kamshatka.

Stoll said he had appealed to Moscow for a reversal of the ruling, through the friendly intervention of Russian importers in New York. The Morrissey sailed several days ago from Prince Rupert, British Columbia, and the present plans are for the party to enter Bering Strait about July 1. The vessel is equipped for an eighteen-month cruise.

He said that a month would be spent in Alaska searching for wild game. The course will then lie through the Aleutian Islands in quest of Mongolian mummies, which, he says, are reputed older than Egyptian.

Yale Undergraduates Barred in Air Races

New Haven, Conn., May 12 (A.P.).—No undergraduates will be permitted to participate in airplane races, it was announced today. This decision will eliminate members of the Yale Aeronautical from participation in altitude races to be held at Hartford next Saturday and in the coming intercollegiate races at Mitchel Field, L. I.

Sheppard to Retire As Conductors' Head

Jacksonville, Fla., May 12 (A.P.).—L. E. Sheppard, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, for nine years president of the Order of Railroad Conductors, now holding its triennial convention here, announced today that he would not be a candidate for reelection.

Ill health, combined with demands for his time by other interests, were given as reasons for his not seeking the position again.

BANDITS IN CARD CLUB SHOOT 2; HOLD UP 70

Doorkeeper Slain, W. Franklin, Noted Billiardist, Shot at Kansas City.

Kansas City, May 12 (A.P.).—After killing a doorkeeper and wounding Walter Franklin, widely known Kansas City billiard player, bandits last night lined up seventy-odd patrons of a men's card club here and escaped with a large amount of cash.

The body of James F. Brown, 50, a doorkeeper, was found at the entrance. He was shot three times. Franklin was struck in the chest by one of about 30 bullets he estimated the bandits fired to intimidate the patrons. Physicians said he would recover.

Franklin said at least four bandits entered the place, known as the Hub Club, and started shooting at the ceiling. When several men dived under tables instead of lining up against a wall as directed, he said the bandits fired into the floor and kicked and beat those who were slow in obeying instructions.

Accounts of how much money was obtained varied, but several witnesses agreed at least $1,000 in bills was taken from one table, in addition to loot taken in a hasty search of patrons.

MAHARAJAH ARRIVES IN PARIS WITH BRIDE

that her observation of Hindu customs does not extend to clothes. She was dressed in a chic Parisian sports costume.

Mrs. William Schoffer, grandmother of the bride, sat in the sun beneath a red canopy chatting with a young Indian woman in a scarlet headdress and at one period of the reporter's visit called away one of the estate's most ferocious dogs—incidentally revealing that his name was no more Oriental than Rip.

The former maharajah and bride plan to stay on the 70-acre estate for several months. They sent down a message saying they did not know whether or not they would go to America and visit the bride's former home in the State of Washington before returning to India, intimating that fear of publicity might prevent the visit. They said they planned to make numerous excursions in France and pass some time in Paris at a hotel after leaving the estate's magnificent eighteenth century chateau.

The former maharajah's estate is one of the most beautiful and valuable in France. The arrival of the party played havoc with the daily life of the shopkeepers at St. Germain, where there had scarcely been such excitement since it used to be visited by kings going to hunt in the nearby forest.

SNOW THREATENING TO BLOCK NOBILE'S AIRSHIP IN ARCTIC

Crews of Base Vessel and of Dirigible Working to Keep Craft Free.

EXPLORER DIRECTING OPERATIONS IN PERSON

Leninland, Goal of Flight That Failed Friday, May Run Near Pole.

Rome, Sunday, May 13 (A.P.).—A violent snow storm is raging at King's Bay, Spitzbergen, says a late wireless dispatch from the base ship Citta di Milan. Crews of both the ship and the dirigible Italia were reported to be working unceasingly to prevent the dirigible from being snowed in.

Gen. Nobile, leader of the expedition, has assumed personal charge of the clearing operations.

Land Little Known.

(Associated Press.)

Northern Land, also known as Leninland, and formerly Nicholas II Land, which Gen. Umberto Nobile plans to explore in the dirigible, Italia, was discovered by a Russian government expedition in 1913. On the map prepared by the explorer, Fridtjof Nansen, it occupies a space on the Siberian shelf unexplored toward the West. It extends from 78 degrees north latitude at its Southern border an unknown distance toward the pole, at least beyond 81 degrees north.

An attempt to explore this little-known country Friday by Gen. Nobile in the Italia was balked by thick fog and a snowstorm and the dirigible was slightly damaged in landing at her base at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, on the return trip.

Little is known of the geology of the island. Nansen, writing in a recent publication of the National Geographic Society, noted that it was built up of glacial drift, probably deposited around a nucleus of bed rock. Most of the polar explorers, including Commander Richard E. Byrd, have visualized the spot as a base for aerial expeditions to discover new land near the pole.

Natives Tell of Birds.

"Among the natives of northern Siberia there are rumors of unknown land in the ocean," Nansen said, "and of passage birds going and coming in a direction where nothing is yet known but sea. These rumors are presumably not groundless and should be verified."

Commander Byrd, also writing for the National Geographic Society, observed that Northern Land was only incompletely surveyed and that "an excellent and quick method of completing our knowledge of this land would be to explore it with a long-distance airplane and a mapping camera."

LINDBERGH REPORTED IN VAST AIR PROJECT

York immediately afterward. His arrival here was coincident with reports that the Curtiss and Wright companies were to merge and that Lindbergh was to have a promenent position in the merged corporation. Wright stock rose perpendicularly yesterday to 196, a net high price level. It had been as low as 69 this year. Curtiss soared to a new top at 145⅞. It had sold as low as 53½ early in the year.

"I am not connected with any commercial company," Lindbergh said today, when questioned about the reports. Beyond that he had nothing to say.

WIDE USE OF AUTOMATIC TRAFFIC SIGNAL IS HIT

Engineering Council Board Finds Confusion and Danger Result.

UNIFORMITY IS FAVORED

Milwaukee, Wis., May 12 (A.P.).—Expansion of public works to provide additional employment during industrial depression has been suggested as a solution of the unemployment problem by the American engineering council.

The administrative board went on record as favoring legislation "to create a prosperity reserve and to stabilize industry and employment by the expansion of public works during periods of unemployment and industrial depression."

A list of qualified engineers, one of whom is to be selected for the position of civilian engineer on the Mississippi River flood control committee, will be selected by the council, it was decided.

Uniform traffic signals throughout the United States were urged as the result of a survey of traffic in more than 100 American cities. Excessive use of the automatic traffic signal, resulting in confusion and danger, was criticized by the board.

Conversion of Muscle Shoals into a fertilizer producing industry as proposed by two bills pending in Congress, was condemned.

Other projects urged in the council's program include Federal appropriations for experiment stations for the United States Bureau of Mines, investigation of erosion of soil and silting rivers throughout the country, and Federal research in reforestation, timber growing, forest economics and related subjects.

There is no present need and will be none in the immediate future for the construction of a Nicaraguan canal, the council voted.

Former Grant Home Is Ordered on Sale

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—The former home of Gen. U. S. Grant, at 3 East Sixty-sixth street, has been ordered sold at auction by the supreme court to satisfy one of the mortgages recently placed on the property. This is the house in which Gen. Grant lived during his last illness, and until he was taken to his death bed at Mount McGregor. In it the general wrote his memoirs.

The house, a four-story brownstone building on a plot 34 by 100 feet, has passed through several ownerships since it was sold by the general's widow in 1893.

Park Given to City; Sunday Ball Banned

Northampton, Mass., May 12 (A.P.).—A gift of $450,000 and a farm valued at about $60,000 to this city by Mr. Fanuile B. Look, of Los Angeles, for the establishment of a park in memory of her late husband, Frank Newhall Look, was announced by Mayor Andre today. Mrs. Look stipulated that no Sunday baseball be permitted in the park.

Mr. Look was president of the Florence Manufacturing Co., now known as the Prophylactic Brush Co., and was a resident of this city. The $450,000 will be spent on development and maintenance of the farm, which will be known as the Frank Newhall Look Memorial Park.

Two Are Flying Here From the Canal Zone

Cristobal, Canal Zone, May 12 (A.P.) Lieuts. James E. Parker and Robert W. Douglas, of France Field, hopped off at 6 o'clock this morning for Washington in two pursuit planes to investigate airway possibilities between the Panama Canal Zone and the United States.

The route they will follow is from the from France Field to David, Panama, 200 miles; to Managua, Nicaragua, 375 miles; to Guatemala City, Guatemala, 350 miles; to Minititlan, Mexico, 450 miles; to Tampico, Mexico, 400 miles; to Brownsville, Tex., 250 miles, and thence to Washington.

Lindbergh Is Progressing In His Study of Navigation

Curtiss Field, N. Y., May 12 (A.P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is making "satisfactory progress" in his study of aerial navigation, Lieut. Comdr. P. V. Weems, who has been tutoring the famous flyer, said today.

Lieut. Comdr. Weems today concluded a special leave from the Navy Department, granted at Col. Lindbergh's request, for the purpose of instructing the famous flier in aerial navigation. The naval officer plans to leave at once for Los Angeles to rejoin his ship, the Cuyama, there.

"Col. Lindbergh was able to reduce his time for finding the line of position during the daytime to three minutes and during the night, when speed is most essential, to one minute," Lieut. Comdr. Weems said.

Plane for Mayor In Frisco Budget

San Francisco, May 12 (A.P.).—Mayor James Rolph, jr., wants the city to furnish him an airplane.

The want was published yesterday in the mayor's budget requests filed with the city finance committee. He said the plane was needed to extend the city's greetings to notables who arrive by air, for police work, and possibly for official trips. The request will be considered when the committee makes up the budget.

Lady Bailey on Return Flight.

Cape Town, Union of South Africa, May 12 (A.P.).—Lady Bailey, noted British woman flier, started on her return flight to England today. Lady Bailey arrived at Cape Town April 30, having completed a solo flight from Croydon, from which she started March 9.

SMITH WILL LEAVE PROHIBITION ALONE, CLOSE FRIENDS SAY

Western Democratic Drys Also Accept Tammany Stand Against Issue.

PLATFORM COMMITTEE BEING HAND-PICKED

Pittman, Urged for Chairman, Holds Dry Question Is Not National.

By THEODORE C. WALLEN.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—On top of Tammany Hall's decision against a wet plank in the Democratic national platform it was learned today on high authority that Gov. Smith, champion of the wet cause, is expected to leave the prohibition question alone in the presidential campaign in the event he heads the Democratic ticket, unless the Republicans force the issue.

At the same time it became known that prominent Democratic dry leaders of the West and South, who, it had been feared, might stir up the prohibition question in the Houston convention, are falling in line with Tammany's proposal to play it down, as freighted with dynamite, in favor of a mere law inforcement plank.

Key Pittman, United States Senator for Nevada, and a veteran drafter of Democratic national platforms, furnished details of the governor with copies of a letter he sent to the Nevada Democratic State convention of Friday, in which he declared prohibition is not a national issue in at least three dry States.

Precedent by Nevada.

At his suggestion the Nevada convention, after instructing its delegation for Gov. Smith, started a precedent by omitting to adopt a State platform, for fear of conflicting with the national platform. Nevada is dry.

"The most important act to be performed at the national convention is the adoption of the platform, because our candidate already has been selected by an acclaim that is almost unanimous. And I am satisfied that he will be nominated by acclamation on the first ballot," said Senator Pittman's letter to the chairman of the State convention.

"The platform is an important matter. The people make issues, not conventions. The overwhelming demand for the nomination of Gov. Smith, and the analysis of his vote, disclose clearly the issues upon which he was selected.

"Arizona is a dry State and yet Arizona went for Gov. Smith. Idaho is a dry State and yet Idaho went for Gov. Smith. Arkansas is a dry State and yet the Arkansas delegation is for Gov. Smith. So it must appear that the prohibition question is not a national issue in those States."

Organizing Platform Body.

To prevent a flare-up over prohibition in the platform committee at Houston, friends of the governor are said to be carefully organizing the committee from the ground up. By their assured control of the convention the Smith forces expect no trouble controlling the platform committee. States that have elected delegates favorable to the governor are being urged to pick their member of the platform committee with care.

"The national platform should be short, and it can be short because only declarations of principles are essential or proper in a platform," Senator Pittman wrote to the Nevada convention, according to Smith people here. He continued, "It, therefore, appears to me that each delegation to the national convention should be most careful in the selection of its member of the platform committee."

It is emphasized by close friends of the governor that he has not the remotest idea of changing from the wet question and may be relied upon to seek a liberalization of the Volstead act if elected President. Following publication of Tammany's attitude the governor was criticized by many who favor his nomination, and he was called upon by Democrats supposed to be friendly to him to make a declaration on the prohibition issue.

While the governor has ignored these demands, his friends maintain as Tammany holds, that prohibition is not an issue, and there is no occasion for the governor to say anything about it, especially in view of his known attitude on the subject. The point also is made that having called upon the Democratic party to meet all issues squarely, specially mentioning prohibition, the governor can not be held responsible for the party convention's failure to do so. Moreover, it is declared, it would scarcely be appropriate for the candidate to go outside the party platform on which he was nominated.

The present plan for sidestepping the prohibition is predicated frankly on Herbert Hoover's nomination in the Republican convention.

Secretary Hoover, it is believed in the Smith camp, would not be disposed to emphasize his characterization of national prohibition as a "noble experiment." Likewise, it is pointed out, the governor will hardly go about the country talking about how thirsty people are, although he will undoubtedly talk on the general principle of States rights.

Urged as Platform Director.

Intimates of Gov. Smith looked with favor today on a suggestion that Senator Pittman be made the directing force in the preparation of the national Democratic platform, if not actually the chairman of the committee. To serve in the latter capacity it would be necessary for him to take the proxy of some delegate, as he stepped aside to give some one else a place on the Nevada delegation.

The senator, who supported William Gibbs McAdoo in the 1924 deadlock, was here recently, exchanging ideas with the key people in the Smith organization. Since then he has been active as a harmonizer, urging fellow Democrats to be unusually careful in their conventions and primaries to avoid stirring up needless strife which might impair the party's national prospects.

Senator Pittman has notified Smith people that "by the united act of the party in Nevada" that State can be carried for Gov. Smith in November.

William Woodburn, chairman of the Nevada delegation, wired Smith campaign headquarters today that the State convetion of Friday was the most enthusiastic in the party's history out there, and wound up:

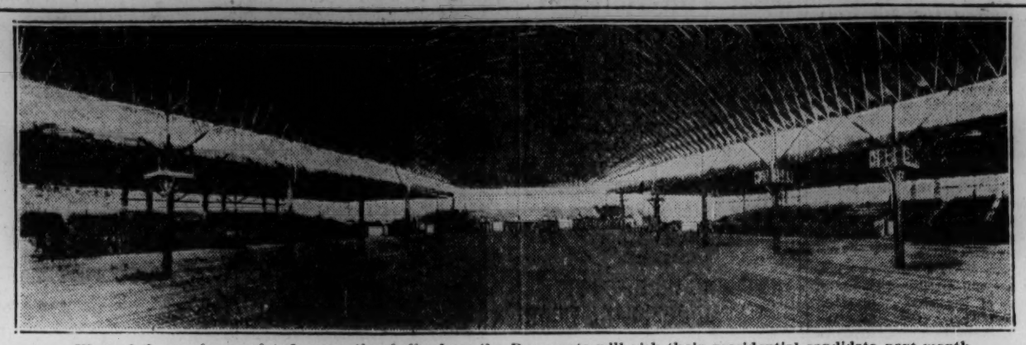

"We are indifferent as to the choice of the Republicans as this State is afire with enthusiasm for the New York Governor and he is certain to carry Nevada in November."

Smith and Hoover Still Ahead In Tabulations of Delegates

(Associated Press.)

Of the 1,089 delegates to the Republican national convention 870 actually have been selected, leaving 219 still to be chosen. A majority, 545, is needed to nominate.

Of the 1,100 Democratic convention delegates, 774 have been designated and 326 remain to be selected. Two-thirds, or 733⅓, is required for nomination.

The total after each candidate's name in the following table represents delegates already selected who are instructed, pledged or claimed for him, and not the number conceded to him by opponents.

In a number of States claims overlap, two or more candidates claiming the same delegates, and the total of their claims in some instances exceeds the size of the entire delegation. The line-up is as follows:

Republicans: Hoover—446, of which 184 are in dispute.

Arizona, 4; Arkansas, 6; California, 29; Colorado, 14; Delaware, 4; Florida, 10; Georgia, 16; Iowa, 2; Kentucky, 29; Louisiana, 12; Maine, 15; Massachusetts, 37; Michigan, 33; Minnesota, 7; Mississippi, 12; Missouri, 10; Nebraska, 7; Nevada, 8; New Hampshire, 11; New Mexico, 7; New York, 47; North Carolina, 10; Ohio, 31; Rhode Island, 12; Tennessee, 19; Utah, 11; Virginia, 15; Washington, 17; Wisconsin, 7; Hawaii, 2; Philippines, 2.

Hoover's claim to the following 184 delegates is disputed by opponents: Arizona, 4; Arkansas, 4; Colorado, 7; Delaware, 4; Florida, 10; Georgia, 15; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 12; Massachusetts, 26; Minnesota, 1; Mississippi, 12; Missouri, 4; Nebraska, 4; Nevada, 3; New Mexico, 6; New York, 20; North Carolina, 5; Tennessee, 13; Utah, 11; Virginia, 15; Wisconsin, 6.

Lowden, 252; of which 68 are in dispute.

Arizona, 9; Arkansas, 7; Colorado, 3; Illinois, 55; Iowa, 27; Minnesota, 21; Missouri, 29; Nebraska, 16; Nevada, 2; New Mexico, 4; North Carolina, 13; North Dakota, 13; Ohio, 20; Oklahoma, 18; South Carolina, 11; Wisconsin, 2; Alaska, 2.

Lowden's claim to the following 68 delegates is disputed by opponents:

Arizona, 4; Arkansas, 2; Colorado, 2; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 4; Nebraska, 4; Nevada, 1; New Mexico, 3; North Carolina, 3; Ohio, 20; Oklahoma, 18; South Carolina, 4; Alaska, 2.

Curtis, 46; of which 22 are in dispute Kansas, 23; Oklahoma, 20; Rhode Island, 1; Alaska, 2.

Curtis' claim to the following delegates is disputed by opponents:

Oklahoma, 20; Alaska, 2.

Norris, 33; of which 16 are in dispute. Nebraska, 16; Wisconsin, 17.

The 16 Nebraska votes are claimed also for Lowden and four of them for Hoover.

Idaho—11.

The following 158 Republican delegates already selected are not claimed at present by any of the candidates: Connecticut, 17; Delaware, 5; Illinois, 6; Massachusetts, 2; Missouri, 4; New York, 43; Pennsylvania, 79; District of Columbia, 2.

The above table does not include the 33 Indiana delegates who will be instructed for Watson and the 19 delegates from Maryland who will be instructed for Hoover as a result of the preferential primary results in those States. They have not yet been selected.

Conflicting claims in Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina revolve largely around contesting delegates.

Democrats:

Smith—553½, of which 79½ are in dispute.

Arizona, 6; California, 26; Connecticut, 14; Delaware, 6; Idaho, 8; Illinois, 57; Iowa, 26; Louisiana, 20; Maine, 12; Massachusetts, 36 Michigan, 30; Minnesota, 24; Nevada, 6; New Hampshire, 8; New York, 90; North Dakota, 10; Ohio, 1; Oklahoma, 20; Pennsylvania, 69½ Rhode Island, 10; Utah, 8; Washington, 14; Wisconsin, 26; Alaska, 6; Hawaii, 6; Philippines, 6; Porto Rico, 6; Virgin Islands, 2.

Smith's claim to the following 79½ delegates is disputed by opponents: Illinois, 11; Louisiana, 20; Oklahoma, 20; Pennsylvania, 19½; Utah, 3; Porto Rico, 6.

Reed, 117, of which 81 are in dispute. Illinois, 12; Kansas, 20; Missouri, 36; Oklahoma, 20; Pennsylvania, 26; Utah, 3.

Reed's claim to all but his 36 instructed Missouri delegates is disputed by opponents.

Pomerene, 47. Ohio, 47.

George, 28. Georgia, 28.

Hull, 24. Tennessee, 24.

Ayres, 20. Claimed also by Reed's managers. Kansas, 20.

Hitchcock, 16. Nebraska, 16.

The 24 delegates from Alabama and the 18 from Arkansas, all uninstructed, are not claimed definitely for any candidate.

LOWDEN MEN CLAIM MARGIN OF 7 VOTES

Report 252 for Illinoisan and Give Hoover 245, With 253 Uncertain.

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Frank O. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois, now leads Herbert Hoover in the number of pledged delegates by the slim margin of 7, according to an announcement issued tonight from the Lowden-for-President headquarters.

The Lowden forces claimed 252 pledged delegates for their chief, predicted Hoover would have 245 delegates and named 253 as "uncertain."

However, 16 delegates pledged from Nebraska, were listed as for "Lowden or Senator Norris," depending on which candidate showed the greatest strength, and 18 Oklahoma delegates for either "Lowden or Senator Curtis."

Curtis, the announcement claimed, had 43 pledges against 33 for Norris and 11 for Senator Borah. President Coolidge was pledged delegates in only one State, Georgia, where the Lowden officials said he would have 15 out of 16 backing him.

The Lowden strength was most evident in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Oklahoma, with Hoover, the report said, being backed strongest by Michigan, Ohio, California and Kentucky.

SMITH NOT NOMINEE, SAYS REED'S BACKER

Really Has but 333 Delegates, to 511 Against Him, Adds E. S. Villmoare.

In the face of figures he says are unbiased, E. S. Villmoare, national treasurer of the Reed-for-President campaign, stated yesterday that there are more delegates pledged or instructed against Gov. Al Smith at the present time than there are for him.

"The wish has become the father of thought with so many of the propagandists who would like to believe that Al Smith is already the nominee," Mr. Villmoare said, "that it has become amusing."

In addition to 124 delegates yet to be chosen and who, Mr. Villmoare is sure, will be against Gov. Smith, the present line-up gives 387 against Smith and 333 for him.

"Adding the 124 delegates to be chosen to 387 already pledged or instructed against Smith makes a total of 511 out of the 1,000 delegates," the Reed campaigner's statement concluded, "and remember it takes 734 votes to be nominated."

LOWDEN TO APPEAR IN CITY TOMORROW ON CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Candidate Will Make His First Statement Before Any Quiz Committee.

$241,274 REPORTED AS HOOVER EXPENSES

McMaster, However, Intimates Final Total Will Be Near $300,000.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Former Gov. Lowden, of Illinois, will appear before the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures tomorrow. It will be his first appearance before such a committee, but not his first experience with one.

A similar committee in 1920 is credited with killing his chances for the Republican presidential nomination. Campaign expenditures totaling $414,987 were disclosed as having been made in his behalf and although this compared exceedingly well with the $1,773,330 expended in behalf of Maj. Gen. Leonard E. Wood, the fact that some of it was charged to have been used illegitimately counted heavily against the former Illinois governor.

Although the governor admittedly knew nothing about the transaction, the payment of some of his money to two East St. Louis delegates was considered the strongest argument against his nomination. His friends say that he learned his lesson and has spent very little, if any, of his own money this time and has not let any one else make large expenditures in his behalf. Since his ill-fated campaign of 1920, he has been offered the vice presidential nomination and ambassadorships, but declined them all and he now returns to the spotlight as a champion of the middle West.

The investigating committee yesterday finished the examination of James W. Good, of the Hoover headquarters here. It also heard Perry K. Heath, treasurer of the Washington committee.

Revising his figures on the basis of more complete information, Mr. Good told the committee that total expenditures that had come within the purview of the Washington committee were $241,274, with no reports from several States, in none of which, however, with the exception of West Virginia, is there a contest. He insisted that the total expenditures would not reach more than $250,000, which he compared with a similar total made in behalf of President Coolidge in 1924.

Members of the committee, especially Senator McMaster, of South Dakota, inclined to hold that the total would come near $300,000. Mr. Good again interspersed his testimony with eulogies of the Secretary.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, questioned him about the $27,000 expenditure in behalf of Mr. Hoover in southern California, where there was no contest. Promising to try to get the expenditure in northern California, Mr. Good said:

Compares Smith Expenditures.

"I assume there has been no contest against Smith in New York, yet his friends raised a great deal of money there."

Expenditures had been necessary in New York, he said, in connection with the Hoover activities within the organization.

The committee asked if Will H. Hays has had any connection with the Hoover campaign.

"Did you consult with Mr. Will Hays?" Barkley inquired.

"I have not seen Mr. Hays since I quit Congress seven years ago," said Good.

"Have you received any word from him as to the conduct of the campaign?"

"None, whatever."

The senator entered into a discussion with Mr. Good as to the propriety of agreements on the part of favorite sons to switch delegates to other candidates. Mr. Good said he knew of the discussions that led up to Mr. Hoover's decision to make a fight in West Virginia after Senator Goff had refused to agree to let the delegates name Mr. Hoover as second choice.

Senator Barkley asked if there is no difference between spending large sums of money in a State and entering into agreements to switch delegates. Mr. Good said that such arrangements might be desirable to prevent party fights and the arousing of "prejudices."

Questioned by Barkley.

Senator Barkley took the witness over his testimony of Friday concerning expenditures made to disprove charges against the Secretary, particularly the charge that he is not a Republican. The senator wanted to know how this charge was met, and Mr. Good replied by showing that Mr. Hoover was a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1920, was Secretary of Commerce under two Republican Presidents, was a supporter of protection and was "born in the rock-ribbed Republican State of Iowa."

The senator asked him if he had seen a letter or statement from Mr. Hoover in 1920, advocating the League of Nations and dissenting to the tariff and if he knew that Julius H. Barnes, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, had come to Washington and dissuaded him from giving the letter out on the ground that he could do better in this country as a Republican.

"I never heard of it," Mr. Good declared, and he told the committee that he would furnish it with pamphlets that had been distributed to prove that Mr. Hoover is a Republican. "They make very good reading," he said.

Russian Charge Denied.

Concerning a report connecting Mr. Hoover with the Russi-Asiatic Corporation, said to have obtained a land concession of 110 square miles from the Russian government, Mr. Good declared:

"Charges of that kind were circulated and disproved."

Senator Barkley wanted to know why Mr. Hoover had not made a contest in Pennsylvania.

"Secretary Mellon lives in Pennsylvania and it would perhaps have been regarded as the height of impropriety to make a campaign there." Nevertheless, he added, "almost 100,000 voters wrote in Mr. Hoover's name in the preference primary in Pennsylvania without any campaign at all."

Mr. Mellon, he added, has been "on the friendliest relations with the Secretary."

Senator McMaster asked Mr. Good if Mr. Hoover had advised American manufacturers not to produce a surplus, but to employ capital to make goods abroad with cheap labor, which would compete in the American market, but Mr. Good said he knew nothing about that.

It was A. F. Dawson, Davenport, Iowa, banker, and former member of Congress, who surveyed the middle West and reported that Mr. Hoover was in no danger of losing it in the election, Mr. Good said. Mr. Good said Mr. Dawson found "public sentiment held Hoover could carry these States by sweeping majorities."

"I know something about that country," he told Senator Barkley, a Democrat. "You folks won't get a look in this fall if Mr. Hoover is nominated."

Mr. Heath, denying that he had any connection with the Department of Commerce, identified himself as assistant to the president of the Goodrich Line of lake steamers. He entered upon his Hoover activities voluntarily, he said, "because of his admiration for Secretary Hoover," having become acquainted with him 10 years ago when he went to the Baltic states for Mr. Hoover's relief organization. He confirmed Mr. Good's financial statement.

widest area and made the greatest progress" of any of those in the field.

Mr. Mellon replied he was not a candidate when he was asked whether he would permit the Pennsylvania delegation to vote for him.

W. S. Vare, Philadelphia leader, elected to the Senate in 1926 and not yet permitted to take his seat, was named on the convention committee on resolutions. Committees acted in a similar capacity four years ago at Cleveland.

Hailed by Hoover Men Here.

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Mellon's words of advice to his fellow Pennsylvanians, setting Herbert Hoover above all other candidates, but counseling against a definite pledge to any one, were hailed by Mr. Hoover's friends last night as a definite promise of victory and were echoed amid eager questionings through the political camps of Mr. Hoover's rivals.

There were almost as many attempts to read between the lines as when President Coolidge issued his "I-do-not-choose" statement last summer in the Black Hills.

The supporters of Hoover saw in Mr. Mellon's assertion that "Mr. Hoover seems to come closest to the standards that we have set for this high office" a complete assurance that Pennsylvania's coveted block of 79 delegates—the second largest in the convention—would drop into the Hoover bag at Kansas City.

They did not hesitate to add that this removed all doubt of the result. Already the Hoover managers are claiming upward of 500 delegates already selected or definitely assured, although these claims are hotly contradicted at many points by the opposition. It takes 545 to nominate.

Help Seen by Norris and Borah.

Those who have held away from Mr. Hoover were slow to comment, but some of them, including Senators Norris and Borah, predicted that what Mr Mellon had said would go a long way toward nominating the Commerce Secretary at Kansas City.

Just returned from a triumph over Hoover in the Indiana primary, Senator Watson at first declined to talk for publication, but later declared that "Putting the various parts of the entire statement together, I construe it to be in effect an indorsement of President Coolidge by Secretary Mellon and literally a request for his renomination."

There also was a disposition among the Secretary's opponents to linger over the final portion of Mr Mellon's speech to the Pennsylvania delegation, in which he introduced an "however," and recommended that until the delegates reached the convention city they should hold themselves "unpledged and uncommitted."

Mellon a Major Question Mark.

For weeks both friend and opponent of the Hoover aspirations have conceded that Mellon held a key which might unlock a very difficult door at Kansas City. The common talk has been that he not only would be in a position to swing the votes of the Pennsylvania delegation almost to a man, but that the influence of any dicision he might make would be felt far beyond the borders of his own State. He has been one of the major question marks in all Republican calculations. Months ago he expressed a very favorable opinion of Charles E. Hughes. When Hughes refused to be a candidate, Mellon said nothing. He has maintained this silence until today.

Meantime, Washington has heard many rumors and many inside stories of his intentions. One said that Mellon still hoped for an irresistible groundswell for Coolidge. Another represented him as undiscouraged over the prospect of nominating Hughes. One report heard often about the Capital put down the Treasury head as definitely opposed to Hoover, and as favorable at heart to Vice President Dawes, whose personal friend he has been for years. Still another oft-repeated suggestion has contemplated that at the proper moment, and in the proper way, he would come out for Hoover.

The manifest feeling among the Hoover supporters last night was that the last-named of these stories had come true yesterday in Philadelphia. Senator George Moses, of New Hampshire, epitomized this sentiment by saying "Secretary Mellon has said the right thing at the right time." The Hoover manager, former Representative Good, of Iowa, said that Mellon's statement "makes sure Mr. Hoover's nomination," and added that "we are entirely satisfied with the attitude of Mr. Mellon."

Hoover Makes No Comment.

Secretary Hoover himself had no comment to make.

In the senatorial group of candidates for the Presidency those who refused to comment on the news from Philadelphia were Senator Curtis, of Kansas, and Senator Goff, of West Virginia, as did Vice President Dawes.

"The significant feature of the Mellon statement," said Senator Watson, when he finally did comment, "is that he does not directly indorse the candidacy of Secretary Hoover. Doubtless if Secretary Mellon were unreservedly for Herbert Hoover's nomination, he would have said so in unequivocal terms and would have insisted upon an indorsement of him by the delegation. The important feature of the entire transaction is that Secretary Hoover sought the indorsement of the Pennsylvania delegation, but did not get it."

Senator Borah, of Idaho, whose State has decided to vote for him at Kansas City, said that "if Mr. Mellon meant it, it means Hoover's nomination."

"That is to say," he added, "if Pennsylvania is added to what Hoover at present has it would seem to insure his nomination."

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who likewise has some delegate support in the West, said that the Treasury Secretary's words "seem to indicate that he is for Secretary Hoover."

"That will go a long way to nominate Hoover," said Norris. "Probably it will do that."

Hoover Men See Big Week.

Their confidence noticeably increased by the turn of events yesterday in Philadelphia, Hoover's managers predicted that the coming week would add around 100 votes to their candidate's delegate total.

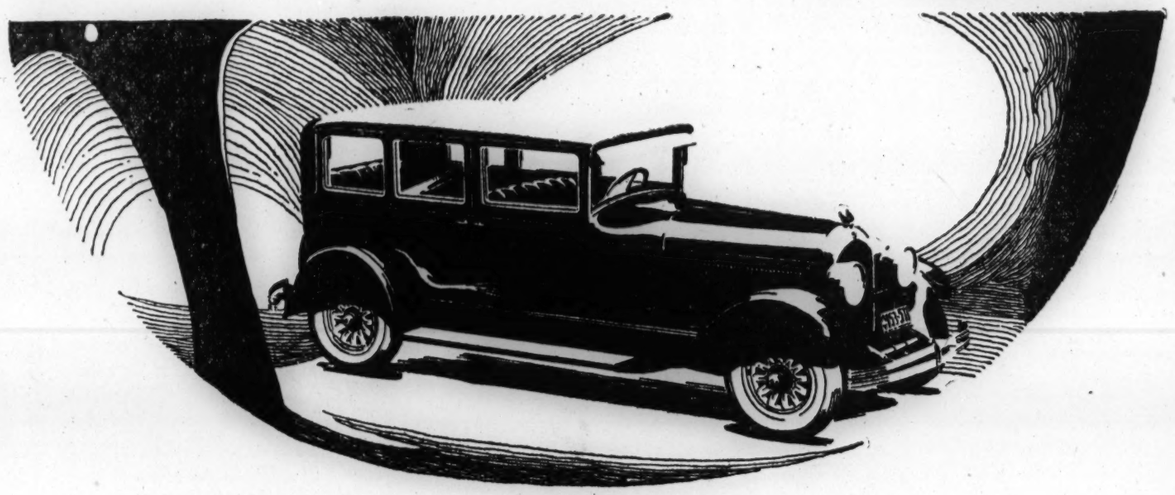

In a statement last night, Good counted Maryland's nineteen delegates "in the bag," as a result of the recent preference primary vote, and raised his previous claim of seven Nebraska delegates to nine. This gave Hoover a total of 467 with his claim of 186 of them challenged by opponents.

Looking ahead, Good and his coworkers counted on landing 31 more in New Jersey's primary Tuesday, where he is the only candidate with a complete delegate slate, and 13 Friday in Oregon, where he alone is entered in the primary. They also counted on getting most, if not all, of Wyoming's nine delegates, Montana's 11, Alabama's 15 and Vermont's 11 delegates, all to be selected at conventions this week.

Some of their calculations, however, were sharply challenged by the opposition, which has been contending that the Hoover claims all along have been too sweeping.

Not an inch have they gained on "72"

NEW performance values came into existence when the first Chrysler was created four years ago. . . . The industry since has gone over en masse to the effort to pattern after them. But the remarkable thing is that Chrysler "72" is just as much alone today as when it was the one and only exponent of its type. ¶ Alone in a theoretical sense only? Emphatically no. Alone in an actual sense—the performance sense which singles it out and sets it apart in competition of the street and road and hill as much as its brilliant beauty sets it apart in the eye of the onlooker. These things could not be said if they were not true—and especially if the truth were not quickly provable. ¶ Chrysler "72" actually begs for tests and comparisons—it is eager to be checked not only on one, but on all phases of performance, with its most ambitious emulators. . . . It has not only not yielded a fraction of an inch of its leadership of four years ago—it has widened the gap and lengthened the distance. ¶ Chrysler "72" is indeed Illustrious because it is beyond doubt the one great engineering, performance and beauty value in the motor-car market today.

FARM AND SHIP BILLS WHIPPED INTO FORM FOR CONGRESS VOTES

Compromise May Be Approved and Sent to Coolidge, Possibly Wednesday.

ANOTHER VETO LOOMS FOR EQUALIZATION FEE

Merchant Marine Measure Expected to Be Acceptable at White House.

(Associated Press).

Two more outstanding pieces of legislation troubling Congress this session—farm relief and merchant marine development—were whipped into final form yesterday, ready to be sent to President Coolidge as soon as the Senate and House approve compromises reached on their differences on these bills.

Both measures are regarded as more or less in conflict with the administration program, although modifications finally made in the Senate Government ownership shipping bill are believed to make it acceptable at the White House. Little hope is held, however, for presidential approval of the McNary-Haugen farm bill.

Agreements announced yesterday by the Senate and House conferees on the two measures showed virtually unanimous approval of the bills as finally worked out in conference. House approval is required first on both bills, and this will be sought probably tomorrow.

The Senate then must act and no contest is looked for there on either proposition. Leaders are confident the two pieces of legislation can be put in the President's hands by Wednesday.

Coolidge Studying Flood Bill.

Meanwhile, Mr. Coolidge is studying the first and probably the most comprehensive legislative product of the session—the flood control bill, which he expects to sign.

Conferees of the Senate and House on the Jones-White bill for development of the merchant marine, agreed to almost all revisions by the House, which went further than the Senate and made provision for encouragement of a privately owned merchant marine.

The House provision that sale of Government ships could be made by the Shipping Board hereafter upon votes of five of the seven members was accepted in lieu of the Senate language requiring unanimous consent of the board.

The Senate language was distasteful to President Coolidge, who has urged disposition of the fleet into private hands in the interest of economy, and who believed that unanimous consent of the board for sales meant virtually permanent Government ownership and operation.

Liberal Contracts Approved.

Approval was given the conferees to House provisions for liberalization of the mail contracts on ocean vessels, for increasing the ship construction loan fund from $125,000,000 to $250,000,000 and for allowing loans to private builders up to three-fourths of the cost of ships in place of the two-thirds limitation now in effect.

The measure calls for a replacement program of Shipping Board vessels which it is estimated will eventually cost $250,000,000 and this provision is one of the primary purposes of the act.

There was little serious controversy between the Senate and House on farm relief. The bills of Senator McNary (Republican), Oregon, and Representative Haugen (Republican), Iowa, were in agreement on the equalization fee, providing that it should be imposed to raise funds when necessary for marketing of surplus crops.

Second Farm Veto Looms.

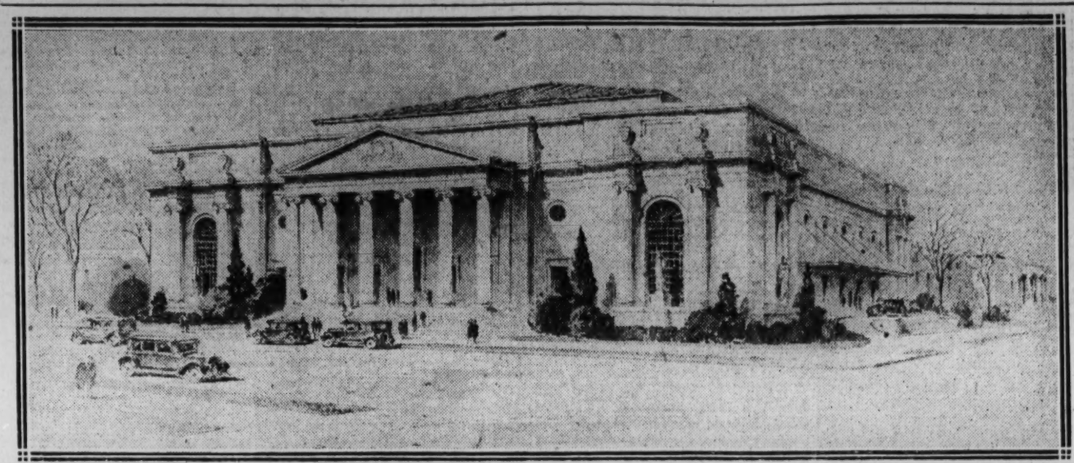

That is what President Coolidge regards as unconstitutional and it seems destined to draw another veto for the bill.

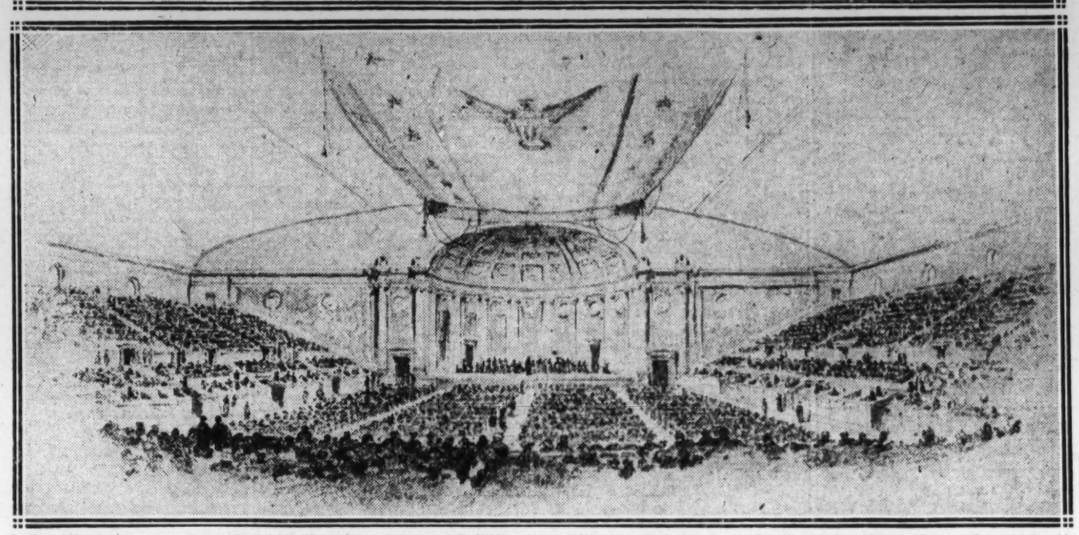

The conference accepted the Senate provision for exemption of fruits and fresh vegetables from terms of the equalization fee. These, however, are the only commodities exempted from the fee.

House provisions for selection of the advisory councils which would have veto power over imposition of the equalization fee by the farm board on their commodities were accepted.

Members of the councils for each commodity would be chosen, under this provision, by the farm board from lists of nominations compiled by the cooperative marketing associations representing the commodity, and by the governors of States and secretaries of the State agriculture commissions.

PHELAN IS PROPOSED TO RUN WITH SMITH

California Chairman Says Former Senator Would Swing That State.

San Francisco, May 13 (A.P.).—S. H McPike, chairman of the Democratic State central committee, announced here today he would propose the name of James D. Phelan, former United States senator from California, as vice presidential nominee at the Houston convention.

McPike said the Phelan strength as a vote-getter in the recent presidential primary in this State convinced him the former senator would make the best possible running mate for Gov Alfred Smith of New York, and that it would have the added advantage of giving the far West representation.

Phelan heads the Democratic delegation from California, which is pledged to Smith. He said he thought the nomination of Phelan would put California in the Democratic column at the November election. Like the New York Governor, Mr. Phelan is a Catholic.

Reapportionment Bill To Have Right of Way

(Associated Press.)

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the House Republican leader, said yesterday that the Republican steering committee, of which he is chairman, had agreed unanimously to urge that the House rules committee give the Fenn reapportionment bill the legislative right of way at this session. The steering group is an unofficial committee composed of Republican leaders.

The Fenn measure proposes a reapportionment of the 435 House members upon the basis of the forthcoming 1930 census. It is opposed by some States that would lose representation as a result of the realignment of members according to the change in population since the 1910 census. The rules committee probably will act upon this question the first of the week, and should the measure be accorded preferred legislative status it is expected it will be called up on the floor late in the week.

HOUSE PASSES ROAD BILL WIDENING LAW

Grants Greater Discretion in Application of Federal Aid to Highways.

(Associated Press.)

The House passed an amended Senate bill yesterday to give broader discretion in the use of Federal aid highway funds to States having more than 5 per cent of their total area in unappropriated public lands and nontaxable Indian lands. The measure goes back to the Senate for concurrence in the changes. Under the measure the States would be permitted to apply Federal funds, up to and including the whole cost of projects on the primary system of Federal aid highways or roads on the secondary system needed to make the proper connections with the primary system in an adjoining State.

It carries a provision that the State funds released from the project must be applied toward the construction of other projects on the system under the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The bill does not carry any additional appropriations for the States. Another section of the measure would permit the States to compute 7 per cent of the total road mileage on which Federal aid may be applied without counting the mileage through public lands and forest reserves that form a necessary part of the connected system of Federal aid highways. This provision, it was estimated, would not add more than 60 miles in any State.

Hearing in Stewart Case Is Postponed

(Associated Press.)

Inability of Justice Frederick L. Siddons to hear the plea of Robert W Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, to dismiss an indictment charging him with refusing to answer questions asked by the Senate Teapot Dome committee, yesterday caused the hearing to be postponed until Tuesday.

Stewart has answered the questions since being indicted, and his counsel argued the indictment was now barred.

Chain-Store Inquiry Demanded by Senate

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday adopted the Brookhart resolution directing the Federal Trade Commission to inquire into the chain store system of merchandizing. The investigation is to cover "the chain store system of marketing and distribution as conducted by manufacturing, wholesaling, retailing or other types of chain stores."

The Federal Trade Commission is instructed to report to the Senate its findings concerning the possible extent to which such consolidations have been effected in violation of the anti-trust laws, their possible susceptibility to regulation by present laws and "what legislation, if any, should be enacted for the purpose of regulating and controlling chain-store distribution."

RAILROADS START RATE CUTTING WAR IN SOFT COAL ROW

Baltimore and Ohio and Other Big Systems Make Cuts on Lake Cargoes.

SOUTHERN LINES LIKELY TO MEET CHALLENGE

Direct Action Creates Situation Unequaled in Twenty-five Years.

(Associated Press).

The protracted controversy over lake cargo coal rates, which has been so bitterly fought out this year in the political field as well as before the courts and the Interstate Commerce Commission, yesterday apparently reached the stage of a rate war between groups of northern and southern railroads.

When the New York Central announced in New York yesterday its determination, in association with the Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wheeling & Lake Erie system, to grant a rate reduction on lake cargo coal from Pennsylvania, Ohio and northern West Virginia, a state of direct action by railroads in rate matters was reached which has scarcely ever been equalled in the last 25 years.

The contest over lake cargo rates was initiated nearly two years ago. Pennsylvania and Ohio producers who supply coal for trans-shipment by boat over the Great Lakes complained to the Interstate Commerce Commission that they had almost completely lost that business.

They argued that competing mines in West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia were able to produce coal and, even though much further distant from the Great Lakes, could under the rate schedules lay down coal more cheaply at the docks.

In a reconsidered and divided opinion, the commission finally held their plea justified and cut the lake cargo rates from Ohio and Pennsylvania 20 cents per ton and the rates from northern West Virginia 10 cents per ton.

Esch Battle Recalled.

In the course of the discussion before the commission, the appointment of Commissioner J. J. Esch expired, and a bitter political fight in the Senate resulted in a refusal to confirm his reappointment because he voted to disallow a voluntary reduction by the southern roads.

Although the commission ruled that the Southern railroads should maintain the existing rates of lake cargo from West Virginia and other Southern territories, the producers and the railroads there promptly sought to meet the reduction obtained for Northern coal by a rate cut from Southern territory.

This attempt by the Southern industry to restore the old status of lake cargo rates met the disapproval of the commission, but when an appeal to the courts was taken by the Southern interests, the commission's ruling was upset.

The District Court allowed the Southern lake cargo rate reduction to become effective April 20, though a further appeal to the Supreme Court was undertaken by the Government.

Were Waiting on Court.

With this tangle facing it, the commission this week refused to intervene in lake cargo rate making again until the Supreme Court had clearly defined its power in the matter.

Notwithstanding, the Northern railroads, unwilling to face the loss of traffic, took the first steps yesterday toward again cutting their rates to a new low level 40 cent per ton below the schedules effective a year ago, and 20 cents per ton below those now prevailing.

The probable results of the policy are not yet fully apparent for Southern railroads are understood to be considering further cuts for that territory and the situation may not be stabilized for some months.

Nicaraguan Report By McCoy Tomorrow

A comprehensive report on the Nicaraguan situation will be rendered to Secretary of State Kellogg tomorrow by Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, upon his arrival in Washington, it was learned at the State Department yesterday. Gen. McCoy was designated by President Coolidge to supervise the forthcoming presidential elections in Nicaragua.

Gen. McCoy reached New York Friday, and is expected to come to the Capital this week. It is understood that Secretary Kellogg desires to obtain a first-hand report on the Nicaraguan situation, although conditions are believed to be proceeding satisfactorily. The next two months are expected to be quiet ones in Nicaragua so Gen. McCoy's presence there is not essential. He will return in ample time to prepare for the registration of voters in September.

$500,000 Deficiency Appropriation Asked

(Associated Press.)

President Coolidge yesterday transmitted to Congress requests for supplemental and deficiency appropriations totaling approximately $500,000, of which $200,000 would be for the maintenance of Federal prisoners.

Other items included $134,000 to meet expenses of the Federal Radio Commission and $7,592.55 to pay a claim of the San Diego, Calif., Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. for "unregistered electric energy" furnished the naval station there from June, 1923, to April, 1926.

THE CRIMINAL'S MOTHER.

By MARGARET WILCOX.

His steps have strayed far from the paths of right.
He stands alone, outlawed, accursed, banned.
But she remembers tender baby feet
Held warmly in the hollow of her hand

His hands are stained with crime unthinkable.
She blames the evil powers that him possessed,
Recalling rosy fingers that once lay
So soft and flower-like against her breast.

His head is bowed before the world's reproach.
She would have given her life to keep from harm
The downy little head that used to rest
So sweetly in the cradle of her arm.

His soul is sunk in darkness, but her love
And prayers are his, for in her heart there lies
A memory of the Heaven revealed to her
When first she looked into her baby's eyes.

MEMORIAL PROPOSED TO PANAMA BUILDERS

Thatcher Bill, in House, Would Authorize $2,500,000 Structure in Canal Zone.

(Associated Press.)

A proposal to erect at a suitable site in the Panama Canal Zone a memorial to commemorate the work of the persons and agencies that aided in bringing about the construction of the canal was made yesterday in a bill by Representative Thatcher (Republican), Kentucky.

The measure would create a commission of seven to which would be submitted designs for a memorial in the form of a building with an auditorium at which might be held meetings of a patriotic, civic or international character. "Including Pan American congresses." The structure "may be appropriately adorned and embellished with statues, sculptures, tablets, carvings, paintings, drawings and frescoes of commemorative character, and with descriptions of events incident to the history of the Panama Canal, including the French as well as the American period, and of the Panama Railroad and the Isthmian regions."

The United States or the Panama Railroad would furnish a site for the structure. The commission would recommend to the President a design for the memorial, the cost of which would not exceed $2,500,000, and upon approval of the plan by the President and Congress, appropriations might be made for it. The measure would authorize the apropriation of the sum necessary to build the structure, in addition to $250,000 for the expenses of the commission.

AUDITOR TO DECLARE WHO OWNS RADIO SET

George Francis Williams, auditor of the District Supreme Court, was directed yesterday by Justice Hitz to determine the ownership of a radio set which appears to be the object of a dispute between Wallace L. Souders, a fireman attached to Engine Company No. 22, and his wife, Mrs. Sallie M. Souders, 612 Lamont street northwest. The auditor was also directed to determine what shall be done with a bedroom suite used by the Souders family before Mrs. Souders filed a suit for maintenance.

In connection with the bedroom suite Mrs. Souders complained that her husband was behind in his payments to the furniture company and that if he continues to lag in them she and their son may not have a bed to sleep in. Souders replied to this statement by declaring that his wife wanted to sleep in a $284 bed while he did not even have a $2 bed for himself.

Souders set up a plea that the alimony payments of $60 a month be reduced in order that he could remain with the fire department, as his creditors were pushing him to the extent that his job was threatened unless he made payments. Justice Hitz reduced the payments to $50 a month. Attorney Albert D. Esher appeared for Mrs. Souders and Attorney Harry Friedman appeared for the fireman.

GARNER FAVORS SOME HIGHER TARIFF DUTIES

Democratic Leader Would Revise Upward Certain Farm Commodities.

(Associated Press.)

Representative Garner, of Texas, one of the Democratic spokesmen in Congress on tariff and revenue legislation, said yesterday that he was in sympathy with the appeal by a group of farm cooperative leaders for an upward revision of the tariff on a number of foreign products competing with American farm commodities.

The farm group yesterday addressed a letter to each member of Congress urging such action, and Garner, in a statement, said that the "record shows that there are a number of agricultural articles on which the tariff should be increased."

"The record also shows with equal force that the tariff levies on a number of manufactured articles should be reduced," he added. "Both the high tariff and low tariff groups agree that the present schedule should be adjusted to fit present conditions. It was over the emphatic protest of all the Democrats on the House ways and means committee that the Republican majority on that committee decided against tariff revision at this session." Garner is the Democratic leader on this committee where all tariff legislation must originate.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Pittsburgh, Pa., which was assessed a total of $34,000 damages in Circuit Court in favor of Andrew J. Morris and his wife, Mrs. Grace Morris, of Avenue Postoffice, Md., for personal injuries to Mrs. Morris, submitted a motion for a new trial yesterday to Justice Wendell P. Stafford. Mrs. Morris was burned April 24, 1925, when a can of gasoline she was carrying came into contact with an uninsulated feed wire from the dynamo of a Westinghouse electric light plant at the Morris store, and exploded. The principal complaint lodged against the verdicts was that they are excessive.

7 CONFERENCES PLANNED AT MASSANETTA CAMP

Presbyterian Encampment to Last From July 2 to August 26.

MUSIC SCHOOL IS SLATED

Seven conferences will be held at the Massanetta Springs summer Bible conference encampment from July 2 to August 26, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church. The camp is 4 miles east of Harrisonburg, Va.

The woman's synodical will be held from July 24 to 26 under the direction of Mrs. C. R. Vaughan, synodical president.

The Woman's School of Missions under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Synod of Virginia, will be held from July 26 to August 2. A school of music will function from July 29 to August 5, under the direction of the faculty of the Westminster Choir School, of which Dr. John Finley Williamson is the director. A leadership training school will be held under the auspices of the committe on religious education of the Synod of Virginia, August 6 to 12.

Dr. J. E. Purcell will be leader in the men's conference August 8 to 12, which will be held simultaneously with the leadership training school. A Bible conference August 13 to 26 will conclude the list of conferences.

People's Lobby Forms Platform at Meeting

A platform opposing this country's interference in the internal affairs of other lands without the sanction of Congress, and solicitation of the cooperation of neighboring nations, was drawn up yesterday by representatives of peace, civic, women's, farm and labor organizations attending the People's lobby at the Raleigh Hotel. The platform will be submitted to political conventions of the major parties.

Prof. John Dewey, of Princeton University, president of the lobby, discussed the moral aspects of international relations at the morning session, and addresses followed by Dr. Albert H. Putney, dean of the School of Political Science of American University; Robert W. Dunn, author of "American Foreign Investment," and Arthur Warner, associate editor of The Nation.

HEFLIN ASKS FURTHER SMITH INVESTIGATION

Likens New York Governor's Campaign to Namesake's Case in Illinois.

(Associated Press.)

The campaign of Gov. Smith, of New York, for the Democratic presidential nomination, was characterized yesterday by Senator Heflin (Democrat), Alabama, as "another Frank Smith case."

"The governor has appointed his public utilities commissioner, Van Namee as his campaign manager," Heflin said, "and, according to his testimony before the Senate committee, he doesn't know a thing about his campaign. Mr. Kenney, a contractor, who gets his contracts from Van Namee, gave $20,000 to the Smith campaign fund and loaned another $50,000."

Heflin called on the committee to "go to the bottom" of the Smith campaign, just as a committee investigated the case of Frank Smith, of Illinois, who was refused a seat by the Senate.

Heflin also called on the committee to ask Secretary Hoover why he sent $27,000 into California when he had no opposition in that State.

'UNDER WITCH'S TREE' DELIGHTS 500 GUESTS

75 Girls Take Part in East Washington Community Production.

Seventy-five girls, by dancing, singing and reciting, last night told the story, "Under the Witch's Tree," of how a fairy queen was cured of melancholia through the loving efforts of nymphs, elves and gnomes, to an audience of more than 500 persons in the Eastern High School auditorium, as the final social event of the season of the East Washington Community Center.

Mrs. L. W. Hardy and Mrs. Ella Scott were hostesses. The production was staged by Miss Judy Lyeth, assisted by Charles H. Hoge, Harold Snyder, J. J. Kirby, E. J. McQueeny and Dale Snell. The leading parts were enacted by Ruth Critchfield, Margaret Crovo, Elsie Thompson and Grace Dygert.

Others in the cast included Margaret Thompson, Lorraine Hayes, Myra Horn, Effie Gordon, Sydney Aldrich, Ruth McCoy, Alice Erisman, Edith Absher, Sara Wasserman, Nancy Fisher, Thelma Absher, Mary Werner, Marie Castoguay, Catherine Moore, Mary Hayes, Pearl Vossliman, Ruth Richardson, Irene Vossliman, Melva Miskell, Marjorie Butler, Iola Critchfield, Margaret Burnett, Anne Percival, Virginia Unklesbee, Margaret Crim, J. NORBECK WARNS BANKS ON LOANS TO BROKERS

Speculative Situation Growing More Dangerous, Report on Resolution Says.

(Associated Press.)

Submitting a report yesterday on the LaFollette resolution approved by the Senate Banking Committee asking the Federal Reserve Board to admonish member banks to restrict the amount of brokers loans, Chairman Norbeck of the committee warned Wall Street that "the situation is and continues to grow more dangerous."

In his report, Senator Norbeck called attention to the fact that the brokers' loans have increased from $3,788,685,000 in January to $4,361,108,000 on May 9, a new high record. He said it was obvious that the loans from New York member banks of the Federal Reserve System were for speculative purposes. "Congress and the country," the report said, "are looking to the Federal Reserve Board for leadership in matters of banking and financing, in order that we may not have the unnecessary repetition of disasters.

"Whatever goes up must come down, and the history of the booms is that the higher they go the more suddenly they break. It is no defense of the 'Street' to say that the risks are widespread. That is only another way of saying that the losses will not fall so heavily on the centers, but will be borne by the whole country. This is not surprising. The speculative buyers are not the experienced class; they are the lambs.

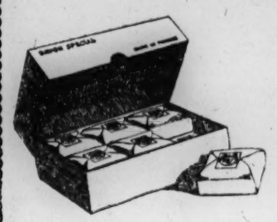

"The higher the market goes the more widespread the condition. We can find small consolation in the fact that the losses will be borne by those least able to bear it, scattered over every State in the Union."

The resolution was introduced by Senator LaFollette (Republican), of Wisconsin, and comes before the Senate somewhat modified. It asks the board not only to admonish its banks to cut down on the loans, but to recommend legislation. Senator Norbeck said in his report that the resolution is "extremely conservative, only aiming at preventing a further aggravation of the present dangerous system."

ONE-PARTY REGIME BILL BECOMES ITALIAN LAW

Universal Suffrage Is Fiction, Mussolini Tells Senate; Vote Is 161 to 45.

TO ABOLISH OPPOSITION

Rome, May 12 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini today won the support of the Italian Senate for the new electoral law making Italy a one-party constituency by a speech in which he again termed universal suffrage a conventional fiction and argued for the abolition of all parties except the state.

The senate voted 161 to 45 to adopt the law which the Chamber of Deputies had already approved.

Mussolini told the senators that the bill was as much a consequence of Fascist doctrine as it was a result of the de facto situation in the country. It is not only to have the entire chamber of one party and one political color, but to acknowledge syndicalism as the organ of public law.

"This is a great legislative novelty of the Fascist revolution," he said. "It means that syndicalism, having become an organ of the public law, is no longer outside the state or against the state, but within the state, acknowledged by it, and as such has the right to represent all categories of citizens.

"Besides, in the regime of parties, are the people really sovereign, especially when we have reached such a point that 35 tickets of 35 different parties have asked the people to exercise their paper sovereignty? In the regime of parties, elections are really made by uncontrollable committees and the people are asked only to ratify choices already made.

"I have no scruple in stating that universal suffrage is a purely conventional fiction. It says nothing, means nothing, and gives the most divergent results."

Taking up the accusation that the government is not respecting the constitution, Mussolini asked: "Has anybody ever thought that the constitution is eternal, instead of temporary?"

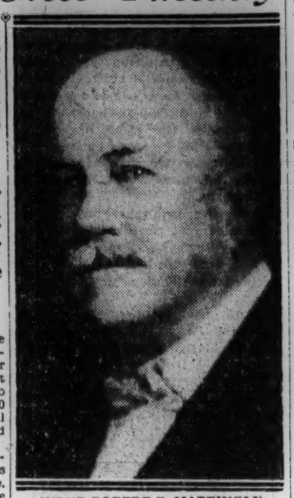

"Indeed," he went on, "Article 27 of the declaration of the rights of man says 'all constitutions can be revised, because no generation has the right of submitting to its laws the following generations.'

"The only things eternal are religious laws, the Decalogue, for instance; unchangeable, its ten articles are good for the peoples of all altitudes, longitudes and latitudes. Rather, constitutions are merely the result of special historical circumstances."

Municipal Court Jurist, Chairman of Board to Pass on Titles Offered for Edgar A. Guest's New Book of Poetry.

Three Days Remaining for Post Readers to Submit Suggestions for Naming Ninth Volume of Verse by Poet of the People.

JUDGE ROBERT E. MATTINGLY.

Interest among Post readers in the Edgar A. Guest $1,000 title contest continues to grow as the time draws near for the closing of the competition. But three days remain for Post readers to enter their suggestions for the $1,000 national prize and the five Post local prizes. All suggestions must be mailed before midnight Tuesday.

Many of those who entered the contest early are making new suggestions as the competition is about to close. Each entrant may submit as many title suggestions as he wishes. Each title suggested, however, must be accompanied by a letter of not more than 50 words telling why the suggested book name is appropriate.

In the national contest will be selected the title which will be borne by Edgar A. Guest's ninth book of verse. The book will contain Guest poems which have been published in The Post during the last year and will be published on August 20, the poet's forty-seventh birthday. The Post offers in the local contest five prizes. The first prize is $10 in cash, the second a set of four books of Guest verse bound in red morocco and the third, fourth and fifth prizes are individual volumes of Guest poetry, all autographed by the author. The judges in the local contest, selected today, are:

Judge Robert E. Mattingly, of the District of Columbia Municipal Court; Miss Elisabeth Ellicott Poe, of The Post literary staff, and Aubrey E. Taylor, city editor of The Post.

Judge Mattingly, who will act as chairman of the judges, is known as a connoisseur of literature, particularly lyric poetry. He is familiar with the voluminous works of Edgar A. Guest and is especially fitted to select an appropriate title for Mr. Guest's next book.

The judges in the national contest will be George Matthew Adams, editorial writer and president of the George Matthew Adams Service; Llewellyn Jones, literary editor of the Chicago Evening Post, and F. K. Reilly, president of the Reilly & Lee Co., publishers of Mr. Guest's books.

Every title suggested in the local contest will be considered by the judges in the national contest for the $1,000 award. This rule applies whether the title wins a prize in the local contest or not. No title can exceed four words. Each should be appealing, express a definite idea and be broad enough to cover a volume of verse. Above all it should be typical of Guest's poetry.

OTTO KAHN QUITS FILM BUREAU OVER WAR PLAY

SEES NURSE DESECRATED

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—The indorsement by the film bureu of "Dawn," a film depicting the death of Edith Cavell, British nurse executed by the Germans in the World War, over the showing of which an international wave of protest has been aroused, has led to the resignation of Otto Kahn from the advisory committee of the agency, it was revealed today. The bureau made public yesterday a notice that it considered the film, scheduled for its American premiere May 25, a plea for world peace. The bureau is an unofficial agency for promoting the use of films by non-theatrical organizations. Its stand on "Dawn" is backed by Anne Morgan, Elizabeth Perkins, Elizabeth Marbury, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Train, William Fellowes Morgan, Marshall P. Slade and others.

Kahn said he understood the picture was reverently done and with an apparent desire to avoid reopening any of the animosities of the war. "But," he added, "right-minded people everywhere are eager that nothing be done to keep awake or to revive, and that everything be done to efface the bitter memories of the war. * * * To use for a commercial purpose the pathetic story of a signally noble woman is desecrating a memory which ought to be held sacred, the eloquence of which should be mute."

Arch Selwyn, theatrical producer, in whose Times Square Theater the film is scheduled for its initial showing here, today denounced the "senseless tirades" against the picture and insisted it is a strong sermon against "that monster—war."

Mayor Walker's hearing on "Dawn" has been postponed until next week.

SALARY RAISE BILL WILL PASS, BELIEF

amended bill is tomorrow may be regarded as the President's view.

Luther C. Steward, president of the Federation of Federal Employes, issued the following statement last night.

"The bill very probably will have to go to a conference between representatives of the House and Senate. For that reason, I hope the Senate will vote on the bill promptly, so that the differences between the two houses can be ironed out before it is too late. In this case, time means everything, because adjournment is dangerously near."

The aforementioned relative standing provision in the bill caused more debate than any other provision. It was designed to guarantee that the employe would hold the same relative standing under the new bill as he holds under the present law.

Senator Smoot and the Bureau of the Budget held that this provision was "unworkable," because the new bill had reduced the number of salary rates in many of the grades.

Salved by Brookhart.

Senator Brookhart said the problem could be solved by amending the bill so that it would have just as many salary rates, or "steps-ups," as exist under the present law. This, he said, would end the confusion and strip the relative standing provision of the controversial nature.

The Brookhart increases, of course were added at the top of each grade. In some cases there are two, in others one. The increases voted follow: Professional and scientific service, grade 1, $2,000, $2,100, $2,200, $2,300, $2,400, $2,500 and $2,600; grade 2, 2,600, $2,700, $2,800, $2,900, $3,000, $3,100 and $3,200; grade 3, $3,200, $3,300, $3,400, $3,500, $3,600, $3,700 and $3,800; grade 4, $3,800, $4,000, $4,200, $4,400 and $4,600; grade 5, $4,600, $4,800, $5,000 $5,200 and $5,400.

Subprofessional services — Grade 1, $1,020, $1,080, $1,140, $1,200, $1,260 $1,320 and $1,380; grade 2, $1,260, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, $1,500, $1,560 and $1,620; grade 3, $1,440, $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740 and $1,800; grade 4, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740, $1,800, $1,860, $1,920 and $1,980; grade 5, $1,800, $1,860, $1,920, $1,980, $2,040, $2,100 and $2,160; grade 6, $2,000, $2,100, $2,200, $2,300, $2,400, $2,500 and $2,600; grade 7, $2,300, $2,400 $2,500, $2,600, $2,700, $2,800 and $2,900; grade 8, $2,600, $2,700, $2,800, $2,900, $3,000, $3,100 and $3,200.

Fiscal Service Charges.

Clerical, administrative and fiscal service, grade 1—$1,260, $1,320, $1,380 $1,440, $1,500, $1,560, and $1,620; grade 2—$1,440, $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740 and $1,800; grade 3—$1,620 $1,680, $1,740, $1,800, $1,860, $1,920, and $1,980; grade 4—$1,800, $1,860, $1,920 $1,980, $2,040, $2,100, and $2,200; grade 5—$2,000, $2,100, $2,200, $2,300, $2,400 $2,500 and $2,600; grade 6—$2,300 $2,400, $2,500, $2,600, $2,700, $2,800, and $2,900; grade 7—$2,600, $2,700, $2,800 $2,900, $3,000, $3,100, and $3,200; grade 8—$2,900, $3,000, $3,100, $3,200, $3,300 $3,400, and $3,500; grade 9—$3,200 $3,300, $3,400, $3,500, $3,600, $3,700, and $3,800.

Charwomen's Pay Stands.

No additional increases were granted to charwomen, who constitute the most poorly-paid group in the Government service.

Although the bill increases their hourly wage from 40 cents to 45 cents, it was expected that the Senate committee would boost the wage still higher.

It is possible that Senator Blaine (Republican), of Wisconsin, will offer an amendment on the floor to increase the wage of these workers.

The Senate civil service committee put in an arduous day on the bill, considering it both in the morning and in the afternoon. It was nearly 5 o'clock when they agreed to report the measure favorably. There was no dissenting voice in the committee.

Although he is not a member of the committee, Senator Dill (Democrat), of Washington, attended the hearing in the morning and pleaded for more liberal increases for the poorly-paid employes.

Steward Urges Action.

Luther X. Steward, head of the Federation of Federal Employes, told the committee that, while the bill did not take care of the employes as they deserved to be taken care of, he and the 41,000 members of the federation felt that it was a good start, and were anxious to see it pass.

He pointed out that the bill initiates a thorough study of the salary situation in the Government service and directs the Classification Board to make recommendations to Congress at the next session.

PLANES TO CARRY FISH FROM MEXICO TO U. S.

Several Machines to Be Used by Operator of Fleet From Brownsville, Tex.

SHIPMENTS FOR THE EAST

Special to The Washington Post.

Brownsville, Tex., May 12.—An international airplane service for the transportation of fish will be established within the next few weeks by C. C. Munn, of Galveston, who operates a large fleet of fishing boats in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

It is planned by Mr. Munn to ship fresh fish by airplanes from Soto la Marina, Mexico, to Brownsville, where the fish will be loaded into refrigeration cars and shipped to markets of the North and East. He has contracted for the operation of several airplanes, and their deliveries at the loading point here will be made within two hours after leaving Soto la Marina, approximately 150 miles south of Brownsville.

The air shipments of the catches from the boats will mean a great saving in time as compared with the present method of the boats making trips back to Galveston and then returning to the fishing grounds. If the new service proves the success that is expected it will be extended later by direct airplane flights to more northern points.

The matter of constructing refrigeration compartments in the airplanes is now being considered. The distance from Soto la Marina to Brownsville is so short that airplane refrigeration will not be necessary for that trip, it is stated, but should the service be extended to more distant points, icing of the fish will become necessary.

WEINBERG SENT TO JAIL FOR POSING AS LAWYER

Wife Stands by Man Who Has Passed as Doctor, Navy Officer and Prince.

WAS WHITE HOUSE GUEST

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—While Ethan Allen Weinberg, alias Sterling Clifford Wyman, fakir extraordinary, was accustoming himself to the routine at Welfare Island Prison today, where he will serve a sentence of from three months to three years, pronounced yesterday, his pretty brunette wife, Mrs. Diana Weinberg, sat with their 7-year-old daughter, Diana, in their Brooklyn flat and looked into a desolate future. She has been married to the well-known impersonator of doctors, lawyers, Army and Navy officers and even princes, for nearly eight years, and is fully aware of the hallucinations of greatness that at last have landed him a prison sentence. But the handsome poseur still has first call on her affections.

"He is the victim of newspaper persecution," she said, as she stroked the blonde hair of her young daughter. "If they would only give him a chance, instead of always throwing him down, I know he'd make good. Why, he's one of the cleverest men I ever met. I'll wait for him, and I'll work for our daughter, even if I have to break up this home, and when he gets out I'll make him go straight. He likes excitement, that's all."

Weinberg's latest adventure concerned his signing a court summons as the attorney for James P. Brown in a civil action against Benjamin Jacobson, requiring the latter's presence in the First District Municipal Court. As he is not a member of the bar, he was convicted of illegally practicing law.

Weinberg first came to the attention of the public some years ago when he met the Princess Fatima here and, in a naval officer's uniform, escorted her to Washington to meet President Harding. There he dined at the White House, hobnobbed with ambassadors and senators and others. More recently he became "personal physician" to Pola Negri and when she collapsed at the Valentino funeral here he attended her.

Weinberg, when arrested this time, police charge, had just completed a neat little job of faking as a member of the reception committee to the Bremen fliers.

Mystery in Illness Of Pilsudski Denied

Warsaw, May 12 (A.P.).—Reports that the illness of Marshal Pilsudski, Polish premier, is a mysterious one were denied today by the Polish Telegraphic Agency, which stated that it was authorized to deny all such rumors circulating in the foreign press.

The marshal's illness was described by the agency as an attack of neuralgia and a return of rheumatism from which he has suffered many years. He is stated to have recovered and to have no plans to go abroad for a cure.

Yesterday the premier discussed at length current political questions with Foreign Minister Zaleski while today he received the Roumanian minister, having returned to his usual official labor.

Duke of Spoleto Plans Expedition to Thibet

Milan, Italy, May 12 (A.P.).—The Duke of Spoleto, second cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, is sailing from Venice for Bombay, where he will perfect details for an expedition to Karakorum Plateau, in North Thibet, which will be undertaken in the spring of 1929 in collaboration with the British authorities. The duke will be away six months on this preliminary trip.

Rail Men Received By President Calles

Mexico City, May 12 (A.P.).—President Calles today received at the presidential palace in Chapultapec several hundred members of the United States Short Line Railroads Associations. When Byrd M. Robinson, of Washington, D. C., president of the association thanked him for his hospitality of Mexico, President Calles replied that he was delighted that the railroad men had visited "this country which is the friend of the American people."

Self-Confessed Killer Is Adjudged Guilty

Scranton, Pa., May 12 (A.P.).—Joseph Kamenski, 20, who entered a general plea of guilty to the murder of Dr. Gerald Kelly at Jessup last March, was adjudged guilty of murder in the first degree today. He will be sentenced to either death or life imprisonment next week.

Kamenski said he killed Dr. Kelly because the latter amputated his leg three years ago in an operation after a mine accident.

Fund of $2,000,000 For Aid to Disabled

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—A $2,000,000 trust fund for disabled former service men is to be raised by a committee of business men who have appointed Col. Theodore Roosevelt as head of the organization committee.

The fund will be expended over a period of ten years by the disabled American veterans of the World War to assist the disabled in preparation and presentation of their cases to the Veterans Bureau and assist them in obtaining disability compensation, insurance reinstatement and other rights.

State Senator Is Free On Coolidge Pardon

Winona, Minn., May 12 (A.P.).—A. L. Lennon, State senator from Minneapolis, convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, was released from jail here today after being pardoned by President Coolidge.

Senator Lennon was sentenced in 1924 to one year in jail and he began serving his time October 26, 1927, after losing court appeals. He was an officer of an Eagles lodge in Minneapolis when it was raided by Federal prohibition officers who alleged a liquor bar was in operation in the lodge.

Alarm Clock Halts After-Dinner Talks

Chicago, May 12 (A. P.).—One solution of the problem of the after dinner speaker has been found.

At the Illinois Medical Men's Association banquet last night, Miss Florence Kohn was handed a list of the speakers, their time allotments, and an alarm clock.

None was in doubt, as to when he was "through," the clock cared for that. "It even hurries a lot of the speakers," said Miss Kohn.

New Marathon Swim Arranged by Wrigley

Toronto, May 12 (A.P.).—J. Allan Ross, representing William Wrigley, jr., of Chicago, announced here today that the third Wrigley marathon swim would be held in Toronto during the Canadian national exhibition.

The swim will be divided into two sections, one for men and the other for women. The women's race of 10 miles will be held on August 29, and the men's race of 15 miles on September 5.

The prizes will total $50,000.

Lee in Race Again To Head Trainmen

Cleveland, May 12 (A.P.).—The 980 delegates attending the triennial convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen indicated their support of President W. G. Lee today when the latter announced his candidacy for re-election. Lee, who has headed the organization for nearly 20 years, was met with cheers when he asked the delegates to support him for another term.

The trainmen today indorsed Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, and Representative H. R. Rathbone, of Illinois, for re-election.

SCOTTISH CLUB WINS DAVID BELASCO PRIZE

Little Theater Trophy Goes to European Players for Second Time.

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—The Ardrossan and Saltcoats Players Club, of Ardrossan, Scotland, tonight won the David Belasco trophy offered annually as the prize in the Little Theater tournament. The winning play, selected from among 20 entries, was "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals," by Sir J. M. Barrie.

It was the second successive year in which the trophy was awarded a European entry. Last year's prize was won by the Welwyn City Garden Players, of Welwyn City, England.

The three finalists, besides Scottish players, who presented their productions tonight, were the Blackfriars, Club of Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Ga.; the Town Theater, of Savannah, Ga., and the Thalian Players, of New York. The contest began last Monday and the finalists were selected last night.

"King" Visiting U. S. Has 50 Subjects

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—A king is in New York, and he received no official greeting.

But City Hall won't go into mourning over this failure of the mayor's committee of welcome to greet the King of Lundy when he arirved on the White Star Liner Majestic last Tuesday, for the king was sailing incognito, it was revealed today.

The monarch sailed as Martin Coles Harmon, but the 50 inhabitants of Lundy, a speck of an island off the coast of Devon, know him as a sovereign whose word is law. He is here to form an American subsidiary for a British silk company in which he is interested. The deal reputedly involves $10,000,000.

Rifle Match Bill Blocked in House

(Associated Press.)

An unsuccessful move was made yesterday by Representative Speaks, an Ohio Republican, to bring before the House his bill proposing annual national rifle matches at Camp Perry, Ohio. His effort was blocked by objections by Representative Collins, a Mississippi Democrat, and several Republicans.

A Senate bill similar to Speaks' in many respects has been vetoed by President Coolidge. Speaks contended that his measure was without the objections of the vetoed bill, and that the annual matches were highly important to the country.

Chamberlin, Levine Medals Authorized

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday passed the Brookhart bill to authorize President Coolidge to present medals of honor to Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine for their transatlantic flight. The measure now goes to the House.

$24,000,000 INCREASE VOTED INTO TAX CUT rate would apply on incomes above that amount.

New provisions were added in the Senate to this tax proposal, however, which would take care of incomes just above each of the arbitrary limits so as not to make a corporation with an income of $7,001 pay as much as a corporation with an income of $12,000. The provision would pro rate on such margins as that.

Disposition of the corporation tax fights left only one other important change in the bill proposed by the Republicans to be decided upon—downward revision of the surtax rates applying on intermediate incomes. Here again the Democrats will seek a greater reduction than proposed by the Republican majority.

The contests yesterday developed another round of oratory. Democrats unleashed their heaviest assault on the Republican demands for limitation of the tax reduction to $200,000,000. Senator Harrison recalled that in the past Treasury limitations have been ignored and that always actual Treasury surpluses were far above estimates.

Smoot Warns of Deficit.

Senator Simmons, in charge of the Democratic forces, then advanced his proposal to modify the debt retirement program by applying payments received from foreign governments on account of war debts to the sinking fund, instead of appropriating for the full sinking fund which is used in retirement of the debt. He said this would give $160,000,000 more a year in savings on appropriations for tax reduction.

Senator Smoot let the Democrats talk most of the time. His contention, however, was that the Treasury estimates of surpluses for this year were based on actual tax collections rather than on mere calculations as in the past and therefore they could not be challenged. He warned of a deficit if the $200,000,000 limit was exceeded.

Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, who has introduced an amendment as a "rider" calling for upward revision of the tariff rates on a mass of agricultural products, today put in a second amendment along this line embodying a list of products on which the conference of farmers' organizations, in session here recently, wants the tariff raised. The list was submitted to him by J. S. Montgomery, chairman of the conference.

LEADERS OF HOUSE SET ASIDE DISTRICT DAY, DUE TOMORROW

No More This Session Expected if Congress Adjourns as Soon as Looked For.

25 LOCAL MEASURES ARE AWAITING ACTION

Some, Held as Urgent, May Be Given Right of Way Under Suspension of Rules.

Tomorrow should be District day in the House, but the leaders in that body have decreed that the day shall be devoted to other legislation. If Congress adjourns when it is expected to adjourn, there will be no other regular District day this session. Approximately 25 local bills await consideration.

The House leaders, however, gave promise that really urgent District bills will be taken up, either under a suspension of the rules or under a special rule.

The House District committee meets tomorrow to vote on the traction merger resolution, and the prospects are that it will make a favorable report on the measure. It is possible that this resolution will come under the head of "urgent" legislation and be given the right of way.

For District Committee to Decide.

What is urgent among the local bills on the calendar must be decided by the House District committee. Among the better known of the 25 are the following:

A bill to give legal status to the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department. The bill has been awaiting consideration in both the House and Senate for some time. It is being blocked in the Senate by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah.

The Blaine-Underhill workmen's compensation bill. This already has passed the Senate.

The Copeland bill to regulate the practice of medicine and the practice of the various healing arts. Neither the House nor the Senate has acted on this measure.

Four school bills, providing as follows: To provide free text books for high school pupils, to exempt members of the Board of Education from personal damage suits for acts of the board, to exempt school employes from the $2,000 salary limitation in the act of 1916, and to clarify certain language in the teachers salary act.

No Hope for Fire and Police Pay.

The bill to raise the pay of police and firemen. It is conceded that this has no chance to pass.

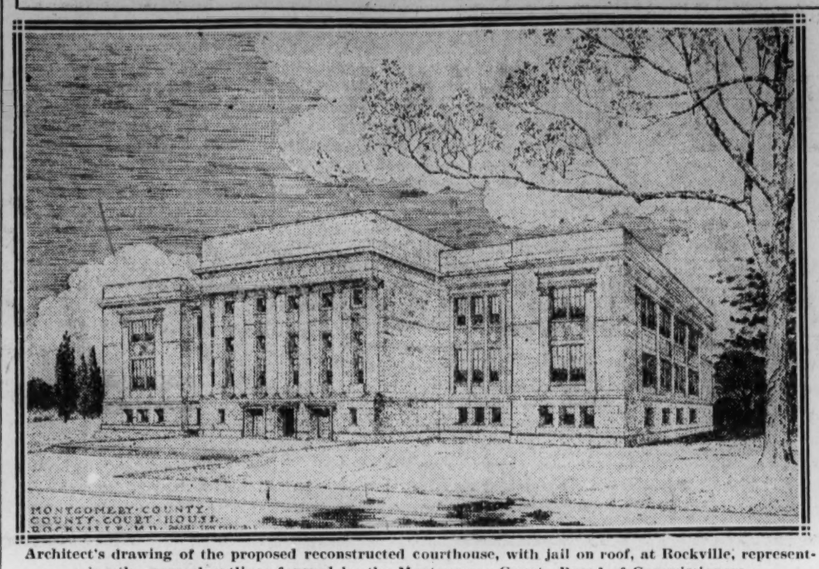

The so-called "diploma mill" bill designed to drive bogus schools out of business.

The Zihlman bill authorizing construction of 12 bathing pools at a maximum cost of $200,000 each.

A bill to give the District Supreme Court an additional justice. It is believed that this bill has an excellent chance to pass.

The 1929 District appropriation bill still is deadlocked in conference, but the House and Senate conferees evidently are making a desperate effort to agree on it. They held three conferences last week and probably will hold as many or more this week.

PROPOSED MONTGOMERY COUNTY COURTHOUSE

Architect's drawing of the proposed reconstructed courthouse, with jail on roof, at Rockville, representing the general outlines favored by the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners.

MONTGOMERY PROPOSES TO REBUILD COURTHOUSE

BOND SALE ON TUESDAY

Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, said yesterday that the commissioners expect to select within a short time an architect to work out an acceptable plan for the proposed reconstruction of the county courthouse and new jail at Rockville, for which the State Legislature has authorized the commissioners to sell bonds in the sums of $250,000 for the courthouse project and $50,000 for the jail. The commissioners will receive bids for the purchase of the bonds on Tuesday at 12 noon.

Apparently a proposed plan of locating the jail on the top of the courthouse is being considered favorably, two commissioners said yesterday. Aside from the all-around superior adaptability of a jail so located, it was pointed out that a new jail built a distance from the courthouse, as is the case now, combines two serious disadvantages—one, that of inconvenience, and the other the certain depreciation of property values in the vicinity of a separate jail. Both of these faults will be automatically corrected, it was said, if the jail is situated on the roof of the courthouse, where, in addition, sanitary conditions may be made ideal.

The street entrance to the new structure will be from grade level leading into a large lobby in a high basement. The Circuit Court room will remain as at present. The office of the clerk of the court will be located in the left wing. Complete allocation of quarters for other officials has not been completed.

The present courthouse was built in 1890, at a cost of $55,000, upon a site that has become historic in Montgomery County since 1790. In that year the State legislature of Maryland created a commission to select and lay off ground for a courthouse. The result of this was the selection of the present site, upon which a suitable building was then erected. Prior to that the county court was held in private homes in and around Rockville.

Pennsylvania Primary Reports Are Received

(Associated Press.)

Further reports on the work accomplished in investigating conditions in the 1926 senatorial election in Pennsylvania were made yesterday to the Reed slush-fund committee by A. R. Clapp and E. T. Paxton, special supervisors in the work of examining registration lists and other documents used in the election.

The committee will meet again tomorrow to hear further reports, and meantime it is withholding the information. The investigators, who are headed by Senator Reed, of Missouri, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has been authorized to investigate the Pennsylvania election in connection with the contest brought against Senator-elect William S. Vare, Republican, by his defeated Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson.

MORE COOPERATION BY CHEMISTS URGED

T. B. Johnson Addresses the Meeting of American Institute; Officers Elected.

Modern industrial requirements that force the chemist to work "in disguise," have robbed him of the credit that is his due, Treat B. Johnson, of Yale University, retiring president of the American Institute of Chemists, last night told the annual meeting of the organization at the Mayflower Hotel.

The speaker asked that the chemists of the world put aside their jealousies and competitive attitude and cooperate for the benefit of the industry as a whole. He expressed the hope that the time would soon come when college professors would realize that "mere knowledge of science" does not equip the student for positions of importance.

Licensing of chemists and their organization into a general group, such as the American Medical Association, was advocated by Prof. Frederick P. Breithut, newly-elected president.

There were also addresses by Dr. F. W. Clarke and Dr. Charles E. Munroe. Officers elected besides President Breithut were Lloyd Van Doren vice president; Howard S. Neiman, secretary, and C. M. Simon, treasurer.

PAGEANT TO CELEBRATE CANAL IS SET FOR JUNE 2

150 Georgetown Citizens Will Enact Breaking Ground at Chain Bridge.

DANCES WILL BE GIVEN

A historic pageant celebrating the 100th anniversary of the commencement of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal will be held Saturday afternoon, June 2, on the banks of the canal just below Chain Bridge, where President John Quincy Adams broke the ground.

The Pragressive Citizens Association of Georgetown will be assisted in making arrangements for the pageant by the District of Columbia Community Center Department, Children of the American Revolution, the Fedreation of Citizens Associations and other civic organizations.

The date of the event was postpone from May 26 to June 2 to permit the committee of arrangements sufficient time to conclude the plans. The celebration will be a duplicate of the original event, it was stated. Between 100 and 150 citizens will assemble in Georgetown, attired in the costume of those days and will be taken up the Potomac river to the canal and then transferred to canal boats for the trip to Chain Bridge.

President Adam's speech will be read in part as well as the responses of the mayors of the "corporations" of Georgetown, Alexandria and Washington. The Children of the American Revolution will participate in some "old-time" dances following the ceremony. Airplanes will fly high overhead during the pageant. In the evening "darkies" will sing old plantation melodies along the banks of the canal in Georgetown as they did in the distant days.

The Marine Band will furnish music during the festivities as it did 100 years ago. Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest is chairman of the executive committee of the celebration. She will be assisted by Miss Mary Lazenby, Mrs. Fred T. DuBois, Mrs. Alice C. Torbert, Mrs. Carey Brown, Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Mrs. Helen H. Riley and Miss Ann T Hardy.

SEARCH FAILS TO LOCATE MISSING STOREKEEPER

Wife Near Collapse as Police Comb City for Man Gone Since Sunday.

HAT IS FOUND IN MACHINE

With his wife near collapse and his little haberdashery business being conducted in shifts by volunteering friends Joseph M. Vallin, 31 years old, of 2109 Eighteenth street northwest, last night was still booked as "missing" by the local police, who apparently are without a single clew as to his mysterious disappearance late last Sunday night.

Discovery of Vallin's automobile Thursday parked in front of 1717 T street prompted police and friends to conduct a house-to-house search for him in that neighborhood Friday and yesterday, but no one was found who could recall seeing the missing man.

Allan G. Stern, of Chevy Chase, Md., with whom Vallin and his wife spent last Sunday evening, was in charge of Vallin's haberdashery store at 1359 U street northwest yesterday and told The Post reporter that both the police and Vallin's friends are "stumped" in their investigation of his disappearance.

At the time of his disappearance Vallin is known to have had about $100 on his person, Stern stated.

The missing man, Stern said, was in exceptionally good spirits just prior to his disappearance.

When his automobile was found by Officer Jones, of the Eighth Precinct, Thursday, it was properly parked, the parkling light was on with the battery nearly run down, the switch was locked and the key gone. No evidence of any struggle was found, although Vallin's hat was in the tonneau of the car.

New Flexible Tariff Clause Is Proposed

Revision of the flexible clause of the tariff act to give the President greater latitude in the adjustment of levies to meet trade conditions was proposed in a bill yesterday by Representative Manlove (Republican), Missouri.

Under the measure the President, upon recommendation of the tariff commission, would be empowered to raise or lower duties to any point that might be deemed advisable instead of being confined, as under existing law, to a maximum adjustment either way of 50 per cent of the present rate.

The bill also proposes to increase the commission's membership from six to seven members and provides that four members should be of the same political party. At present the political line-up on the commission is equally divided.

DOUGHERTY PRAISES CITIZEN ASSOCIATIONS

Commissioner Speaks at Mt. Pleasant; Joseph W. Cox Elected President.

Joseph W. Cox, attorney, was elected president of the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association last night at the association's meeting held at the Mount Pleasant branch of the Public Library. C. Dwight Marsh was elected vice president, John De LaMater was reelected secretary and Daniel Foley, treasurer.

District Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty addressed the association and stressed the importance at this time, when the bill for national representation for the District is still pending, of the citizens' associations sending high-grade men to the Federation of Citizens Associations, to prove to Congress that the franchise would be well used in Washington.

He praised the associations for the benefits derived from them, and suggested that they can be most effective when they concentrate on a few major projects, rather than attempting to have a hand in all.

E. E. Pabst, of the Piney Branch Citizens Association, called the association's attention to the objections to the large storm sewer in Piney Branch, and the association appointed a committee to cooperate with the Piney Branch Association in bringing the matter before the health department, District officials and other civic associations.

Heflin Says Flag Bill Is Indorsed by Navy

(Associated Press.)

Senator Heflin (Democrat), Alabama, said yesterday that his resolution seeking to abolish the custom of flying the chaplain's pennant above the United States flag during religious services on naval vessels, has been indorsed by Gridley Adams, New Rochelle, N. Y., as chairman of the national flag code commission.

In a letter which Senator Heflin had read into the record, Adams said 112 patriotic and fratrenal societies in the United States have adopted the flag code that stipulates that "nothing shall fly above the flag of the United States of America."

The letter also declared that at a conference three months ago before the House judiciary committee, Navy Department authorities said the Navy willingly would give up the practice in order to conform with the rules of the flag code.

PHYSICIAN ATTACKS QUACKS IN MEDICINE

Dr. M. Fishbein Speaks Before Jacobi Society at Feast in Capital.

Osteopathy is trying to break into medicine by the "back door," while chiropractic struggles to enter through the "basement," Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, last night told 300 members of the Jacobi Society of Washington, at their annual banquet at the National Press Club.

Dr. Fishbein took for his subject, "Fads and Quackery in Medicine," and traced the history of "faith healing" from Bishop Berkley and his "tar water" to Albert Abrams and his "electronic diagnosis and therapy." The latter, he said, made $5,000,000 in four years from the various devices he employed.

Christian Science, and its founder, Mary Baker Eddy, were subjected to the satire of the speaker. He said that "quackery" largely has its strength in published "testimonials," and in the personality of the "charlatans" who espouse it. He added that "quacks" aer not peculiar to medicine, but are plentiful as well in law, in the ministry and in Congress.

Driver Cleared in Child's Death.

Investigating the death of Wilbert J. Greenberg, 5 years old, who died at Children's Hospital Friday after being struck by an automobile near his home, a coroner's jury yesterday issued a certificate of accidental death, absolving Sherman Barry, driver of the car from responsibility for the accident.

14,000,000 Turks Seek Names to Meet Law

Constantinople, May 12 (A.P.).—Fourteen million Turks are nervously scratching their heads or thumbing through the few telephone directories available in search of a name with which to endow themselves. Reports from Angora state that an act requiring the adoption of family names is nearing passage. The lack of these names has caused infinite confusion, as thousands call themselves the same one name, generally Mustapha or Fatima.

Angora's new edict will be another slap at the Koran. Its precept, "Don't be proud of family, make your own name," is responsible for the Moslems' lack of family tags.

The few families which have handed down the father's name have amusing appelations, such as "son of a fish" or "son of a six-fingered ancestor."

CAPITAL HORSE SHOW PLANS ARE PERFECTED

THURSDAY OPENING DAY

Entry applications, numbering approximately 600, have come from seven States and the District of Columbia for the renewal of the twentieth National Capital Horse Show, which will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the newly acquired horse show grounds of the association, Bradley Farm, River road and Bradley lane, opposite the Congressional Country Club.

The entries, besides the local exhibitors, are from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia Michigan and Minnesota, and include many blue ribbon winners.

This year's show will be the first held under the direction of a professional manager, Frank Gaskins, veteran Virginia horseman. He will be assisted by officers of the association, which include Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, president; Melvin Hazen and Thomas P. Bones, vice president; Hubert R. Quinter, secretary; George Plummer, treasurer; Ray Norton, Percy Niepold, Maj. Henry Leonard, Maj. Charles Scott, Quinton Comer, Perry West and Dr. William Collins.

Opposes Appeal to Supreme Court in Suit for $5,500,000 Property.

(Associated Press.)

The Government's opposition to a review of the Bosch Magneto case, brought to recover more than $5,500,000 with interest from a large number of defendants charged with a conspiracy to defraud in the sale of property by the alien property custodian, was filed yesterday in the Supreme Court.

The Chase Securities Corporation and John A. MacMarton, of New York, Joseph P. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and William G. Fitzpatrick, of Detroit, Mich., out of a large number of defendants asked the Supreme Court to review the decision of the First Circuit Court of Appeals holding good the processes which had been served summoning them to appear for trial in the Federal District Court at Boston.

Pointing out that the service was under a law which is no longer in effect, the Government argued that the Supreme Court should not review the case, but should permit the defendants to go to trial. The Government claims that as a result of the conspiracy, the property was sold to Martin E. Kern, for $4,150,000 when it was worth $9,695,564.

WEALTHIEST BELGIAN FINANCIER IN CITY

Loewenstein, Who Is Studying U. S. Industries, Guest of Ambassador.

Alfred Loewenstein, internationally famous Belgian financier, accompanied by his wife arrived in Washington yesterday while on their tour of the United States to study industrial and financial conditions.

Loewenstein, regarded as one of the wealthiest men in Europe, and also as one of the most mysterious, reached this country about three months ago and promptly purchased an airplane in which to mtake his visits to the leading cities. He is accompanied not only by his wife, but by a staff of secretaries and servants. He came here from Chicago, where he made a special study of public utilities.

Mr. and Mrs. Loewenstein upon their arrival here went to the Belgian Embassy as the guest of the Ambassador and Prince de Ligne. Last night the ambassador entertained at dinner in their honor.

Virginia Club Ends Season With Dance

The Virginia Society of Washington last night brought to a close its spring social season, when the last of a series of balls, attended by 1,300 members and their friends, was held at the Willard Hotel. The ball was preceded by a brief meeting addressed by A. E. Callahan, of Alexandria.

A delegation of girls from Arlington Hall Seminary and alumni of Washington and Lee University, were guests of the society. Arrangements were in charge of J. C. Byars, president, assisted by William P. Kent, Fred P. Myers and H. O. Lick. Music was by the Myer Goldman Orchestra.

PERSONALITY IS BEING WEIGHED BY SCIENCE

Psychologists Can Tell What Ingredients Are Lacking, Association Is Told.

Madison, Wis., May 12 (A.P.).—Have you had your personality weighed and analyzed? Scientists are doing it now.

If you make a poor impression, the scientist will measure your personality and tell you what ingredients are lacking in your make-up, the mid-Western Psychological Association was told today by Dr. A. R. Gilliland, professor of psychology at Northwestern University. Scientists and educators from 40 universities were here for the association's third annual session.

There are four essential ingredients in the perfect personality, Dr. Gilliland said, intelligence, forcefulness, sociability and morality. And the first of these, he emphasized, is "horse sense."

"The psychologist has found that aggressiveness constitutes another extremely poor factor in personality and we can measure this in the laboratory. In fact, our clinics are each day attempting to measure all the personality traits and to catalog them in a manner that is useful and definite."

15,000 Thrill Hunters Beg Byrd to Take Them On Trip to South Pole

Bored Rich Women and Young Imaginative Ones Among Aspirants—Many Write 'Mash Notes to Flier, Who Receives 40 Letters a Day and Works Far Into Night.

By W. W. CHAPLIN.
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Boston, Mass., May 12 (A.P.).—If Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd accepted all the offers to accompany him to the South Pole made since he returned from his flight to France, a city of some 15,000 persons would spring up in the Antarctic this fall, as motley and futile a community of thrill hunters as was ever assembled in one place.

There would be men of all ages, from old ones to whom the years have brought realization that they have never accomplished anything very brilliant and who wish to top their drab career with one glorious gesture, to boys fresh on the threshold of life who see all before them only in terms of dashing adventure.

And there would be women, too; bored, rich ones, with fond visions of heated igloos staffed by a retinue of servants, and hero-worshiping young ones with romantic notions of impossible dramas in which they would inevitably be cast as the dashing heroines.

Commander Byrd receives an average of about 40 such applications a day, largely from people whose only common bond is their monetary desire and their almost universal unfitness for any expedition in which hardship, labor, technical training and perseverence under trying conditions are the component parts.

Not all the women who write to the air conqueror of the North Pole, however, want to accompany him to the frozen wastes. About four a day write him soft letters that a matinee idol might preen himself over, but which Byrd merely tosses aside with a smile.

The rest of the flier's daily mail, to which he and a secretary have to devote most of their mornings, and which runs from 50 to 200 letters, is divided between pleas for financial assistance, letters of advice from people who don't think much of aviation and hate to see a nice man wasting his time at it, invitations to speak at meetings or dinners, and rambling letters of no special import.

A less efficient man might find such a daily load of mail an almost unbearable burden in the busy season of preparation for such an adventure as Byrd is now planning, the South Pole flight, but he takes it all in his stride and shows no trace of annoyance going calmly on to the other duties of the day.

At noon there always is a walk, in which he is accompanied as a rule by Dick, jr., who is 8, and at least one dog. At 5 o'clock the office work is again suspended for exercise, this time of a more active sort. In winter Byrd plays squash, and in summer, tennis or golf. Swimming and sailing are also among his favorite sports.

No matter how great is the pressure of his affairs, Byrd always manages to set aside time for exercise. He knows there are strenuous days ahead of him days in which his endurance will be taxed to the utmost, and he is constantly building himself up against that time.

He prefers not to work after dinner, but often it is unavoidable; there are so many people to see, so many letters to write, proofs of book and article to read, plans to make. But by 11 o'clock he is through, and for an hour he relaxes, reading as he sips a glass of milk and eats a few crackers. By midnight he is in bed, and when his work is cleared up early he often is asleep an hour before that, storing up the strength which later he will be called on to send him circling above the South Pole.

This daily routine of course is frequently altered by trips to New York and other places for visits to his publishers, for business arrangements in connection with his next expedition, and for direction of test flights of the three planes he is to take with him. As a rule he is an observer of these tests, but not infrequently he takes the stick himself. Because of his fame as a navigator the fact is sometimes lost sight of that Byrd is a pilot himself, and one of the best in the country.

Although he has the coordinate body of an athlete Byrd is by no means a large man. He weighs close to 160 pounds and is well under 6 feet tall. With his wavy hair, classic features, and the soft Southern drawl of his courteous voice it is sometimes difficult for persons meeting him for the first time to visualize him in the role he has played time after time of conqueror against seemingly insuperable odds.

Some of his friends have a whimsical theory by which they explain his indomitable nature. When Byrd was at Annapolis he broke the bones in one foot twice in sports, and one of the bones failed to knit. Because of his injury he was somewhat later retired from the Navy, his career apparently ended, leaving him, in his own words, a "fizzle" at life. The broken ends of the unknitted bone in his foot were nailed together by surgeons and friends say with a laugh that iron from that nail must have permeated Byrd's system and made him strong beyond all possibility of defeat.

As a matter of fact, of course, Byrd's determination to follow his urge for adventure dates back much farther than that nailed up foot, back at any rate to the time when he was 12 years old when unaccompanied he circled the world whose hidden places he was later to seek out from the clouds.

FIRST WILSON NORMAL ALUMNI DINNER HELD

Principals Emeritus of Shcool Attend; Choral Club Presents Play.

Several hundred Wilson Normal School graduates, including many of the most prominent Washington educators, last night held the first Wilson Normal Alumni dinner and entertainment at the Raleigh Hotel. Mrs. Edith Paul presided as toastmaster, and at the speaker's table were Assistant Superintendents of Schools Stephen E. Kramer and Robert L. Haycock, Miss Lucilla Smith and Miss Anne M. Goding, principals emeritus of the school; Dr. William C. Ruediger, of George Washington University; Dr. Joseph A Murphy and Mrs. Jessie Fant Evans.

The Wil-Nor Choral Club, under the direction of Bernice Randall Angelico, presented a musical program interpolated in a play, "The Masque," written especially for the occasion by Alberta Walker. Those in the cast were Edna Ellis Hilton, Ruth Molyneau, Helen Burton, Helen McCaughtry, Frances Shott, Evelyn Burns, Charlotte Davis, Anna Patterson, Dorothy McCammond, Dorothy Skinner and Rose Reikes.

The committee in charge of the dinner and entertainment was composed of Miss Mary C. Breen, chairman; Miss Elizabeth A. Hummer, secretary; Charles Hart, treasurer; Miss Rebecca Harry, director of entertainment; Miss Bessie Wood, Miss May Bradshaw and Miss LaVerne Crabtree.

BADMINTON CONTEST PLANNED BY Y. W. C. A.

Gymnasium Activities to Be Demonstrated to the Public Thursday.

An open gymnasium demonstration Thursday evening at 7 o'clock in the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets, will close the year's activities in gym work conducted by the health education department of the association. The public is invited to attend this demonstration, which will close with a tournament to be played by the four health education directors of the Y. W. C. A. Misses Marion L. Meigs, Amelia Bottomley, Louise Alberts and Ethyle I. Swenson.

Badminton has been popular in the Y. W. gym during the season just past and several groups have played regularly throughout the season under the direction of the athletic directors and with the supervision of Leander McCormick-Goodheart, of the British Embassy here.

Indoor athletics have been in great demand in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium for the past year, with a total enrollment of 800 and an attendance of 5,500. This does not include the Eastman or Friends School groups, which have used the gym all winter. A large number of outside groups have made use of the excellent facilities for indoor athletics offered at the new building of the association.

John Saul Honored By Board of Trade

The Washington Board of Trade last night gave a banquet in honor of John Saul, retiring chairman of the membership committee of the association, in the Mayflower Hotel.

During the year and five months that he was chairman of the committee, 714 new members were admitted to the association. At present the membership of the trade body totals 2,929 persons and organizations. Edward Graham, past president, presented Mr. Saul with a gold knife as a token of the association's regard. Others who joined with words of praise were William Everett, president; Luther Linkins, chairman of the membership committee; W. W. Ross. A musical program was provided by Fred East, William Raymond and Miss Helen Gallagher. Jerome Parnard had charge of the arrangements.

Catholic Alumnae Special Mass Today

The International Federation of Catholic Alumnae of the District will give its official welcome to the members of the 1928 graduating classes of the affiliated schools this morning at 8 o'clock at mass in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Right Rev Edward A. Pace, director of the federation, will officiate. Mrs. T. D. McCarthy, first vice governor, will have charge of the arrangements for the welcome. She will be assisted by Miss Ella Loraine Dorsey, Miss Julia Kennedy, Miss Catherine DuFeif, Miss Gertrude Daly, Miss Alma Happ, Miss Margaret McAllister, Mrs John R. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Frank J. Schrider, Miss Pauline Fling, Mrs. Lewis A. Payne, Miss Beatrice Deeds and Mrs. J. T. Sadler.

May Day at Trinity College Tomorrow

Trinity College will hold its annual celebration of May Day tomorrow on the college campus. The exercises will begin at 7:30 o'clock with mass in Notre Dame Chapel. From then on until after 8 o'clock in the evening a full program has been planned. At 9 o'clock the basketball game between the two highest scoring teams of the school will be held. Other athletic events will follow.

At 2 o'clock there will be a horse show. At 4:30 o'clock a pageant under the auspices of the Athletic Association will be held on the Aventine. The sheep shearing scene from Shakespeare's "Winter's Tales" has been selected to provide background for this colorful affair which will close with a May pole dance.

Child Health Day Bill Approved by House

(Associated Press.)

The Reed resolution to designate May 1 as child health day was passed yesterday by the House and sent to the Senate.

The measure would provide for the annual issuance by the President of a proclamation inviting all agencies interested in child welfare to unite upon that day in the observance of "such exercises as will awaken the people of the Nation to the fundamental necessity of a year-round program for the protection and development of the health of the Nation's children. The date already is observed in many States as child health day.

TWO GENERAL DIVISIONS FOR P. R. R. IN THE WEST

General Superintendents and Other Officers Are Named by the Railroad.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 12.—The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., at a meeting this week, authorized the organization of two general divisions in the western region of the system, each to be under the charge of a general superintendent. The changes will become effective May 16.

The western region embraces generally the company's lines west of Columbus, Ohio, and includes nine divisions, each headed by a superintendent.

The grouping of these divisions into two general divisions follows:

The northwestern general division, with headquarters at Chicago, will embrace the Chicago terminal division, Fort Wayne division, Logansport division, Toledo division and Grand Rapids division.

The southwestern general division, with headquarters at Indianapolis, will include the Columbus division, Cincinnati division, St. Louis division and Indianapolis division.

W. C. Higginbottom, now general superintendent of transportation of the western region, with offices at Chicago, will become general superintendent of the northwestern division.

C. E. Whitlock, superintendent of the Pittsburgh division of the central region, will become general superintendent of the southwestern division.

Mr. Higginbottom, a native of Stark County, Ohio, entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. 33 years ago as a telegraph operator. After serving as train dispatcher, division operator, assistant trainmaster and trainmaster on various divisions, he was appointed assistant superintendent of the Pittsburgh division in 1920. He became superintendent of the former Peoria division in 1921, and later served in the same capacity on the former Richmond division, the Panhandle division and the Philadelphia division.

Mr. Whitlock, born at New Brunswick, N. J., is a graduate of Rutgers College, and began his career with the company in 1901 as a laborer on the New York division. He was appointed superintendent of the Erie & Ashtabula division in 1923 and later was superintendent of the Eastern division, with headquarters at Pittsburgh He was transferred to the Pittsburgh division in the same capacity in September, 1926.

E. W. Perrot, assistant general superintendent of transportation, freight, Western region, will be superintendent of freight transportation, Western region.

J. M. Symes, chief clerk to the general manager of the Western region, will be superintendent of passenger transportation, Western region.

H. H. Haup, master mechanic, at Wilmington, Del., Eastern region, will be superintendent of motive power. Northwestern division.

W. S. Johns, jr., engineer of maintenance of way, Western region, will be engineer of maintenance of way, Northwestern division.

J. A. Appleton, superintendent of the Columbus division, will be superintendent of the Pittsburgh division, Central region, succeeding Mr. Whitlock.

J. C. Rill, now superintendent of the Logansport division, will be superintendent of the Columbus division.

R. H. Pinkham, superintendent of the Fort Wayne division, will be engineer, maintenance of way, Southwestern division.

J. G. Shaeffer, superintendent of the Delaware division, Eastern region, will be superintendent of the Fort Wayne division.

R. P. Graham, division engineer of the middle division, Eastern region, will be superintendent of the Delaware division, Eastern region.

H. A. Hobson, assistant superintendent of the New York division, Eastern region, will be superintendent of the Logansport division.

G. B. Fravel, assistant general superintendent of motive power, Western region, will be superintendent of motive power, Southwestern division.

5 SEAPLANE RACES SET FOR ANACOSTIA STATION SATURDAY

As Many Types Will Compete for Curtiss Marine Trophy and Other Prizes.

SCOUTING FLEET WILL BE ON EXHIBITION

Acrobatic Flying, Parachute Jumping and Smoke Screens Are Among Events.

Five types of planes will be flown in the race for the Curtiss marine trophy for seaplanes at the naval air station, Anacostia, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A miniature of the Curtiss trophy, which was presented to the Navy Department in 1915, by Glenn Curtiss, a pioneer in aviation, will be given the winner and his name inscribed on the large trophy on exhibition at the Navy Department.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics Warner also has offered a cup to the pilot of the plane which, regardless of class, makes the best speed in the race, based on specified performance of the plane. The Washington Star will present five gold wrist watches to winners in each class.

Nineteen planes, the largest number ever entered in the contest here, will take part in the race. Practically every type of seaplane in service in the Navy will be on display at the Anacostia station race day, including an entire squadron of torpedo planes from the scouting fleet and their tender, the U. S. S. Sandpiper. The PN-2, Navy patrol plane, which recently broke the world's record for endurance for seaplanes, and a Curtiss seaplane of the type used by the Navy in 1912 also will be on exhibition.

Will Go 175 Miles an Hour.

Capt. Ford O. Rogers, one of the most experienced pilots in the Marine Corps who served in France with the aviation forces during the World War, will give a demonstration of acrobatic flying in a Navy fighting plane.

There also will be an exhibition parachute jump previous to the race and a smoke screen will be laid down on the Potomac River by Lieut. R. L. Johnson, Bureau of Aeronautics, flying one of the latest type navy fighting planes at 175 miles an hour to demonstrate the use of this auxiliary to the fleet.

The home pylon, or winning post, for the race will be placed in the center of the Potomac between the War College and Hains Point and the naval air station, thus affording three vantage points for spectators. The race will be flown over a 20-mile course and five laps of the course constitutes the 100-mile race.

Entrants and Planes

The entrants and the planes they will fly are the following:

Single-seater Curtiss fighting planes: Lieut. Comdr. A. C. Miles, Denver, Colo., on duty at Anacostia; Capt. Harold C. Major, U. S. M. C., Ames, Iowa, on duty at the Bureau of Aeronautics.

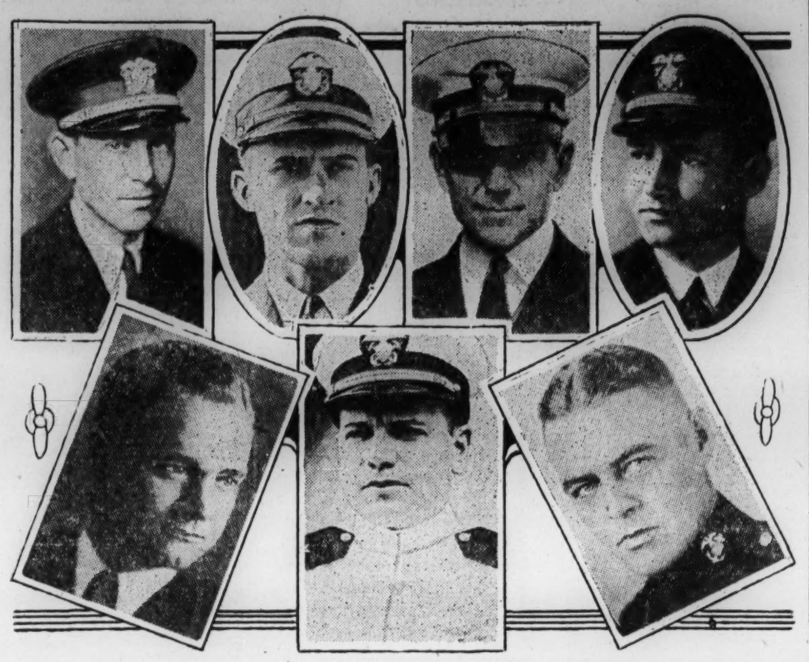

Vought "Corsair" observation planes: Lieut. Comdr. W. K. Harrell, Knoxville, Tenn., aid to Assistant Secretary for Aeronautics Warner; Lieut. F. R. Buse, Ridley Park, Pa., Anacostia; Lieut. Comdr. Ralph E. Davison, St. Louis, Mo., Navy Department.

Loening amphibian observation planes: Lieut. B. E. Grow, U. S. N., Red Wing, Minn., Hampton Roads, Va.; Lieut. H. C. Busbey, U. S. M. C., Quantico, Va.; Lieut. Comdr. George Chapline, Lincoln, Nebr., on duty Bureau of Aeronautics; Lieut. deLong Mills, New York City, on duty Lakehurst, N. J.

Martin torpedo planes: Lieut. W. J. Slattery, San Francisco, Calif.; Lieut. D. V. Gallery, Chicago; Lieut. R. W. D. Woods, Cambridge, Mass.; Lieut. E. S. Mulheran, Washington; Lieut. A. Handley, San Catalina, Calif.; Lieut. J. C. Waldron, Fort Pierre, S. C., on duty VT squadron 9, scouting fleet.

Consolidated training planes: Lieut. M. R. Browning, Coronado, Calif.; Lieut. J. A. Pennington, Deering, Ga.; Lieut. R. E. Blick, Michigan City, Ind., on duty naval air station, Hampton Roads, Va.; Lieut. W. G. Tomlinson, Kansas City, Mo., on duty naval air station, Anacostia, D. C.

FLYING AND FLIERS

By LE ROY WHITMAN

WASHINGTON, already a center for things aeronautical, will be visited this week by most of the outstanding leaders in commercial aviation. The men are en route to this city for two purposes—to gather here tomorrow for the third annual aircraft engineering research conference Tuesday at Langley Field and for the special "aviation night" meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday evening in the Mayflower Hotel.

The men will meet here tomorrow evening to take the Norfolk and Washington steamer to Old Point Comfort—just a few miles from Langley Field, where the national advisory committee for aeronautics maintains its research laboratories. The conference there Tuesday will be both a review of the advances made by practice and research in the last year and planning the program for the next year.

Tuesday night they will take the boat back to Washington and many of the leaders will stay here for the Chamber of Commerce's meeting that evening, at which the subject "Why Washington Must Have a Model Airport" will be discussed by F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War; Edward P. Warner, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Maj. Clarence M. Young, director of aeronautics of the Department of Commerce. Representative Dale H. Stalker, sponsor of the bill to establish an airport at Gravelly Point, and Senator Capper and Representative Zihlman, chairman of the District committees in their respective bodies, also have been invited to speak.

The Chamber's special committee on aviation, of which Jerome Fanciulli is chairman, will meet Tuesday afternoon to draft its report for presentation to the entire membership. Members of the committee are Norman W. Oyster, vice chairman; Merritt O. Chance, Charles W. Darr, Henry M. Eaton, Charles H. Frame, W. T. Galliher, Robert N. Harper, C. Phillips Hill, William Jorg, Rudolph Jose, C. A. Keefer, Robert L. McKeever, Judge Mary O'Toole Martin A. Leese, Thomas P. Littlepage, Frank W. Mondell, C. Melvin Sharpe and Maj. Gen. Anton Stephan.

Among the guests who have been invited and who also probably will be at the Langley conference are Harry F. Guggenheim, Harold F. Pitcairn, Orville Wright, Glenn L. Martin, W. B. Mayo, Sherman Fairchild, Grover Loening, S. S. Bradley, Lieut. John Harding, Earl D. Osborn, Thomas F. Hamilton, Dr. W. F. Durand and Admiral H. I. Cone.

Washington will be represented by Brig. Gen. B. D. Foulois, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Capt. Emory S. Land, Lieut. Comdr. H. C. Wick, Dr. L. J. Briggs, Lt. Col. U. S. Grant III, Dr. George Lewis, Porter H. Adams, Star Truscott, John Victory, Halbert E. Payne, Henry A. Berliner, A. T. Stewart, George P. Tidmarsh, Carl Shory, Maj. H. C. Davidson, Dr. D. W. Taylor and Dr. George K. Burgess.

A new chapter of the National Aeronautic Association has been formed at Hampton, Va., according to word received at the headquarters here. With the Naval Air Station at Hampton Roads and the Army at Langley Field, as well as a new commercial field near Hampton, there should be an abundance of "airmindedness" in the vicinity of Hampton.

A novel commercial use of aircraft was utilized last Monday, when Herbert Fahy, of the Washington Airport, flew a party of real estate men to Point Lookout for the purpose of giving them an aerial view of the land that they had purchased so that they visualize exactly where their property is in relation to other developments and thus be better able to develop it to advantage. Fahy flew the Ryan brougham on floats. While in the air he sighted an ideal landing field near Point Lookout, which he is keeping in mind for use when flying passengers to that vicinity in land planes.

Robert E. Funkhouser passed two days last week at his new field in Camden, N. J. The field is being operated by Steuart A. Reiss, assisted by his brother, John Reiss. They are flying the Challenger which Reiss had at his field at College Park.

To investigate airway possibilities between the Panama Canal and the United States; stimulate commercial aviation in Central America; test reliability of the PW-9 pursuit plane on

Passengers on Mail Planes Note Matter-of-Fact Air

Supposedly Thrilling Drive Through Space, Night and Day, Found to Be Commonplace, Business-like Arrangement Across Country.

By PHILIP KINSLEY.
Special to The Washington Post.

Omaha, Nebr., May 12.—Airship passenger travel as a routine, daily affair, is here. It is an outgrowth of the air mail service, which next week celebrates its tenth year of operation with a record of only 1,000 pounds lost through accident and with daily flights of 22,110 miles.

Since last July, when private contractors took over the mail contracts, millions have been invested in air service as a business proposition. Today passenger service is operated on a regular schedule out of Chicago to 32 important cities. Chicago is the hub of the air lines as it is of railroad traffic.

You may buy a ticket there any evening, step into a cabin on a mail plane and fly across the prairies, over rivers, cities and mountains, with twelve stops in 1,943 miles, reaching San Francisco or Los Angeles in time for dinner the following evening. A trip of 21 hours. Or you may step into a New York-bound plane, morning or evening and be there in ten hours.

This is the log of a journey over the transcontinental air route from Chicago to San Francisco. It was made with three overnight stops, with five different ships and pilots. The writer had never been in the air before except for one short seaplane trip.

Matter-of-Fact Method.

Roaring out of Chicago on the night air mail, bound for the Pacific Coast, seems a thrilling and venturesome prospect, but it is all done in such a simple, matter-of-fact, even casual, manner, that one wonders what all the fuss is about.

You arrive at the Chicago municipal airport, Sixty-third and Cicero, on a prosaic street car, which is blocked at crossings and crawls through the traffic.

"Where is the Omaha mail plane?" you ask at the office.

"Third hangar down."

Many giant ships are resting there. The New York, Cincinnati and St. Louis planes have just come in and the mail clerks are busy, for this is all an air mail and express, as well as passenger service.

A uniformed attendant takes your grip and you stroll about, perhaps a bit nervous, but soon calmed by the businesslike arrangements that are going on in all the hangars.

Fine Clear Night Ahead.

You look at the sky and learn that the weather report shows a fine clear night ahead. While you are looking one of the stars swoops right down over the field and the roar of an arriving plane is heard. It is the Minneapolis mail.

"Passenger on that for Los Angeles," the Boeing Air Transport Co. man informs you. "We go as soon as the mail is sorted."

In the meantime, the big silver ship, a new one, is out of the hangar, its propeller pointed west, and mechanics swarming over it. These are alert, fine-looking young men. One tests the starter and the motor whirls. They all listen, with inner ear attuned to imperfections, for on the motor depends the safety of this whole venture, with a $28,000 ship.

The mail and the other passenger, a Mr. Smith, arrive; the pilot appears from his sanctum drawing on a fur-lined suit, for he sits in an open cockpit under the stars, watching mysterious levers and indicators.

Steps Placed for Passengers.

Steps are trundled out and the two passengers are placed in a little cabin about the size of the back seat of an automobile, but more cramped. There are windows on each side, made of safety glass that will not shatter. There is a map on the front wall showing the air lane to be followed.

"All right," says the passenger agent. "No smoking, please, and if you get seasick there are two containers on the shelf."

This was his second air trip.

The motor is now going hard, but the vibration is not bad in the cabin. There is a dome light to turn on for reading or writing. The field is flooded with light and at 8:50 p. m. the signal is given and the big plane starts to bump over the ground. A run down the field, with spurts of speed, then full power is applied and the bumping stops. The plane has lifted and is roaring over a fence. A freight train appears underneath and soon the long lighted streets of the city stretch out beneath and seem to float past in a lazy manner. Conversation may be indulged in by raising the voice, but you are more interested in watching the scene below.

It is soon apparent that the pilot is following a regular path, for at frequent intervals beacon lights blink at him, guiding him through the night in the same way that a ship is lighted along all the coasts. There are winking lights, lights that dance like fireflies in lonely fields; lights that seem to send up rockets, and lights that wave great arms and seem to say: "Fly on—fly on—this way."

There is no sense of the great speed at which the plane is traveling. Out of the windows the eyes rest on the big silver wings that reach out 20 feet on each side. There is something stable about them. They dip a little now and then. The moon and stars shine on them.

It is warm in the cabin, but conversation is difficult and both passengers soon lean back in comfort and watch the night world drift by in a blur of lights. A few miles to the left another plane is traveling along the same way but 50 miles from Chicago it turns south. This is the Dallas, Texas, plane.

The pilot, we are informed, has reports on air velocity at various levels. Tonight, after reaching the open country, he flies low, only a few hundred feet from the ground. Many a sleeping family must be awakened by the roar of this plane. Horses and cows, peacefully asleep in their pastures, are startled into activity and run for safety from this monster of the air. Towns appear on the horizon, a cluster of lights, and are gone. The first big landmark is the Mississippi River at Moline. The plane has gone up and the river looks like an irrigation ditch. It winds in a silver stream through dark lands and is gone.

At Iowa City on Time.

Two hours have gone and the timetable on the wall places us at Iowa City. Sure enough, here it is, a row of lights, a big beckoning beacon, a flooded air field. The plane goes down and begins to circle. The wings dip and lift at a sharp angle. There is a rope end in front of each passenger. You cling to this now as the field rises up nearer and nearer to your window. In a minute you feel a bump, then a series of jerky, dragging movements. You are on the earth again, taxiing up to a hangar.

You get out at Iowa City at 11:50 o'clock. The air is cold and the wind strong. Choppy weather ahead, you are told, as you stroll around the hangar for a few minutes, while the mail is taken out. More mechanics are on the ship. The pilot has disappeared. His name is Hamilton Lee, they say, and he has been flying ten years. This is not much of an event for him.

Gasoline is taken on, poured into the wings from a hose, and in twelve minutes the signal is given to start again. Passenger Smith is now getting tired. Not so much kick in it, after all, he says. He would not mind a little choppy weather.

The motor tested for him and all parts examined, the pilot again appears and in a few minutes the 5,750-pound load, the gross weight of the ship, is lifted again into the air by this motor that runs as smoothly as a watch and with the power of 500 horses.

Run Into Choppy Weather.

Mr. Smith has his wish and runs into choppy weather soon after leaving Iowa City. It is like crossing a bar in a small launch. The waves of the air lift the ship, batter at it, then let it sink a few feet. Then another wave catches it. The engine goes steadily on. The ship flies low over quiet, moon-bathed fields. Nothing happens. Nervousness wears away. You become confident in the power of the ship, the skill of the pilot. You think of Lindbergh facing the wide ocean in the dark. Looking at the wings and the sky there is hardly a sense of motion.

At 12:15 a big cluster of lights appears on the right. You decide this is Des Moines, and pick out the dome of the capital. There is no stop here by the night plane and soon it is gone. You settle down, find yourself getting sleepy. You have become oriented already to a new method of travel destined, perhaps, to be as common as railroad travel is today. You recall that this trip is taken every night, in all weather. You are ready for a nap. The other passenger is taking one. Another hour, and a long belt of lights, Council Bluffs shows on the right, and in a few moments you are sailing over the shining ribbon of the Missouri River. The lights of Omaha appear on the other shore, and a beacon lifts its long wand into the sky to point the landing field. Another dip and a wide circle and the hills rise up to hit you. Fences are close. Smith awakens.

"Omaha," you tell him.

The plane bumps over the field and stops in front of the gas supply. The crew rushes out. Twenty minutes for supplies. Pilot Lee strolls away to a waiting automobile. He is through for the night. Another pilot is going on with the ship. You may rest here until the following night at 12:20 and catch a new ship westbound. You had dinner in Chicago. You go to bed in Omaha. If you are in a great hurry you stay on the ship to the coast.

(The second part of this trip, from Omaha to Salt Lake City, will be reported in another dispatch.)

FLYING BARON MADE ILL BY STRAIN OF RECEPTION

WIVES IN ONE OF CARS

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Chicago today gave mighty acclaim to the three musketeers of the air—Fitzmaurice, Koehl and Von Huenefeld, of Bremen transatlantic fame.

Along flag-draped Michigan avenue, where the intertwined colors of three nations furled and eddied in the sunshine of a bright May day the city gave one of the greatest and most spontaneous demonstrations ever accorded any official guests.

Preceded by waves of "hochs," "hurrahs" and "Erin go braghs," the crew of the Bremen headed a parade in an automobile through cheering thousands that packed the avenue to the curb.

The second car contained the wives of Capt. Koehl and Maj. Fitzmaurice and in the third car rode Gov. Small.

Floats depicting the advance of aviation were in succeeding places in the procession, many of them being huge airplanes made of flowers.

People craned from windows and the Logan Monument in Grant Park was black with people, one small boy having a place of vantage on Gen. Logan's head.

So dense were the cheering crowds that at times the police were forced to clear the way for the parade—the first function of the city's formal reception to the German-Irish airmen.

Von Huenefeld showed signs of breaking under the strain of the receptions. Shortly after noon he complained of feeling ill and was treated by a doctor. Later he said he was fully recovered.

ARMY RELIEF PLANES LAND AT ST. JOHN

however, asked to be excused in order that they might be ready for tomorrow's flight. Customs officials smoothed the way for clear passage over Canadian territory.

Mitchel Field, N. Y., May 12 (A.P.).—Two army amphibian planes took off today on the first leg of a flight to Greenly Island to help bring out the transatlantic monoplane Bremen. The first plane to leave was the Oaib, piloted by Lieut. Muir Fairchild, with Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, as passenger. The hop-off was made at 9:08 a. m.

French Flier Tests Transatlantic Plane

Marseilles, France, May 12 (A.P.).—Lieut. Comdr. Louis Jerome Paris, with Maurice Bokanowski, minister of communications, as a passenger, today flew here from Paris in less than five hours in the Cams seaplane in which he hopes to cross the Atlantic. The final test flights will be made at St. Raphael and are not expected to occupy more than ten days.

The flight which Lieut. Comdr. Paris and Maurice Hurel are planning is the first official attempt to span the Atlantic from east to west which the French government has sponsored. Stops will be made at the Azores and Bermuda Islands for refueling.

New York-Bucharest Plane Is Being Built

Canton, Ohio, May 12 (A.P.).—George Fermic, Roumanian aviator and auto mobile racer, of New York City, announced here today that he is planning a nonstop flight from New York to Bucharest Roumania, in September or October of this year, in a biplane of his own design, being built by an airplane company in Long Island.

Fernic is a reserve lieutenant in the Roumanian royal air corps. The biplane which he is now having built has tandem wings, which, Fernic explained, places the center of gravity between the two sets of wings. It is to be equipped with two X-38 horsepower air-cooled motors. He has mapped a 5,000-mile course over the Atlantic over the same path followed by Ruth Elder.

HOHENZOLLERN MUST PENSION OLD WORKER

Friedrich Leopold, of Prussia, Forced by Court to Pay Employe.

Leipzig, May 12 (A.P.).—The federal supreme court rejected the appeal of Prince Friedrich Leopold of Prussia, cousin of the former kaiser and reputed one of the wealthiest Hohenzollerns, for exemption from paying his former court functionary, H. Willie, a monthly pension of 130 marks (about $33) as awarded by the lower courts.

Prince Friedrich Leopold is the owner of the two historical castles at Glienicke near Potsdam, besides possessing a palatial villa at Lugano, Switzerland. His erratic behavior repeatedly gave rise to bitter conflicts between himself and his imperial cousin. His present refusal to pension a functionary who was in his employ since 1899 was based on the plea of inability to pension former employes because of the heavy losses he had incurred by the inflation of German currency, and that therefore it behooved the state of Prussia to take over such obligations.

Rembrandt Brings $136,000 at Berlin

Berlin, May 12 (A.P.). — Germany's most valuable private art collection, owned by Oscar Huldschinsky, Upper Silesian iron magnate, on auction brought a sensation after the first hour, when $136,000 was paid for Rembrandt's portrait of Hendrickje Stoffels. The purchasers were New York and London dealers. Frans Hals' portrait of Franz Post was sold at $72,000. Rubens' "Consul Decius Questioning the Augurs" brought $18,000, while Van Ruisdael's "Haarlem Viewed From the Dunes" brought $19,000.

The two-day auction netted an aggregate of $1,196,000, unequaled in Germany since 1912.

Stevedore Handles $150,000,000 in Gold

La Havre, France, May 12 (A.P.).—The head stevedore of the French line here has become blase as the result of handling $150,000,000 in gold shipped from the United States to France since January 15. "Hurry up with that junk; let's get the real cargo," he told his men as they were about to begin unloading the liner France, which carried $10,000,000 in 200 kegs.

SUMNER, WITH 19 POINTS, WINS KITE-FLYING PRIZE

34 Take Part in Competition in Which Many Different Designs Are Shown.

MEDAL FOR KVALE'S SON

Flying a plain, durable, paper kite with extreme steadiness, John Sumner, of 1734 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, amassed 19 points in the third and final kite flying contest of the Community Center Department yesterday afternoon in the Meridian Hill Park and won the silver loving cup award.

Thirty-four other competitors, flying kites of many and varied designs, failed to make their kites "behave" in the perfect manner in which young Sumner controlled his kite. The winner flew his kite the highest, and at all times had it under control.

Arthur L. Kvale, son of Representative O. J. Kvale, of Minnesota, of the McReynolds apartments, was awarded a bronze medal for maintaining the greatest "pull" on a kite. Thomas M. Robins, of 2830 Twenty-seventh street northwest, with a red and green box-kite, was adjudged the winner of best design and workmanship. Exhibiting a kite shaped and colored like a huge black bat, Charles Cook, of 1761 Euclid street northwest, was victorious in the class of originality in design.

More than 200 persons witnessed the contest. The kite flying tournament was held as a part of the Community Center Department's program to instill interest in the study of aeronautics. The contest judges were Lieut. Walter Hinton, former naval flier; Carl Shorey, of the National Aeronautic Association, and O. B. Porter.

The next of the department's contests in the tournament to promote the aeronautic study will be held Saturday at Bolling Field from 9 o'clock until noon. This contest will be for model scientific planes, which can rise the highest distance from the ground, and are durable.

INQUIRY INTO SCHOOL PROPAGANDA URGED

Utilities Revelations Are "Appalling," Says N. E. A. Secretary.

(Associated Press.)

A suggestion that the executive committee of the National Education Association study the extent to which agencies other than public utilities "have imposed on teachers in the schools" was made yesterday by J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the association, in a letter to members of the committee.

Crabtree explained that he wanted "information concerning the use of schools by power organizations" to place before the executive committee and board of directors at their Minneapolis meeting June 30. He said revelations from the Federal Trade Commission investigation into public utilities were "appalling."

"I do not need to tell you," Crabtree said, "that the leading men in the power industry censure these agencies as we do for taking advantage of the schools. It is evident that the power agencies have two purposes. They have taken pride in preparing information of value for the schools, while at the same time they have been waging an outside campaign to warn the general public against the dangers of public and municipal ownership of public utilities. It appears that they have frequently allowed this second purpose to creep into the work they are doing for the schools."

FLYING AND FLIERS

long flights, and feasibility of transporting a pursuit unit from the canal to this country in event of emergency, two of these planes of the Army will fly from France Field, Canal Zone, to Langley Field, Va., and return this month, the War Department having authorized the flight and nations to be traversed agreeing to it.

The flight also will enable the Twenty-fourth Pursuit Squadron, from which the planes will be taken, to be represented at the gunnery matches at Langley Field, May 25-June 10.

The route of the planes announced last week by the War Department is 1,925 miles long from the take-off to the continental United States, as follows:

France Field to David, Panama, 200 miles; David to Managua, Nicaragua, 375; Managua to Guatamala City, 350; Guatemala City to Minitlitlan, Mexico, 350; Minitlitlan to Tampico, Mexico, 400; Tampico to Brownsville, Tex., 250.

From Brownsville the flight will follow the regular airways or what is known as the southern route via Galveston, Montgomery, Fort Bragg, N. C., and Langley Field.

The employment of four new inspectors was announced last week by Gilbert G. Budwig, chief of the inspection section of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce. They are Paul Baer, August Koerbing, A. Alberry and I. Ballinger. They all will be assigned to field service.

The newly formed Omaha-Winnipeg Air Association has authorized Gould Dietz, National Aeronautic Association governor for Nebraska, to interview officials in Washington with a view to securing a survey of the proposed air line between the two cities. Representatives from commercial clubs in Grand Rapids, N. Dak.; Watertown, S. Dak.; Sioux City, Iowa, and Omaha, aided in the formation of the new organization.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander in chief, Asiatic fleet, was directed by the Navy Department last week to give assistance to the flight of the four Southampton flying boats of the British Royal Air Force in Far Eastern waters in November, when the planes will visit Philippine ports.

The air tender of the Asiatic fleet will plant mooring buoys as necessary and will be present at the ports of Puerta Princesa, Manila and Salomiague as the flying boats pass from Singapore to Hongkong if practicable.

William P. MacCracken, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce in Charge of Aeronautics, is in Wichita, Kans., attending the air marking conference. The conference is being attended by representative men in the industry and is endeavoring to standardize the markings which are being placed in increasing numbers for the guidance of airmen.

Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautic Association, returned last week to his desk at the headquarters in the Barr Building. Mr. Adams has been away for five weeks in Florida and then in Atlantic City recuperating from an illness.

At the request of the Cuban government, the War Department has indicated its willingness to designate officers to inspect four airplanes at the plant of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., which are being constructed under contract for the Cuban government.

In order that the request of the Cuban government may be met, the War Department has asked that copies of the contract, specifications and blue prints be furnished for inspection.

The delegation from the chamber of commerce of the Oranges and Maplewood, N. J., flew to Washington to attend the convention of the national organization last week. There were eight in the party. They flew from Curtiss Field, Long Island, in two Fairchild monoplanes, landing here at Bolling Field.

In one plane were George H. Becker, village president of South Orange; Horatio Bell, Montclair district manager of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co.; A. Edmund Williamson, executive secretary of the Oranges chamber, and G. Clifford Jones, editor of the Daily Courier of the Oranges. In the other plane were Clarence H. Potter, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of the Oranges; Amandus William Almquist, West Orange automotive expert, who arranged the flight; Sidney H. Fine, of the Newark Star-Eagle, and Edwin J. Barrett, of the Newark Evening News.

Three of the group had flown before. President Becker has traveled by air in Europe and between Florida and Cuba. Mr. Almquist, former associate of Thomas A. Edison, flew last summer from Los Angeles to Hadley Field, New Brunswick, N. J., with a cargo of 1,500 pounds, his purpose being to demonstrate the practicability of commercial coast-to-coast flying. Mr. Potter was the other for whom the trip was not a new experience.

The international aviation conference will meet May 29 at Madrid. The United States will be represented by Maj. Barton K. Young, Air Attache of the American Embassy at Paris, as official observer, and John G. Ide, representing the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, as unofficial observer.

Library Division Hoards Literature of Capital

Section Set Aside for Records of Washinton Has 2,500 Books and 170 Maps Telling City's History From Early Times.

Young though it may be in years and tradition and lacking in the assurance time has lent the cities of the continent, Washington is not without its past and not without its literature. Washington has its Washingtoniana.

For 25 years Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the District, and Miss Katherine K. Patten, a member of his staff, have been hoarding old volumes, rich in the early history of the city. They foresaw a day when the Public Library would give over an entire division to the story of Washington and the written records of its past.

That day is here, and the new Washingtoniana division has been established as a permanent addition to the institution at Seventh street and New York avenue. Miss Patten is its curator, and within her domain are 2,500 books, 6 vertical file cases of pamphlets and clippings and 170 maps, all of Washington.

Buried in the old volumes are half-forgotten tales of official Washington in the early eighteenth century, quaint anecdotes that add background of color to the formal city of today.

There is the story of Mrs. Anne Royall's famous interview with President John Quincy Adams. Frustrated in her every attempt to reach the President, the correspondent for "Paul Pry" followed him one morning when he went to the river for a swim. There, the story relates, she sat upon his clothes and refused to leave until President Adams answered the questions she put to him.

Then again, there is the anecdote of Christian Hines, who tells in his "Early Recollections of Washington City" of how the Turkish Minister asked President Jefferson for a number of wives for his accommodation during his stay in America.

In the collection are old books of etiquette, in one of which we are told that "a genteel female is rarely seen walking out unattended in the street."

The same volume declares, with authority, that "the greatest and most respectable business that is done in Washington is keeping boarding houses," adding "they are mostly kept by widows."

Among the rarer books preserved by Miss Patten is the 1822 Directory of Washington, the city's first. The directory lists some 2,356 residents. Even rarer is the 1827 directory, which the library has only in its temporary possession.

There are practical references in the collection of incalculable value to the student, the antiquarian and the author. In this category fall the municipal reports of the District, acts affecting the District, hearings on appropriation bills, guide books, yearbooks of societies, periodicals published by various associations and reports of churches, hospitals and other institutions.

Each day Miss Patten goes through the Congressional Record of the day preceding, making note of all bills, speeches and comment bearing in any way on Washington. These are immediately ordered and placed in her files.

Dr. Bowerman relates entertaining stories of his early struggles to acquire individual collections for his Washingtoniana. By far the most important of these was the collection of the late James A. Wineberger.

When Wineberger died in 1906, Dr. Bowerman was only able to command $1,200 of the library's funds for the purchase of the collection. The sum was not enough, and the books were sold at auction, over his bid. Seven years later, following the death of the purchasers, Dr. Bowerman acquired the collection from their executors for a mere $35 for cartage.

Many rare volumes the librarian said, are now in the possession of families here, whom he thinks would readily surrender them to the library if they knew their importance to the collection. He has asked that District residents allow library representatives to look over their books before discarding them as trash.

The map collection was only recently completed, when W. Lloyd Wright donated a map of the city in 1830. The library already had in its possession the earliest map of the site of the Capital City, known as "Washington in Embryo," compiled by Dr. J. M. Toner. They also have the L'Enfant "paper map" and the Ellicott map of 1792. Serving as a basis is the Hood collection, purchased by the library from James F. Hood a number of years ago.

A unique feature of the library's material on Washington is a collection of 27 scrapbooks, compiled by Miss Patten, consisting of clippings from many sources. Historic houses of Washington take up two volumes, and there are others on monuments, hotels, restaurants, and innumerable other subjects.

Records of the Columbia Historical Society, comprising 23 volumes, on file in the collection, cover many aspects of the historical, political and social development of Washington. Outstanding among these is W. B. Bryan's "History of the National Capital From Its Foundation Through the Period of the Adoption of the Organic Act." Others of importance in the collection are local histories compiled by William Tindall, W. F. Dodd, Helen Nicolay and Louise P. Latimer. The latter, who wrote "Your Washington and Mine," is a member of the library staff.

Capt. Hervey Leaves Post at Georgetown

Capt. Stewart D. Hervey, U. S. Infantry, military instructor at Georgetown University, has been transferred to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., effective October 1, for duty with the Second Division. War Department orders announced yesterday.

Capt. Hervey has been on duty at Georgetown since 1923. Before leaving for Fort Sam Houston he will be detailed as military instructor at one of the Citizens Military Training Camps which open in June. A native of Galveston, Tex., Capt. Hervey entered the Army in 1917 at the time of the World War. He was stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., before being ordered to duty here.

Disposal of Mystery Hat Puzzles Salvation Army

If a hat could talk what story could it tell? This is a question Salvation Army officials have been trying to answer for themselves, particularly in reference to one particular hat.

In the organization's storerooms in the rear of its Men's Social Service Building, 209 B street, is a high silk top piece. No one there knows from whence it came, or whither it will go, for that matter.

The questions they ask themselves include whether it donned the head of some rich official at one time, whether it was discarded by a hack driver of the old school or whether some dude, in a moment of haste, just cast it aside with instructions that it be sent to the Salvation Army.

What is the Salvation Army going to do with it? A "down and outer" would not have any use for a high silk hat, it is pointed out. Another variety would be much more serviceable and fit in better with the rest of his attire.

In the meantime, the hat remains in the storeroom, where it has been, nobody knows just how long. It is one of the many gifts received by the Salvation Army. The great majority of them are useful.

HESSE ORDERS CARE OF STATIONS' FLAGS

Fly Bright Ones in Sunshine, and Old Colors in Rain, He Tells Police.

Flags on police stations must be better protected from the elements under the terms of an order issued yesterday by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police. The text of the order follows:

"It is directed that in the future the flags on all station houses be raised at 7 a. m. and lowered at sunset. Flags should not be allowed to fly after sunset at any time of the year and precinct commanders are held responsible for observance of this order.

"Several of the patriotic societies of the District have brought to the attention of the Commissioners the bad condition of flags on some of the stations. Captains should instruct those responsible for raising and lowering flags to have everything done that is possible to keep the bunting in good condition. In rainy and stormy weather old flags should be used instead of new ones if they are available. In fair weather clean, bright flags should always be used."

ALEXANDRIA BEGINS DRIVE TO GET $30,000 TO HELP MEMORIAL

Committee Makes Final Arrangements and Teams Start Tomorrow.

ABOUT 150 WORKERS WILL VISIT CITIZENS

Campaign Is to Continue During Week—Silver Moon Council to Entertain.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
124 N. Patrick St., Alexandria, Va.

The drive of the citizens' committee, headed by Robert S. Jones, to raise a fund of $30,000 for the purchase, restoration and presentation to Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion, of the old Gadsby's Tavern and City Hotel property, will be officially opened tomorrow. Approximately 150 workers, men and women, representing practically every patriotic and civic organization in the city, will participate Every man and woman in the city who desires to contribute to this cause will be given an opportunity to do so.

The drive will continue throughout this week. Considerable preliminary work has already been done by the committee, and now nothing remains but to obtain the response of citizens.

The buildings, when restored, will serve a dual purpose—that of a memorial to the World War dead and a home for the living members of the legion. The plans also include accommodations for all the patriotic organizations of the city which desire to have their headquarters there, and a collection of museums, under the one roof.

The museums will be opened to the public and a small admission fee, the proceeds of which will be used as a maintenance fund, will be charged. It is stated that during the last year 145,000 persons visited some of the historic buildings in this city. According to local historians, there is no building in the city, or, in fact, in this section of the country, with such valuable historical associations as Gadsby's Tavern. Its historic value, however, has been largely overlooked until very recently, and the American Legion post has taken upon itself the duty of restoring to the city, the State and the Nation this group of buildings, and in acquainting the public with its history and the important part it played in the early days of the Nation.

Silver Moon Council, No. 15, degree of Pocahontas, will have a visitation from the council from Herndon, Va., at the meeting to be held tomorrow evening in Carpenters and Joiners' Hall, and also the Great Junior Sagamore, of the Great Council of Virginia, Harry A. Sagar, will be present. The degree of the order will be conferred by the visiting council. After the business session a social meeting will be held Past Sachem J. William May will address the gathering on fraternity.

A large delegation of the council will leave on Tuesday for Lynchburg to attend the great council of Virginia.

A reception of new members will be held by St. Mary's Branch of the Holy Name Society following the regular service in St. Mary's Church this evening. The society will adjourn to Lyceum Hall where an address will be delivered by Representative John J Douglas, of Boston, Mass., and also by P. J. Haltigan, reading clerk of the House of Representatives. Several musical numbers have been arranged

The Westminster Bible Class of the Second Presbyterian Church invites all women's classes to meet with them at 9:30 this morning, in observance of Mother's Day. The members of the class are urged to bring the women of their family and their friends.

Mother's Day will be generally observed in the various churches, and in some special services will be held in honor of the mothers. Alexandria Lodge, No. 758, B. P. O. Elks, will hold services appropriate to Mother's Day at its meeting tomorrow night.

The B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist Church will hold a special service at 7 o'clock, to which mothers of the members are invited. Music will be by the B. Y. P. U. quartette and a solo by Benjamin Wheatley.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Lannon, who died on Thursday at her home, 201 North Pitt street, took place at 9:30 yesterday morning from St. Mary's Catholic Church. The services were conducted by the Rev. M. J. Quinn and in the sanctuary were the Rev. W. A. McKeefry, pastor; the Rev. L. F Kelly and the Rev. M. J. Cannon, assistant pastors. Pallbearers were George H. Harlow, Edward Harlow, John A. Lannon, jr., Robert E. McGahey, James Bradley and Michael T. Dwyer.

Cain Radican, aged 75 years, a car inspector of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, who resided at Hume, Arlington County, died on Friday in the Alexandria Hospital. The body will be sent to Baltimore tomorrow for burial after services at the funeral home, 809 Cameron street.

The body of Mrs. Eleanor E. Ogden, widow of Dr. David M. Ogden, who died in Washington, was brought here yesterday and interred in the Presbyterian Cemetery. Services were conducted by the Rev. Charles Abernathy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning for Miss Cecilia Ann Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Cox, from the home, 1205 King street, conducted by the Rev. P. L. Vernon, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Last year 500 million pounds of explosives were transported in the United States and Canada in 1927 without injury or loss of life.

United States Leads As World's Great Lender

(Associated Press.)

American investors in the last seven years have effectively displaced Great Britain from its standing as the world's greatest lending nation.

The Commerce Department, taking British compilations of that country's foreign investments from 1920 to 1927, inclusive, has set the total at $4,121,000,000. Foreign capital issues financed in the United States during the same period had a total value of $6,836,000,000.

The foreign capital flotation in both the United States and Great Britain reached new high levels in 1927. Though the United States is now furnishing more funds for Latin-America, Canada and Europe than is Great Britain, the current totals of British investments in Africa and the Far East are still considerably in excess of those of the United States in that area.

Citizenship Course On N. E. A.'s Program

Minneapolis, Minn., May 12 (A.P.).—Education for citizenship will be the general theme of the program before the sixty-sixth annual convention of the National Education Association here July 1 to 6, arrangements for which have been announced by Cornelia S. Adair, president.

The association's executive committee, board of trustees and board of directors will meet June 29.

THRILLS MARK RENEWAL OF DEEP RUN HUNT MEET

CROWD OF 5,000 ATTENDS

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., May 12.—Whipping finishes, with every race a stirring contest from flag-fall to finish, a thrilling, gay and colorful crowd of 5,000 horse lovers and smart society folk, which thronged the rolling course of greensward, marked the renewal of the Deep Run Hunt Club's spring meet at Curl's Neck Estate this afternoon.

Run amid historic scenes, within the shadow of the homes of Diomed, Sir Archy and other giants of turf of bygone days, the meet, in point of attendance, quality of racing and efficiency of management, was an outstanding success.

Thoroughbreds from the enchanting Fauquier hunting country were first home in two events over post and rail. Eclipse I, brown gelding, son of Highland Chief and Sweet Marie II, owned by Gen. William Mitchell, of Middleburg, with J. T. Skinner, jr., Middleburg crack gentleman rider, up, took Hunting Plate in a run over a two-mile course. Watch Me, from the stable of Fred Hummel, Hopewell sportsman, Dr. E T. Hughes in the saddle, finished second, with Redwood, owned by J. R. Tucker and ridden by Dr. J. M. Hughes, in show position.

Zotimar, owned by Arthur White, Middleburg, and piloted by Blakely Lodge, triumphed in the three-mile Deep Run Hunt Cup. Drummer Boy, running in the colors of B. D. Spilman, jr., was second. The Flu, owned by Thomas B. Gay, president of the Deep Run Hunt Club, ridden by Crompton Smith, was third.

Louvain, recently purchased by Mr. Gay, under driving finish, with Racing Star at his quarters and closing fast, was first at the finish line in Curl's Neck, a race of about one mile over natural country. Buttonbright, entry of Dr. J. P. McDonough, was third.

More than nine-tenth of Italy's 116,000,000 railway passengers in 1926 traveled third class.

Brown Table Linoleum Doomed in British Navy

London, England (A.P.).—Brown linoleum tablecloths, for centuries the customary table covering in the British Jack Tar's messes, are apt to make the most hard-boiled bluejacket feel a bit off his food, especially in stormy weather.

This fact was brought to the attention of the admiralty some time ago, with the result that an admiralty fleet order has just been issued authorizing a change to white leather table cloths as the old ones are discarded in the fleet's spring cleaning.

The white cloths will be replaced every five months. To protect them from the markings made by hot dishes, a short length of the brown linoleum is to be used at the end of each table as a mat.

SENATORS CALLED IN INJUNCTION SUIT

Coal Investigators Wanted in Hearing on Restraining Songs by Miners.

Indiana, Pa., May 12 (A.P.).—United States Senators Wheeler, Wagner, Gooding and Pine, who made up the Senate subcommittee which visited this district some weeks ago while investigating the soft coal industry, have been asked by counsel for the United Mine Workers to come here and testify at the injunction hearings now in progress in the Indiana County Court.

The injunction, granted the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation last November, restrained union miners and their sympathizers from singing "songs of an intimidating or hostile nature in the back yard of the Magyar Church" at Rossiter. The church is located near the entrance to a Clearfield Corporation mine.

Bruce Sciotti, union attorney, today said he had written the senators, requesting them to appear in person if possible and to make depositions if they were unable to come to Indiana.

Five witnesses for the concern testified today. Several said they had been annoyed by idle miners while passing the church on the way to the mine. The witnesses said they were called "vile and insulting" names.

Move to Obtain Jobs For Middle-Aged Fails

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Clement Schwinges, who last September founded the Action Membership Association in an effort to find jobs for middle-aged unemployed men, told a meeting of the society last night that his program was a failure. The meeting was attended by 11 members.

He said that since the organization of the body he had received 1,400 applications for jobs and had only been able to place 200.

"The biggest mistake I made was in thinking that those who have jobs would contribute to the financial support of this organization as a provision against the day when they might find themselves out of work," he said.

Y. M. C. A. Asks Right Of Armed U. S. Forces

Minneapolis, Minn., May 12 (A.P.).—Federal Judge W. A. Cant was asked today to issue an order recognizing Y. M. C. A. workers in war zones as members of the United States armed military force, thus making them eligible to benefits accorded war veterans. The writ filed today directly affects thirteen persons, but involves the status of thousands of war workers not enlisted in the armed military force.

15 Jalisco Insurgents Die in Mexican Fight

Mexico City, May 12 (A.P.).—The war department was informed today that fifteen insurgents were killed and a number wounded when federal troops defeated a band which attacked the town of El Grullo, in the state of Jalisco. No federal casualties were mentioned in the dispatch.

GERMANY UNMOVED BY ELECTION FIGHT, VOTE NEXT SUNDAY

Campaign Becomes Confused Whirl of Petty Party Squabbles.

FOREIGN POLICY PLAYS MINOR ROLE FIRST TIME

Nationalists Confine Selves to Urging More Powers for President.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Berlin, May 12.—The last Sunday before the German polls will find the country more quiet than at any previous election campaign. The politicians are hurling vituperations at each other, but the public so far is unmoved.

There is almost a complete absence of fisticuffs, and shooting affrays between rival partisans such as usually characterize the German elections. The absence of clear-cut issues has contributed to this peacefulness.

The Republican regime now is so firmly in the saddle that the Nationalists do not dare bring up a monarchist plank, but compromise by demanding greater powers for the president after the American system. The consensus is that the Nationalists are fighting a losing battle, though the intricate German electoral system leads to the belief that no party will emerge a definite victor.

Foreign Policy in Minor Role.

The foreign policy is playing, for the first time since the war, a minor role. Only the extremists on both sides attack Dr. Gustav Stresemann's policy openly, while the Nationalists who would like to attack it can not, as they are represented in a cabinet indorsing the foreign minister. The election resolves itself into a confused whirl of petty party squabbles, each trying to elbow the other from the next government coalition by alledgedly sensational disclosures of each other's wickedness and duplicity which leave every one cold outside of professional politicians.

So far the campaign has been rich in humorous incidents. The Nationalists, by a poster showing the Bremen flying over the Atlantic, carrying the monarchist flag, succeeded in making themselves temporarily ridiculous, but the posters now have been withdrawn. Another bearing President von Hindenburg's portrait, against which the veteran chief executive sharply protested, also was withdrawn.

Socialists Give Out Soap.

The Socialists raised a lough by dishing out to voters cakes of soap on which true Marxist axioms were printed, while the extreme Nationalists were unconsciously sarcastic at their own expense by circulating posters showing themselves as Don Quixote tilting at the windmills.

While the Nationalists and Democrats are fighting to maintain their positions, the Socialists and Dr. Stresemann's People's Party are trying vigorously to gain ground.

Coast Guard Firing On Boat Investigated

Charleston, S. C., May 12 (A.P.).—Maj. Charles P. Elliott, of Beaufort, who charges that his boat was fired upon without cause by a coast guard patrol boat recently, was invited today to testify here Monday before a coast guard board of investigation.

Maj. Elliott, United States Army, retired, entered a protest with Washington authorities a few days ago concerning the alleged firing upon his boat and today Lieut. Comdr. G. B. Lofberg, of the Washington headquarters of the coast guard, began organization here of a board of inquiry.

Dry Officers Are Held For Killing Motorist

Fresno, Calif., May 12 (A.P.).—Alvin R. Cole, a constable, and Special Deputy Sheriff Ira B. Chalmers were held on charges of manslaughter here today for shooting to death Frank Aiello in Pineale, Calif., last Saturday night. Cole and Chalmers fired on an automobile in which Aiello was riding in the belief that they were about to capture a liquor runner. No liquor was found.

The warrant was issued by City Justice Earl J. Church at the request of Frank Curran, an attorney who had been retained by the local organization of the Sons of Italy to prosecute the case after a grand jury failed to indict the two officers.

2 Georgia Delegates Unpledged by G. O. P.

Ellijay, Ga., May 12 (A.P.).—Roscoe Fickett, of Jasper, Ga., was chosen as delegate and John A. Corn, of Blairsville, alternate, to the National Convention at Kansas City by the Republicans of the Ninth Congressional District in convention here today.

The delegate was uninstructed, and after the meeting Mr. Pickett said he was going to the convention "with an open mind, and at present had no preference for the presidential nomination.

Boy King Has Entered Race of Toy Balloons

Bucharest, Roumania, May 12 (A.P.).—A movement for the development of aviation has been started in Roumania. A society for propaganda has been formed and, with the Royal Aviation Club, is seizing every opportunity to impress the need of airplanes upon the population. Funds to equip the Roumanian air force will be sought through popular subscription.

Tomororw, as propaganda, a toy balloon race competition will be held. King Kihai, Roumania's 6-year-old sovereign, has entered as a competitor and it is expected that all the school children in Bucharest will enter on May 20 and 21 in a huge aviation meeting to be held in Bucharest.

Town's Power Plant Pays Citizens' Taxes

Colby, Kans., May 12 (A.P.).—Six neighboring towns are going to pay the personal and real property taxes for the 1,500 odd residents of Colby, and they may also retire a bonded indebtedness of $200,000.

After scanning the earnings report of the Municipal Power Plant, the city council waived all real and personal property levies and adopted a plan to call the bonds. The plant earned $36,000 in the last 12 months. Power is furnished to six towns within a radius of 35 miles.

Princess Features West Point Dance

West Point, N. Y., May 12 (A.P.).—Another princess has featured a cadet hop and has made another of Uncle Sam's future officers the talk of the mess. Princess Miriam Potenziani, eldest daughter of the Governor of Rome, was the first of her rank to visit the academy since Princess Ileana of Roumania. Cadet David W. Traub, of New York, was her escort.

Ringling and Dailey Join Air Line Board

Norfolk, Va., May 12 (A.P.).—John Ringling, circus owner of Sarasota, Fla., and Clarke G. Dailey, of New York, were elected to the directorate of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Co., and fifteen directors were reelected at the annual stockholders meeting at Petersburg yesterday, it was announced here today.

The financial report for the year 1927 to stockholders showed a railway operating income of $11,316,349.64, a decrease of $2,964,548.35 under 1926 and a net railway operating income of $10,388,759.59 after the deduction of equipment and joint facility rents, a decrease of $1,625,418.68. Other income totaled $2,225,530.74, an increase of $335,587.36, giving a gross income of $12,624,200.56, a decrease of $1,289,831.82. The net income totaled $31,576, a decrease of $3,147,093.52.

Miss Marie Stephens Crowned May Queen

Special to The Washington Post.

Tappahannock, Va., May 12. — Miss Marie Stephens, daughter of Capt. Stephens, of Washington, D. C., was crowned Queen of the May at the annual festival of St. Margaret's School here today. The maids of honor were Miss Lucille Derrick and Miss Bebie Taylor. Miss Louise Cressman, of Philadelphia, was Lord of May. The scene was an old English May day, and the pageant in honor of the queen was especially beautiful.

Ladies of the court, bridge girls and village children stepped upon the lawn in the "Wind, Rain and Sunshine Dance." The fete was witnessed by many visitors from Washington, Norfolk, Richmond, Williamsburg and other cities.

Tailor Returns $2,000 Dog to Lillian Gish

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 12.—A $2,000 spaniel which has appeared in movies and is owned by Lillian Gish, the movie actress, left its license home and trotted into a tailor shop owned by Charles Conora, on Southern boulevard, the Bronx, on December 5, last, according to the tailor.

Conora, unaware of the dogs' value, kept him until he was arrested, charged with grand larceny. In Yorkville Court today the complaint was withdrawn because the dog had been returned and Conora was discharged. According to the police Conora had the dog once before and had returned it for a reward.

Sir Edmund Gosse Has Operation.

London, May 12 (A.P.).—Sir Edmund Gosse, critic and man of letters, today was believed to be recovering as well as could be expected from the effects of a serious operation which he underwent on Thursday. The operation, however, was likely to prove a severe tax on the recuperative powers of a man of 78.

COOLIDGES WILL WITNESS COLONIAL DAY PAGEANT

29 Organizations to Take Part in St. John's College Exercises Tuesday.

OPERA AMONG FEATURES

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 12.—Customs and costumes of two centuries ago will hold sway here for nine hours Tuesday, when the historic colonial day pageant of St. John's College and 29 other organizations will be presented.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will arrive here at 3:15 o'clock to witness a part of the program, which will be given over to tableaux and enactment of historic events of colonial times. One of the features of the program will be the reproduction of "The Beggars' Opera," by a cast of talented players, on the spot of the Annapolis Theater. The production opened the theater, reputed to have been the first in America, in 1752.

The program will begin in the morning at 10:30 o'clock with a lacrosse game between St. John's College and the Onondaga Indians. At 11 o'clock, the "town crier" will begin his announcements and from then until 9:30 o'clock at night, colonial days will be reenacted. A number of the events will be presented on the campus of St. John's College and other features at the State House and at historic taverns and inns of the city. The first dress rehearsals of the episodes, many of which deal with the lives of Washington and Lafayette will be held Monday under the direction of T. M. Cushing, director of the Play Arts Guild, who is in charge of the arrangements.

The 29 organizations cooperationg with St. John's College in the pageant are: American Legion, the Elks, Catholic Daughters of America, the chamber of commerce, Civitan Club, Colonial Dames of America, Daughters of the Eastern Star, Daughters of Pocahontas, Daughters of the American Revolution, Odd Fellows, Knights of Columbus, Ladies of St. Mary's Catholic parish, League of Women Voters, Loyal Order of Moose, Maryland Society of Sons of the Revolution, Masonic Orders, Red Men, Red Cross, Rotary Club, Scions of Colonial Cavaliers, Society of Children of the Revolution, State Land Office, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Women's Benefit Association, Anne Arundel County Woman's Club and Woman's Auxiliary of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Helen Wills Is Guest At Tobin's Luncheon

The Hague, May 12 (A.P.).—Richard M Tobinfi the American Minister, gave a private luncheon today in honor of Miss Helen Wills, tennis star.

During her stay in Holland, Miss Wills has done much sightseeing, finding the greatest attraction, perhaps, in the old silver shops and museums. Miss Wills and her partner, Miss Penelope Anderson, planned to return to Paris Sunday.

Greek Cabinet Votes To Stabilize Drachma

Athens, Greece, May 12 (A.P.).—The cabinet and council today decided to stabilize the drachma at 375 to the pound sterling by legislative decree.

The drachma of Greece was quoted this week at 1.3 cents, having fallen from the prewar par of exchange of 19.3 cents in American currency.

Second Bishop Dies In Exile From Mexico

San Antonio, Tex., May 12 (A.P.).—The Rt. Rev. Ignacio Valdezpino, exiled bishop of Aguas Calientes, Mexico, who has been ill in a hospital here, died at 1:45 a. m. today. A brother, Juvinal Valdezpino, of Aguas Calientes, was at his bedside.

The bishop was taken to the hospital three weeks ago today, upon his return from Havana, with the most Rev. Jose Mora y del Rio, archbishop of Mexico, who died April 22. Bishop Valdezpino died without knowing that his superior had gone ahead of him.

He was born in Chalcalhuaes, State of Zacatecas, Mexico, 67 years ago. He served as bishop of Sonora, and later was made bishop of Aguas Calientes.

The prelate was deported from Mexico a little over a year ago during the controversy over the Mexican religious laws.

Parker Newton, Artist, Hurt Abroad.

Paris, May 12 (A.P.).—The New York Herald today said that Parker Newton, New York artist and art critic, was seriously hurt in an automobile accident between Paris and Dieppe. He was taken to the American Hospital at Neuilly.

AMERICAN U. DRAMA CLUB TO PRESENT SHAKESPEARE PLAY

"Twelfth Night" Production Friday Will Be the Big Event of Year.

SENATOR DILL GIVES ADDRESS AT CHAPEL

New Fellowship of $1,000 for Economics Work Is Announced.

The outstanding student dramatic event of the college year at American University will take place Friday night when the Dramatic Club presents Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" at the auditorium on the campus, Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues.

Under direction of Will Hutchins, professor of art, who himself has had long experience on the stage, the cast has been hard at work for weeks, the final selection of roles has been made and final arrangements are being completed for the annual function which has been established as a Shakespeare tradition.

Tentative plans call for the cast to journey tomorrow to Millersville, Md., to present their "premiere." Several members of the club reside in Millersville, and it is understood arrangements have been made for a rousing reception to the college players.

Orsino, Duke of Illyria, will be played by Roland Parrish; Sir Toby Belch, by Roland Rice; Sir Andrew Aguecheek, by George Sixbey, and Malvolio, by J Courtney Hayward, while the feminine leads will be taken by Lucille Sparks as Olivia and Laura Barrett as Viola. The stage manager of Prof. Hutchins' student staff is W. Willis Delaplain.

Costumes to Be Elaborate.

The old comedy, which in its presentation by the student cast is characterized by Prof. Hutchins as "very funny," will be given in Elizabethan fashion by the use of very simple scenery, but with elaborate costuming.

Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, delivered an address to chapel Thursday on the "Advance of American Civilization." By the use of a mass of statistics Senator Dill pointed out to the students why the civilization and standards of living of the United States have reached so high a plane.

Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, addressed the Arts Club, of this city, Tuesday night on the subject of the "Poetry of Keats." Dr. and Mrs. Woods were dinner guests of the club.

A new fellowship of $1,000 has been offered by American University, it was announced last night by Dr. Edward T. Devine, dean of the graduate school.

The fellowship will be for the year 1928-29, and will be open to graduates of any American college, with preference to those who have already done some post-graduate work in economics or social economics. It will pay $1,000 in all, which includes tuition and $842 net. Announcements of the new fellowship have been sent by Dr. Devine to colleges throughout the country.

Examinations to Begin.

Doctors' examinations will begin tomorrow at the graduate school. They will be oral examinations before the graduate university board and a list of invited experts. More than 100 invitations have been sent out to distinguished and prominent educators and experts in the lines on which the candidates for doctor's degree will be examined in the public oral examination.

Mother's Day will be observed at the College of Liberal Arts on the campus this afternoon, when Mrs. W. S. Abernethy, wife of the pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will deliver the principal address. The services, which have been arranged by the student vespers committee, of which Willis Delaplain is chairman, will be open to the public at 3 o'clock. A student quartet will furnish music appropriate to the occasion.

Another addition to the faculty has been announced with the appointment of Miss Iva Irene DeWitt, to be instructor of biology, beginning next September. Miss DeWitt has been instructor in biological sciences at Beaver College, Jenkintown, Pa. She is a graduate of Bucknell, with the degrees both of bachelor of arts and master of arts. She formerly taught in the high school at Easton, Pa. Her home is Sunbury Pa.

Among the outstanding events of the past week at the college was the annual banquet of the International Relations Club, which had as its honor guest the distinguished Esthonian educator, Baron Alphonse Heyking.

Baron Is Speaker.

The baron was principal figure at the banquet at the college dining hall, and afterward in Hurst Hall delivered an address on the question of "Racial Nationalities." Baron Heyking stressed the value of "political citizenship" as contrasted with the ideal that each nationality should have its own state. He praised the United States' system of the "melting pot" and "crucible" where racial minorities appeared to be fused under freedom into political citizenship, instead of feeling hatred for the majority rule, as he said was the case in many European countries. The speaker was introduced by Dr. Ellery C. Stowell, professor of international law of American University.

At the club banquet new officers for the year were installed, including Roland Rice as president, succeeding Hugh W. Speer. The banquet hall was decorated with the flags of many nations, and the menu, by Jesse A. Millard, steward of the college, was of international character. Miss Mary Jane Stewart was chairman of the banquet committee, assisted by James Johnson and Elizabeth Hill.

Banquet Is Given.

The annual banquet of the Oxford Fellowship, ministerial club of the college, was held Tuesday night, with the Rev. William P. Tolley, of Drew University, as speaker. Clarence C. Knapp, retiring president of the fellowship, presided and installed the new president, Louis M. Young.

A college dance was held at the Women's Residence Hall Friday night, under auspices of the Women's Self-Government Association. Ruth Rinkel, president of the association, headed the committee in charge.

Milton Crist has been elected editor of the 1929 college year book, and Raymond Spaeth has been named business manager, succeeding Samuel Billbrough and Roland Rice, respectively. The new year book for 1928 is expected to be ready for delivery this week. Samuel Billbrough is editor.

Dorothy Wulf, instructor in physical education for women, entertained at tea at the Women's Residence Hall Friday.

Dr. and Mrs. George B. Woods and Mrs. Mary Louise Brown, dean of women, entertained for the senior class at a picnic yesterday near Mount Vernon.

Ohio Youth Honored By Catholic U. Class

S. A. Towell, Cleveland, Named Valedictorian for Seniors for High Scholastic Record—Commencement Week Set From June 10 to 13.

At a recent special meeting of the senior class at Catholic University Mr. Stephen A. Towell, of Cleveland, Ohio, was elected valedictorian of the class. Mr. Towell was one of eight eligible men for the position and was nominated by the dean of the school of letters because of an exceptionally high scholastic record of four years' standing. He has been prominent in social and athletic circles at the university as well as leading his class scholastically. He played on the varsity football team and has been a member of the varsity track squad for the past two years.

Mr. Towell has also been connected with various student organizations, among them the Glee Club, the Debating Society, etc. He is president of the Dod Noon Club, one of the social clubs of the campus. Cathedral Latin School in Cleveland sent Mr. Towell to Catholic University. Other men voted on by the class at the special meeting were Jorge L. Cordova, Philemon B. Coulter, Raymond K. Foley, Edward G. Geyer, John J. Meng, Edwin T. Pairo and Thomas J. Smyth.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the name of the valedictorian came the announcement of the commencement week program by the chairman of the senior committee handling all arrangements for the affair. Commencement week this year will be from June 10 to June 13, inclusive. The tentative program is as follows:

Sunday, June 10 — Baccalaureate mass at 10 a. m. in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the Rt. Rev. Rector officiating.

Monday, June 11—Senior class tea dance from 4 to 7, at the Willard Hotel.

Tuesday, June 12—Reception to the parents of the graduates by the Rt. Rev. Rector from 4 to 6. The reception will be followed by the senior class banquet, to be held at 9 p. m.

Wednesday, June 13—Senior mass in the National Shrine at 9 a. m. Commencement exercises and conferring of degrees at 10:30 a. m.

Mr. Phillip E. Triggs, of Springfield, Mass., is chairman of the committee. He has under him many subcommittees, totaling a membership of 22. They will provide for every detail of the exercises and procuring accommodations for parents of the seniors.

The annual prize debate, sponsored by the Right Rev. Rector, was held last Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the auditorium of McMahon Hall. The question for debate was, "Resolved, That the United States Senate has the right to refuse admittance even to elected candidates." The men who upheld the affirmative, and were later adjudged victors, were Francis P. O'Keefe, Paul McNeil and James A. Cusick. The negative was represented by Desmond Murphy, Bernard F. Fitzsimmons and Jorge L. Cordova. The chairman of the evening was Edmund J. Fitzgerald, president of the Shahan Debating Society. The affirmative scored their weightiest points in the rebuttals.

The Catholic University Schola Cantorum will offer the following courses during the summer session of 1928: The Ward method, Gregorian chant, harmony, polyphony, organ, piano, training and conducting boy choirs. Organ concerts will be given each week of the summer session, covering the entire history of music. Piano recitals will also be given. There will be two lectures on church legislation in regard to liturgical music, and on the motu proprio of Pius X. It is urged that all who desire to take courses in music register as soon as possible.

The spring dance of the Dod Noon Club was held last Saturday night in the main ballroom of the Roosevelt Hotel. Mr. Joseph Donnelley was chairman of the committee in charge. At the last meeting of the club Robert C. Linehan, of Glens Falls, N. Y., was chosen to succeed Stephen A. Towell, of Cleveland, as president of the organization. John Conlin was elected vice president; Vincent Walter, secretary; Thomas McCabe, treasurer; E. Walter O'Grady, corresponding secretary, and William Fee, interclub representative.

Under the capable guidance of Robert C. Legat, editor-in-chief, the "Cardinal of '928," yearbook of the senior class, is rapidly nearing completion. All matter is in the hands of the printer at present, proofs have been corrected and publication is expected within a few weeks.

ARMSTRONG ASSEMBLY DEBATE IS CONDUCTED

SHOPS ATTRACT VISITORS

The debating club of Armstrong High School made its first appearance this year Thursday morning in regular assembly. The subject debated was: "Resolved, That the Monroe Doctrine should be abandoned." The affirmative was upheld by Ethel Gunnell, Violette Ausby, Alexander Moorhead and William Epps. On the negative were Walter Brockenburr, Dorothy Scott, Robert Murray and John Landers. Judges, who announced the negative as winners, were Maurice Clifford, C. M. Thomas and Benjamin Washington.

Groups of pupils from the Francis Junior High School, accompanied by teachers, made rounds of inspection of the Armstrong Building recently. The shops seemed to attract most attention. Boys spent the greater amount of time in places devoted to printing, painting, carpentry and automobile repair, while girls seemed to enjoy domestic art and domestic science classes.

Principal Walter L. Smith, of Dunbar, was given an enthusiastic reception by Armstrong students when he appeared unexpectedly on the platform to thank them for their cooperation in the staging of Maeterlinck's "Bluebird." Dr. Otto Kahn-Freund, of Frankfurt, Germany, and Charles H. Houston spoke from the same platform.

A series of mother-daughter meetings began this year with an at home by senators for their mothers Thursday afternoon in the gymnasium. Mrs. Coralie F. Cook, former member of the Board of Education, made an informal talk. Students participating in the program were Frances Scott, Mary Henderson, Gladys Jackson, Catherine Hunter, Leah Barringer, Eudora Deneal, Lelia Coleman, Clara Armstead, Marjorie Johnson, Marie Conway, Emma Hutchins, Marjorie McLeod, Elizabeth Frazier and Adele Sharp. Louise Sayles presided.

B. C. Dodson, teacher of art, spoke on art in secondary education at the faculty meeting Wednesday.

Y. M. C. A. COLLEGE EXERCISES ON MAY 27

Huston Thompson to Make Graduation Address; Degrees for 70.

Baccalaureate services of the commencement of the college of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held May 27, at the Church of the Epiphany. Dr. Z. B. Phillips, rector of the church and chaplain of the Senate, will deliver the sermon.

Huston Thompson, former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, will deliver the principal address at the commencement exercises, which will be held June 1, in Memorial Continental Hall.

Degrees will be conferred on approximately 70 graduates of the schools of law and accountancy. Dean Joseph K. Moyer will present the diplomas to the graduates in accountancy and Dean Charles V. Imlay will make the awards to the graduates in law.

Secretaries' School Awards 118 Prizes

The Washington School for Secretaries last week made 118 awards to the students, according to Miss Annie M. Hahn, principal. The highest award was made to Miss Margaret Beall, who received honors in a typewriting test.

Preparations are being made for the commencement exercises of the school to be held soon. J. E. Palmer, general manager of the school, addressed the seniors of Western High School Thursday.

Locust Hordes Force British Planes Down

Basra, Irak, May 12 (A.P.).—British military airplanes were defeated when they tackled a new foe near here. A squadron was sent aloft to try and scatter a cloud of locusts which threatened to devour the date crop. The insects clung to all parts of the planes so thickly that the latter were forced to land.

BAUMES LAW SUBJECT AT HOWARD U. DEBATE

No-Decision Contest Is Held With Team From Northwestern University.

MEDICAL CRUSADE ENDS

Northwestern University, of Chicago, and Howard University met in a no-decision debate before a large audience at the Armstrong auditorium Friday evening under auspices of the Kappa Sigma Debating Society. They discussed the resolution, "That the principles of the Baumes act of New York should be enacted in the several States." Northwestern was represented on the affirmative by D. K. Carter and Stanford Clinton, and Howard, on the negative, by Robert E. Dandridge and Robert A. Burrell.

The debate was preceded and followed by musical selections by the Howard University Glee Club and Avis Andrews, soprano, of the university conservatory. Dr. William A. Wilburn, dean of Columbian College, George Washington University, presided. The teams will debate in Chicago next year.

Howard University, Wilberforce University, Morgan College and West Virginia Collegiate Institute were represented in the first contest of the Negro Intercollegiate Oratorical League held recently at the West Virginia institution. A. Franklin Fisher, who with his oration, "Science and Religion," represented Howard University, won first prize of $50, and brought back to the university the league trophy. James D. Carr, winner of the second prize, represented Morgan College. The contest will be held next year in Baltimore.

The Chi Delta Mu medical fraternity closed Monday its most successful annual crusade against diseases represented in the high infant and adult mortality rate of the negro. Large numbers who attended clinics were instructed in the fundamentals of preventive medicine. Cooperation of ministers and students of various schools and colleges was secured. The main feature of the crusade was a mass meeting held Thursday in the auditorium of the new medical building. Dr. Charles A. Allen represented the Lambda Chapter in this movement, while the Alpha Undergraduate Chapter was represented by William E. Allen.

Colored Girl Wins Phi Beta Kappa Key

Memberships in the Alpha Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa and the Phi Kappa Phi honorary societies, it was learned yesterday, have been awarded to Carol Carson, daughter of Dr. Simeon Carson, 1913 Third street northwest. Miss Carson is the first colored woman student to receive the Phi Beta Kappa award at the University of Michigan, and the first colored member of Phi Kappa Phi.

She finished the elementary schools of the District of Columbia, and Cushing Academy, Ashburnham, Mass., at the age of 16, completing her collegiate work four years later at Michigan. Her father, Dr. Carson, was graduated at the medical school at Michigan a quarter century ago.

SHORTHAND STUDENT WINS HONOR CREDITS

Miss Lillian Pace Completes Gregg Manual in Three-Month Course.

During the five months of her attendance at Strayer College, 721 Thirteenth street northwest, Miss Lillian Pace, a graduate of Swarthmore College, has set several unusual records.

In three months Miss Pace completed the Gregg shorthand manual and was given an average of 98.5 per cent for twenty lessons. For distinguished proficiency in the knowledge of Gregg word signs and Gregg theory she was awarded two honor credits. She began the study of typewriting on January 16 and fifteen weeks later raced through a test at a speed of 58 words a minute, with 92 per cent accuracy.

Miss Lucy P. Eastwood and Mrs. A. H. Smith, both students of the evening school, earned the only honor credits in personal efficiency in an examination a few evenings ago. Miss Eastwood was given an average of 99 in the test and Mrs. Smith 98. Miss Edith May led the day school personal efficiency class with a grade of 99 per cent in a recent examination.

STUDENTS TO MAKE SENIOR WEEK TRIP TO MOUNT VERNON

Activities Will Be Started at George Washington University on June 9.

DEBATE TEAMS TO GET FUTURE WORK AWARDS

Nominations for Class Officers Closed; Election to Be Held Saturday.

Senior week at George Washington University will be inaugurated June 9. On that day members of the graduating classes will make their annual pilgrimage to Mount Vernon. Following the boat trip down the river, a short ceremony will be held at the tomb of George Washington, when an address will be delivered by a prominent Washingtonian and a wreath will be laid on the tomb by one of the senior class presidents.

That evening the annual meeting of the general alumni association of the university will take place. On the afternoon of June 10 the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered. The following afternoon the president of the university will give a reception in honor of the graduating classes.

On the afternoon of June 12 a garden party is to be given in honor of the mothers of all senior girls by the women's advisory council of the university. Class night exercises will be held that evening.

The events of senior week will close the evening of June 13 with the conferring of degrees at the commencement exercises.

Nominations for next year's class officers have been closed and all is in readiness for the election which will take place Saturday in the university gymnasium. Prof. Warren Reed West, of the political science department, is in charge of the election.

Awards for Debate Teams.

A recent decision of the faculty committee on student activities gives official recognition, for the first time, to work on the debate teams of the university. The award, consisting of a pendant formed of the letters "G. W." and having a scroll between bearing the word "debate," will be given, in bronze, to all who represent the university on debate teams.

The award in silver will be made, upon recommendation, to members who have represented the university in more than one academic year. The award in buff and blue enamel may be given, upon recommendation, to those who have represented the university in more than two academic years, or who have participated in an international debate and whose services are considered to merit special distinction.

Plans for next year's international debate are now under consideration. Since the first international debate was held in 1923 this has been one of the outstanding events of the school year. Next fall, in addition to the team which will come from Oxford University, a woman's team representing the universities of Great Britain will visit the United States. It is possible that a debate between the woman's team and a team representing George Washington University may be arranged.

Dean Doyle at Conference.

Prof. Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of men of the university, is attending the conference of the National Association of Deans of Men at Boulder, Colo. A paper on "Censorship of College Publications" will be read by Dean Doyle at the conference. As national vice president of Pi Delta Epsilon, national collegiate journalism fraternity, and as chairman of the publications council of the university, Dean Doyle is particularly interested in questions relating to college publications.

The Davis prize speaking will be held in Corcoran Hall of the university May 23. The contest is open to all seniors of Columbian College. Orations not to exceed 2,000 words in length must be submitted before May 16. Judges for the event will be Profs. George M. Churchill, Audley L. Smith and Warren Reed West.

Sybil Moon, Frank Whitehouse, Esther Holmes and George Terry won first prizes in the McKeever prize speaking contest on May 4. Prizes totaling $300 were awarded.

School Selects Two In Typewriting Test

Two of the four recent winners of the Southern speed shorthand test, conducted by the Southern Brothers Business University, were chosen this week to represent the school in the annual typewriting contest held by a large typewriter manufacturer. They were Elmore Johnson, with an average of 99, and Cecile Harrington, with an average of 98 per cent. Gold medal awards are made each year to the winning students. The contest will be held in June.

John Leonard Steward, son of Frank C. Steward, vice president of the school, returned this week from Bogota, Colombia, where he has been representing the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Following his graduation from Western High School he studied engineering, and has represented the steel company in South America since the spring of 1927, this being his first visit home.

M'KINLEY HIGH CLUB WILL PRESENT SHOW

Dramatic Group Plans Vaudeville Program for June 1 and 2.

The last large dramatic performance to be given in the old McKinley Technical High School Building will be given by the Tech Dramatic Club June 1 and 2 with the presentation of the annual vaudeville show. Several novelties, such as a Tech movie, called "Kidnaping Clara," and two fencing acts taken from "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Hamlet," will be offered.

The fencing acts will be enacted by expert fencers of the school, and a faculty play will be presented. Other features of the show will be a style show and a special musical program. Proceeds from the vaudeville will go to the school library for the purpose of binding books.

Following the examples set by the glee club and the school orchestra, the Tech Band last night rendered a concert which was broadcast over radio station WMAL. The half-hour program consisted of military marches and several classical selections.

Two classes, those of the sixth and seventh semesters, have both engaged the Potomac Boat Club and Dagmoir music or their coming dances on May 25 and June 8, respectively.

Vivian Simpson, Tech '21 and George Washington '25, was admitted to the Maryland bar recently and plans to open a law office in Rockville, where she will be the sole woman attorney. She is a member of Chi Omega and Phi Delta Sororities.

Five Capital Students Honored at Cornell

Five Washington students at Cornell last week were elected to membership in the Quill and Dagger and Sphinx Head honor societies at the university, the membership of which is based on prominence in student activities. Election to the societies is considered one of the highest social honors conferred upon Cornell students.

Those elected to the Quill and Dagger were Karl F. Kellerman, 2221 Forty-ninth street, and Phillip J. Stone, 3023 Macomb street; those elected to Sphinx Head were Henry Gichner, 3220 Highland avenue, Robinson C. Glazebrook, 2022 P street, and William D. Phelan, 1316 New Hampshire avenue.

K. of C. Class Hears Lecture on Popes

The Rev. Peter Guilday, professor of history at the Catholic University, lectured to the Medieval Academy at the Knights of Columbus Evening School, last week, on the subject of "The Rise of the Papal States."

Prof. Rossa F. Downing has concluded his third-year law courses in wills and equity pleading, and will give examinations in these subjects this week.

CENTRAL STUDENT WINS HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP

AN ALTERNATE IS NAMED

For the fourth consecutive time a student of Central High School has been awarded the freshman scholarship to Harvard University, offered by the Harvard Club of Washington to students of local public high schools. This year's winner is Spencer Pollard. John Miller, a graduate of Canandaigua High School, Canandaigua, N. Y., who is taking a post graduate course at Central, was named as alternate by the club.

The scholarship is held at present by Frank Goodwin. Two years ago, George Willis won the award and Miss Hope Smoot, a member of the graduating class of 1925 won the scholarship three years ago.

A scholarship to Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., has been awarded to Henry Lerch, also of the graduating class at Central. Other members of the class, who have won scholarships, include Miss Gwendolyn Folsom, who was awarded the North Carolina Foundation scholarship to American University, and James Bates, who was selected from 21 candidates of local high schools, for a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania.

Warren Moore, president of the February graduating class, and Robert Coltman, of the June class, have been awarded scholarships to Dartmouth College. Alvin Miller, principal of the school, has announced that applications for the four-year scholarship to George Washington University may be made at the college bureau until May 25 and on June 1 the decision will be announced.

NATIONAL STUDENTS TO RECEIVE CREDITS FOR SUMMER TERM

Units to Count Toward Number Required for Degree in Law.

WHITNEY PENS HISTORY OF SOCIETY FOR PEACE

Phi Beta Gamma Fraternity Branch Outlines Its Future Policy.

Dr. E. L. Whitney, professor of economics in the school of economics and government of National University, has written a history of the American Peace Society which held its centennial anniversary conference during the past week in Cleveland, Ohio. This history now is being printed under the auspices of the society.

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the school of economics and government, who has been attending the sessions of the society at Cleveland during the past week, is expected to return to Washington tomorrow to resume his duties at the university. Dr. Pergler served as secretary of the commission on the international implications of justice, of which Prof. Philip Marshall Brown, of Princeton University, is chairman.

Both elementary and advanced courses will be given during the summer session of National University Law School, the schedule of which was announced yesterday. The summer term, which begins June 15, is of eleven weeks' duration, the same length as other terms, and full courses in the subjects taught are carried.

Students may secure a total of six credit units during the summer term at National University, all of these credits being counted toward the total number required for the degree of bachelor of laws. Many students have found it profitable to register for the summer session, due to the fact that classes are smaller and that a number of the courses given at that time are not included in the curriculum of the fall, winter or spring terms. One or two summer terms have been found to afford the student an excellent opportunity of greatly increasing his knowledge of law and preparation for legal practice.

The chancellor of the university, Charles F. Carusi, who is president of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, was the guest of honor at a recent luncheon given by the Educational Association of the District at the Cafe St. Marks. Mr. Carusi in addressing the association emphasized the dependence for success of the great American experiment in democratic government upon the work of public education.

The last meeting of the school year of the National University Chapter of Phi Beta Gamma, national legal fraternity, was held Thursday. Topics regarding activities during the summer were brought up and a general outline of the future policy of the fraternity was discussed.

General acclaim has met the selection of Virgil Wallace, member of the senior class, to make the valedictory address at this year's commencement exercises. Wallace has been one of the most popular members of the class, serving as president during his junior year and during the present year having held the office of class orator.

Three other members of the senior class were considered as candidates for valedictorian. Eugene F. Bogan, president of the John Marshall Law Club; Earl J. Soelberg, president of the Rocky Mountain Law Club and editor-in-chief of the National University Law Review, and Miss Elizabeth Prender, vice president of the Cy Press Club.

Dunbar High Club To Present Comedy

The French Club of the Dunbar High School will present Moliere's comedy, "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. The performance will include a group of French songs and dances by members of the French Club, in costume, and several French selections by the Dunbar orchestra. Mrs Mary Gibson Brewer, sponsor of the club, will direct the entertainment.

Dr. Richard Allen, assistant superintendent of schools of Providence, R. I., conducted a round table conference of officers and teachers of divisions 10-13 in the library Wednesday morning, on vocational guidance.

BUSINESS HIGH CLUBS TO PRESENT OPERETTA

"Carrie Comes to College" Will Be Given This Week in School Auditorium.

CADET SUPPER PLANNED

The Gids' and Boys' Glee Clubs of Business High School will present an operetta, "Carrie Comes to College," on Thursday and Friday nights in the auditorium of the school. The entertainment will be followed by dancing.

To advertise the operetta, members of the class were introduced at an assembly of the school Wednesday. A sketch from the operetta was given and selections were played by the orchestra. Addresses were made by Miss Elizabeth Mensh, president of the Girls' Glee Club; Frank Davis, president of the Boys' Glee Club; and Richard Keefer, representative of the Students' Council.

The employment department of the school is already at work trying to procure positions for the highly trained secretarial, clerical and bookkeeping students, who are members of the June graduating class. Under the auspices of the department, W. Spivey, of the Drexel Institute and Dr. F. M. Butts, secretary of the National Educational Association, were speakers at recent school assemblies.

The June graduatinig class discussed plans for its class night on June 19 at a recent meeting. Charles A. May is president of the class. Roland Benninghoven and Milton Cohen of the Balance Sheet staff, represented the school at the Southern press conference at Washington and Lee College, Lexington, Va., recently.

The Girls' Auxiliary, an organization that sponsors the cadets, are planning th cadet supper, the final event of the year's program, which will be held on June 5, the night of the annual competitive drill. Likewise, the girls of the Amikeco Club, which sponsors athletics of the school, are planning for a dance and a hike, which will be held in the near future.

MARSHALS NAMED FOR GEORGETOWN U. CLASS CELEBRATION

J. T. O'Laughlin and C. H. Quirk Are Among Seniors to Be Selected.

SERVICE SCHOOL PARTY WILL RETURN TODAY

30 Law Students, Who Died During the World War, to Be Honored.

Appointment of senior marshals to arrange for the commencement week activities of the Georgetown University School of Law and the Memorial Day exercises on May 30 in honor of the 30 law students who sacrificed their lives during the World War, was announced yesterday by Assistant Dean Hugh J. Fegan.

As president of the morning section of the seniors, John T. O'Laughlin will preside at the Memorial Day exercises in the law library. The names of the 30 Georgetown heroes will be read from the bronze tablet erected to their memory by John J. Long, secretary of the class. Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., president of the university, will deliver the invocation, and there will be addresses on behalf of the two senior sections by Robert Waldron and James T Finlen.

Other details of the meeting are yet to be completed, and it is planned to have a representative of the Army and a representative of the faculty also to speak. The annual Memorial Day exercises were inaugurated following the armistice.

Will Arrange Celebration.

The senior marshals who will arrange for the class night celebration June 9, are John T. O'Laughlin, morning section, president; Charles H. Quirk, who heads the afternoon section; Thomas Downs, Ray Gillespie, C. C. Schilling, James Walsh, Thomas B. Bell and J. Howard Zieman. This committee will have charge of all senior activities during commencement week.

The group of 100 Foreign Service School students and professors who visited New York yesterday to inspect its port facilities, will return to Washington early today. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the school; Dean William F. Notz, Assistant Dean Thomas H. Healy and Prof. Alfred H. Haag, director of the international shipping department, headed the group.

A number of government officials and diplomats accompanied the party which was welcomed by Mayor James Walker at the City Hall.

Among those who made the trip were A. G. Dalton, vice president and general manager of the Merchant Fleet Corporation; the Minister of Bulgaria, Simeon Radeff; Merchant Mahony, commercial secretary of the Canadian Legation, and George Bonesco, financial counselor of the Rumanian Legation.

Carroll Club Session Ends.

The Carroll Law Club, named after Bishop John Carroll, founder of Georgetown, brought its season to an end Wednesday night with its annual banquet. To the Carroll club belongs the distinction of having more alumni graduates than any other law school organization. Its graduating members are: Anthony Campana, Illinois; James T. Finlen, Montana; John L. Geraghty, Washington; George Hogen, Minnesota; Thomas J. McKenna, New York; Matthew A. McLoughlin, South Carolina; J. Joseph Malvey, Massachusetts; Charles H. Quirk, Wisconsin; Clerque C. Schilling, Michigan; John H. Shuney, Rhode Island; J. Mark Trice, District of Columbia; Robert M. Waldron, Washington; Cornelius F. Ward, New York; James J. Waters, Pennsylvania; Louis L. Whitestone, Virginia; William Vallie Whittington, Illinois, and Francis R. Gillespie, Michigan.

Two of its members won the honors in the final prize debate at the law school Tuesday, Mr. Finlen being chosen as the best individual speaker among the four competitors, which gave him the school championship. Honorable mention was given Mr. Whittington, his teammate. To clinch their honors, the team they represented was awarded the verdict in the debate.

Military activities ceased at the Hilltop with the annual field day program Thursday afternoon. It happens that the battalion commanders for the last two years have been students from the District of Columbia. Raymond H. Heiskell, lieutenant colonel of the present battalion, and William S. Tarver, the previous commander, each was selected by the military department as the cadet whose record was outstanding during his four years in the corps.

Stuart Boys' Glee Club to Entertain

An entertainment by the Boys' Glee Club of the Stuart Junior High School will be presented Friday and Saturday at the auditorium of the school, under the direction of Miss Anne Lamborn, of the faculty.

The entire staging is the work of the school classes in art, woodworking and domestic art, and the entertainment will be presented with the assistance of the Girls' Club. Miss Ada Entwisle, of the art department; Walter Griest, of the manual training department, and Miss Mary Short, of the domestic art department. "Mrs. Jarley's Famous Wax Works," a costume play, was presented last week by the students of section 8A1.

Boston's auto tourist camp is right in town, with paved streets and brick apartments all around it.

WHITE SOX POUND OUT 9-6 VICTORY OVER NATS; CANTER WINS BY NOSE; GOLF TITLE TO HOUGHTON

Griffith Star Victor Over Sir Harry

Whipping Duel Marks Closing Handicap at Pimlico Track.

Barleycorn, Favorite, Is Winner Over Field in Chase.

By CHARLES A. WATSON
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, Md., May 12.—J. E. Griffith's Canter, the sterling 5-year-old son of Wildair and Virginia L., raced to victory under a well-judged ride by Jockey Steve O'Donnell in the twelfth running of the Pimlico Spring Handicap, the main attraction of the closing day at Pimlico.

The Griffith horse defeated a classy field over the mile-and-sixteenth route, covering the distance in 1:43 1-5. The race was the best of the afternoon's good card, and netted the owner of the winner $7,430. A short nose behind the winner came Sir Harry, from the Seagram Stable, and third, a short distance back was E. R. Morehouse's Banton. Flippant, from the Sage Stable, finished fourth.

A typical spring day greeted a great crowd that jammed the track today. The track was greatly improved with the mile strip exceedingly fast. Favorites stepped down with regularity.

Canter delayed the start for a period when he became fractious at the barrier. Off to a remarkable start, the ten horses went as far as the judges' stand almost perfectly aligned with Kentucky II, the favorite, showing the way to the first turn. Buddy Bauer was second.

Rounding the turn, Kentucky II and Canter raced head and head with Montfarret third and J Fred A fourth.

Canter went to the front as the back-stretch was reached with Kentucky II at his saddle girth and Buddy Bauer moving up to third place. It was apparent from this point it would be a great race as all horses were so closely bunched it was hard to tell who was in front.

At the half Sir Harry, from the Seagram Stable, set the pace with Montferrat second with Banton moving up fast now in third place. O'Donnell gave Canter a breathing spell.

Banton took the lead into the stretch and looked like a certain winner, but Canter, under the whip, came again and dropped his nose in front of Sir Harry who was running strongly.

Joseph E. Widener's Barleycorn won the first race of the day, the Consolation Steeplechase at two and a quarter miles, when Jockey Dolly Byers gave an excellent exhibition of fencing and carried the colors of the Philadelphia sportsman to victory.

The horses made a false break before they finally got away, with Barleycorn taking the lead at the first jump. No-

Phils Held to 3 Hits By Kolp as Reds Win

Cincinnati, May 12 (A.P.).—Kolp held Philadelphia to three hits today while his Cincinnati team mates tripled and doubled off Miller and Willoughby in two innings to win 3 to 1.

Triples by Walker and Allen off Miller in the fourth and a single by Dressen scored two runs, while Allen doubled off Willoughby in the eighth, after Walker drew a base on balls and stole second.

Tribe Breaks Streak Of A's to Win, 3 to 1

Philadelphia, May 12 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Indians broke the Athletic's winning streak of six straight today when Walter Miller beat Ossie Orwoll in a hurling duel by a score of 3 to 1.

The Indians broke a 1-to-1 tie in the eighth when Fonseca's single scored Gerken and Summa's sacrifice fly tallied Joe Sewell. Joe Hauser accounted for the Athletics' lone run by hitting his seventh home run of the season.

American U. Loses, 42-0; 32 Hits, 16 Errors Hurt

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 12.—Bridgewater College set a new Virginia record for scoring today when the Eagle Nine slaughtered the American University Tossers, of Washington, by the football count of 42 to 0. Eighteen runs in the first inning started Bridgewater off on its rampage.

The Eagles clouted out 32 safe hits and took advantage of half that many errors by the opposition. Capt. Cupp led the attck with six safeties, while Pence and Adams each collected five. American U. got but two hits, one a double by Schloss.

St. Louis, Mo., May 12 (A.P.).—Winning the sixth straight game for the Cardinals, and the seventh out of eight starts this season, Flint Rhem scored his third straight triumph of the year in a 5 to 3 contest with the Boston Braves here today. Rhem has yet to lose a game this season.

Facing former teammates, Rogers Hornsby crashed out a home run in the first inning. Wilson and Harper, newly acquired performers, worked creditably. Wilson hit a pair of singles and cut off two runnners who attempted to steal second. Harper, who went in for Blades in right field in the second inning, connected with a pair of singles and drove in one run.

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Pat Malone had the better of Larry Benton in a pitching battle here today, and the Cubs won the first game of the series from the Giants, 4 to 2, to chalk up their seventh straight success. One big inning sufficed—the sixth—in which the Cubs scored three times on Malone's walk, Maguire's single, Webb's triple and Wilson's sacrifice fly.

Malone held the Giants to six hits, three of which were credited to Melvin Ott. Bill Terry returned to the game today. Bob O'Farrell, obtained by the Giants from the Cards in trade for Harper, got a single as pinch hitter in his New York debut.

Pirates Win in Ninth On Hendrick's Error

Pittsburgh, May 12 (A.P.).—The Pirates took the first game of their series from Brooklyn here today, 5 to 4 when Harvey Hendrick fumbled Traynor's grounder in the ninth, permitting L. Waner to score the winning run with two out.

Hill pitched effectively for the Pirates, except for the fifth inning, when Brooklyn scored three runs. Pittsburgh jumped on Clark in the fourth for three runs and he gave way to McWeeny who weakened in the ninth, when he seemed to have the game in hand.

Japanese Net Ace Bows to Williams

Tamio Abe Beaten in Chevy Chase Finals by U. S. Veteran.

Williams, Washburn, Beat Shields, Abe in the Doubles.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS, of Philadelphia, former American Davis Cup team captain, yesterday captured the lion's share of honors in the annual invitation tennis tournament of the Chevy Chase Club. Williams defeated Tamio Abe, of the current Japanese Davis Cup team, 6—4, 3—6, 6—1, in the singles finals and then, paired with Watson S. Washburn, of New York, beat Abe and Frank Shields, of New York, 3—6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2, in successfully defending the doubles crown.

The doubles match was the feature of the day's program. Abe, steadiness personified, and Shields, national junior champion, who is a brilliant all-around player, took the first two sets before the veteran Williams-Washburn combination could adjust itself. Then the latter, displaying exceptional team play, settled down to business and took the next three sets for the decision. Spirited rallies marked the whole five sets, with Williams and Washburn finally winning because of their teamwork and ability to get decisive points, especially in the last three sets.

Abe was no match for the cagey Williams in their singles encounter. The Japanese is a much better doubles player than he is in a solo match and, although he managed to knot the count at 1 set all, Williams handily took the deciding one, losing but one game while doing so.

Williams went into the singles semifinals by beating John Doeg, of California, in the morning in their unfinished match of Friday, which was halted by darkness with each having a set to his credit. The Coast player went down fighting, however, as 20 hard-fought games were needed before Williams was declared the winner 11-9.

In the semifinal doubles match played yesterday morning Abe and Shields earned their title chance by disposing of Richard Herndon and Cedric Major, both of New York, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4.

Umek, Italian, Wins "Bunion Derby" Lap

Elyria, Ohio, May 12 (A.P.).—Glusto Umek, of Trieste, Italy, paced the transcontinental foot racers through the 63.3 miles from Fremont to the seventieth control here today in 9:17:14. Umek stands sixth in the cross-country grind, with an elapsed time of 508:27:11 for 2,752.6 miles. Umek's trainers aided police in clearing a path for the Italian ace through the throngs that crowded about the control station.

John Salo, Passaic, N. J., sustained his grip on second place by finishing second in 9:33:10. His elapsed time, 478:24:5, reduced the lead of Andy Payne, Oklahoma, who assumed the race leadership with the withdrawal of Peter Guvazzi, of England.

Following are the leaders in the transcontinental foot race and their elapsed times for 2,752.6 miles: Andrew Payne, Claremore, Okla., 455:36:35; John Salo, Passaic, N. J., 478:24:15; Philip Granville, Hamilton, Ontario, 488:58:12; Mike Joyce, Cleveland, Ohio, 503:40:24; Guisto Umek, Trieste, Italy, 508:27:11; Louis Peravia, Albany, N. Y., 509:13:38; Frank Von Plue, Kerman, Calif., 510:47:06; John Cronick, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, 521:22:31.

Tunney at Speculator; Works Out Tomorrow

Speculator, N. Y., May 12 (A.P.).—Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, and man of letters, came back today to the Adirondack hills where he builded his body from that of a light-heavyweight to the 200-pounds of bone and muscle that now rules the ring.

Back in this village of fewer than a thousand citizens, nestled on the shore of Lake Pleasant, Tunney will train until a few days before the going in the Yankee Stadium calls him to defend his title against Tom Heeney, in a 15-round battle, probably July 26.

Although the sun was bright in Speculator, chill winds swept down from the hills as Tunney drove his car into town unheralded. Once in his quarters he donned heavy clothing. In half an hour he was about the premises clad in the familiar blue shirt, gray trousers and battered red sweater of training days.

Gene will start light work Monday. No sparring partners are in camp.

Harvard Crew Wins In 3-Cornered Race

Cambridge, Mass., May 12 (A.P.).—Rowing through rough water and semi-darkness, Harvard's powerful varsity crew defeated Cornell and Massachusetts Institute of Technology over the mile and three-quarters distance on the Charles River here today. As the crews swept across the line in the gathering dusk, Harvard looked to be a good length in the lead, with Tech's shell hanging a quarter of a length behind Cornell. A stiff northwest wind forced postponement of the start of the varsity race until after sunset.

Cornell won the junior varsity event, finishing two lengths ahead of Harvard. The Technology Bayvees were a poor third, trailing the Crimson by more than three lengths.

MINNESOTA WINS.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 12 (A.P.).—Minnesota gave Michigan unexpectedly tough competition in their dual track and field meet here this afternoon, the Wolverines winning by the scant margin of 72½ to 62½.

MARYLAND U. SCORES AT LACROSSE

Nears Olympic Choice By Winning Over Princeton, 8-3.

Special to The Washington Post.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 12.—The University of Maryland's hopes of representing the United States at lacross in the Olympics were furthered today with a clean-cut victory over the Princeton team by an 8-to-3 score, while Johns Hopkins, one of its remaining opponents, was bowing to Navy, a team that the Old Liners previously defeated.

Army is the only team in the country with a record that matches that of Maryland. A victory for Navy against Army in their meeting on June 2 would give Maryland a clear claim to the national title, provided that the Old Liners win their two remaining contests.

The Southerners tallied five times in the first period before the Nassau stickmen could register to close the half at 5 to 1. Evans started the scoring in the third minute of play. He repeated three minutes later, and then Andy Linkous and Davidson netted the ball before Tony Sessa could score Princeton's first.

Bill Scarlet added another for Princeton at the beginning of the second half. Halloway made it six for Maryland, and then Johnny Stinson completed Princeton's scoring. Snyder and Linkous tallied before the contest was over to give the Maryland Twelve its five-point margin.

World's Record Set In 400-Meter Race

Stanford Stadium, Calif., May 12 (A.P.).—Emerson Spencer, brilliant Stanford sprinter, broke the world's record in the 400-meter race here today when he sped over the distance in 47 seconds flat, four-tenths of a second better than the time made by Ted Meredith in 1916. The event was one of the P. A. A. Olympic games tryouts.

Another world's record was equaled when "Swede" Leistner, San Francisco Olympic Club, raced over the 110-meter high hurdles in 14 4-5 seconds, tying the mark made in 1920 by E. J. Thompson.

Tech High Defeated By Staunton, 3 to 2

Staunton, Va., May 12.—Staunton Military Academy and Tech High School, of Washington, battled for 12 innings here today, the local Cadets winning 3 to 2. At Waynesboro, Fishburn Military School defeated Greenbrier Military School, 6 to 5. At Fort Defiance, Augusta Military Academy bowed to Massanutten Military Academy, 5 to 4.

OHIO STATE WINS.

Madison, Wis., May 12 (A.P.).—Ohio State captured first place in a quadrangular meet today, their track and field stars amassing 64 points. Wisconsin was second with 49, Northwestern third with 43 and Chicago fourth with 20 points.

G. U. TOSSERS BEAT NAVY IN TENTH

Win Out, 7-6, Following Weird Ninth by Both Teams.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS Md., May 12.—Georgetown eked out a victory over the Annapolis Midshipmen at baseball in a ten-inning battle here today 7 to 6. It was a weired and erratic contest compared to snappy play that generally marks engagements between the two institutions, but the closeness of it held the fans until the last man had been retired.

The Blue and Gray got one runner across in the opening frame as the result of a walk, a steal, an error and a fielder's choice. A pass, a sacrifice and single were responsible for another marker in the second. For the next few innings, the contest was well worth while, both teams playing tight ball two-play swat and Gentner's single ends in the sixth, an error, Capt. Flannegan's abled the Middies to tie the score.

Then came the fireworks in the ninth. Georgetown gathering a quartet of counters on singles by Phelan, and Gillespie, four passes and a hit batsman and an error. Two of the passes forced runners home. The Middies came back to register a like number of runs, but without a hit. Four free tickets, two errors, and a sacrifice fly produced the counters.

The visitors were fighting mad in this session, and Tierney, substitute catcher was banished from the game for talking back at Umpire Green. The Blue and Gray proved equal to the occasion in the tenth, when Smith was safe on Millican's bad throw to first, stole second, and McLean crashed out a two-bagger. Navy did not develop a threat in the extra stanza.

Wilson Loser, 7 Up and 6, In Finals

Manor Club Star Easy Victor in Town and Country Tourney.

G. U. Student in Much Trouble; Consolation to J. F. Brawner.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

A. L. HOUGHTON, Manor, yesterday won the Town and Country Club invitation tournament, defeating Richard H. Wilson, Southern Pines, on the twelfth green of the final 18-hole round, 7 up and 6 to play. By his victory yesterday, Houghton secured a record of ten consecutive club tournaments in which he was either winner, runner-up or medalist.

The final round was not thrilling. The handwriting appeared on the wall at the very first hole when Wilson after nearly driving the green, 290 yards, looked up on his second shot and finally holed out in 5, while Houghton, after driving into the rough and playing his second into a trap, pitched out dead to the cup and made a par 4.

In the first nine Wilson only won one hole, the fourth, when Houghton topped his tee shot, and was 5 down at the turn. Houghton was out in 35, while Wilson expended no less than 44 strokes to negotiate the outward journey.

The game which Wilson played to become semifinalist in the recent North and South amateur championship at Pinehurst was sadly lacking. He was hooking and slicing his drives into the rough, missing his second shots and never once gauging the distance for his approaches to the cup. Houghton, meanwhile, was playing steadily from the tee, through the fairway and on the green.

In the first nine, Wilson should have won the short eighth hole, 130 yards. His mashie shot was on the green while Houghton was over in the rough. The latter missed his second shot and was barely on the putting surface, but his third shot laid Wilson a perfect stymie, which the latter was unable to play, so that the hole was halved. On the ninth hole, it looked as if Wilson was due for a win, for Houghton, missing his drive, was 50 yards short of the green in 2. A fine shot and a single putt enabled him to halve the hole in a par 4.

When Houghton halved the tenth hole in 5, playing his second shot between two trees almost to the green with Wilson flubbing his second shot, and won the eleventh when Wilson hooked his drive far enough into the rough, Houghton being on the edge of the green in 2, it needed only the playing of the twelfth hole to end the match. On this final hole Wilson

Boston, May 12 (A.P.).—Boston batters went wild in the third inning today, piling up 11 runs off three St. Louis pitchers, and the Red Sox ultimately triumphed over the Browns, 15 to 2. Ken Williams, former St. Louis outfielder, was responsible for three runs in the fat third inning. His sacrifice brought in one run, and on his next time up he drove out a home run with one on. Todt and Myer each singled twice in the same inning. Stewart and Coffman were knocked from the mound and Beck finished the game.

Hill, Former Chicago Grid Star, Is Dead

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Melville A. (Bubbles) Hill, tackle of the Western championship University of Chicago football team of 1905, died today in St. Luke's Hospital after 45 people had volunteered to submit to a blood transfusion which physicians hoped would save his life.

Hill had already undergone three major operations and died shortly after a blood test was taken this morning.

The former football star was employed in the advertising department of a Chicago newspaper.

VICTORIAN AND NASSAK NOT TO START IN DERBY

Owners Ship Horses to Belmont

Both to Compete in Withers Mile at N. Y. Track.

Leading Derby Hopes Train Well; Last Misstep Trial.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Victorian, the colt that carried the colors of Harry Payne Whitney to victory in the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico will not start in the Kentucky Derby next Saturday. The son of Whiskbroom II with Honker, a stablemate, which finished second to Scapa Flow in a minor race at the Maryland track on Preakness Day, was returned to Belmont Park instead of being shipped to Kentucky. It is reported that he will start in the Withers at Belmont Park next Saturday.

The Rancocas Stable's Nassak, the Preakness favorite, which finished in the ruck, also is out of the Derby. He too, it is said, will start in the Withers mile.

Whether Harry Payne Whitney will be represented in the Derby is problematical. In addition to Victorian and Honker he nominated the colts Fly Across, Agitator, Bye and Bye, The Tartar and Groucher, the filly Hush Dear and the geldings Limbo, Tantivy, Gad Along and Pollywog.

Louisville, Ky., May 12 (A.P.).—For the fifty-fourth time historic Churchill Downs, charged with that subtle expectancy known only during the last week before Derby Day, is being set in order for America's premier test of the speed and stamina of the country's finest 3-year-olds.

While a record number of the fleet sons of blue blooded sires may not face the barrier on May 19, the 1928 Derby field will not lack class. Few seasons have produced more promising colts than a number of those nominated for the classic and none has known a more successful training period, free from all kinds of mishaps.

All of the outstanding eligibles have trained well. Mrs. John D. Hertz's splendid pair of racers, Reigh Count, favorite in the winter books, and Anita Peabody, outstanding filly of the season, are at the form. The latter is being polished for the Oaks and may not run the Derby, but there are those who think she will. The pair will be hard to beat.

Other horses will not lack a following. Misstep, out of St Theresa by Upset, which stepped a mile in 1:40 4-5 in a trial run this morning and then finished out the Derby distance in 2:07 3-5, is encroaching rapidly upon the popularity of the Hertz colt. The Le Mar hopeful, between the legs of Joe Kezeris, opened up the eyes of work watchers with one of the best trials of the season this morning and set the tongues of railbirds wagging. Misstep undoubtedly will be in the running when the field gets off. As for Victorian, Harry Payne Whitney's entries always are dangerous.

Cartago, of the Lechleitler Stable, made a good showing today, running second in the Clark Handicap at Churchill Downs to Jock.

Reigh Count had another run this morning but was not urged. He will have his first start of the season under colors Monday.

"Wait until you see him run," said Trainer B. S. Mitchell, who believes the son of Sunreigh will repeat the victory he achieved over Victorian in the Belmont futurity last fall.

But the Derby may not be a test of the relative ability of Reigh Count and Victorian alone. Dodgson, of the blue grass contingent, Blockwood, son of the famous sire Black Tony, J. N. Camden's Hiram; Dark Eagle, Reproduce, Golden Racket, Strolling Player, Braybany Longridge and other eligibles also have trained in past experience has taught that early season defeats do not mar the brilliance of the performance of a colt on Derby Day.

Dowagiac, likely starter of the Bloomfield stable, showed a fast seven-eighths in a trial run this morning, covering the distance in 1:27 2-5. Nick Cullop went a mile in 1:42, hard held. Charlie Bergin breezed a half in :52. Colonel Shaw, an almost certain starter, which conquered Lucky Hit in his first time out this season was timed for the mile in 2:4 3-5; 1:17 3-5; 1:43 2-5. Jack Higgins, winner of the Louisiana Derby. Went a mile in 1:42 2-5 handily and looked fit for good going in any company.

Yale's Track Team Trounces Princeton

New Haven, Conn., May 12 (A.P.).—Yale defeated Princeton in the twenty-sixth annual track meet between these teams at Yale Field here today by a score of 93 1-3 points to 46 2-3 points.

Yale took first place in 10 events, second in 11 and third in 10. The Princeton team took first place in 5 events, second in 4 and third in 4. On a tie for third place in the pole vault Yale received one-third of the point and Princeton two-thirds.

Laffon Again Heads Kentucky Turf Body

Special to The Washington Post.

Louisville, Ky., May 12.—The recently appointed State racing commission held its initial meeting in the clubhouse at Churchill Downs today. The board, with a full membership present, reseated Polk Laffoon, of Covington, as chairman, and selected William E. Smith, of Louisville, vice chairman. Charles N. Lewis, of Louisville, was named as secretary and Miss Louise M. Wilson, of Lexington, assistant secretary.

Other members of the commission are S. S. Combs, of Lexington; Frazier Lebus, of Lexington, and Theodore E. Mueller, of Louisville.

It is understood that the offices of the commission, now in the Fayette Bank building, Lexington, will be moved to the Kentucky Association track in that city.

$40,500 Suit Is Filed Aganist Glenn Wright

Pittsburgh, May 12 (AP).—Glenn Wright, shortstop of the Pittsburgh National League Baseball Club, was sued for $40,500 damages today by W. W. Wright and Melvin Morgan, who claimed their wives and children were injured in an automobile collision in which the ball player's car figured.

The Pirate shortstop was said to have crashed into the automobile driven by Morgan here the day after the close of the 1927 World Series.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISTURB (field), $34.48, $7.86, $4.92; SILVERDALE, $5.30, $4.50; ROY, $10.10.

DISTURB raced fairly close up to stretch, where he closed fast under strong handling and lasted to win by narrow strides. SILVERDALE began fast, raced wide entering stretch and, but for swerving in final eighth, probably would have won. ROY moved up with a rush on stretch turn, was taken back and came again fast when nearing finish.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08. Winner, H. L. Crain's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PATRICIA MARIAN, $9.46, $4.48, $3.20; GEORGE DEMAR, $3.46, $2.48; STORMY PORT, $2.94.

PATRICIA MARIAN, in fine form under good handling, moved up determinedly when reaching stretch and, saving ground and continuing gamely, just lasted. GEORGE DEMAR suffered some interference at the start, raced far out of it for five furlongs and had to race wide, but came steadily and would have won in another stride. STORMY PORT showed most early speed, but began tiring in stretch.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily. Place driving. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:41. Winner, Mrs. John D. Hertz's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROTECTION, $16.68, $6.50, $5.26; VENITA M, $4.28, $3.28; CLASSY, $6.72.

PROTECTION began fast, showed fine speed and moving into a good lead at once, held sway for entire trip and won well in hand. VENITA M showed good form and raced prominently for the entire trip, but tired slightly near the end. CLASSY raced well up during entire trip.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $10,000 added. The Clark Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily. Place driving. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:16. Winner, E. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOCK, $8.82, $4.82, $3.86; CARTAGO, $19.82, $9.66; FLAT IRON, $5.56.

JOCK, racing in his best form, was kept restrained for a half mile, moved up with a rush when called on and drew out in stretch to win with much in reserve. CARTAGO, well up for most of the way, finished going gamely in last furlong. FLAT IRON was tiring, but just managed to outstay GENIAL HOST.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,700. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily. Place driving. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:50. Winner, S. Peabody's b. g. (3), by Sweep On—Rosa Lee. Trained by R. McGarvey. Value to winner, $1,300; second, $250; third, $150. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARTIE FLYNN $9.30, $5.26, $3.18; KING NADI, $5.50, $3.58; DON DIEGO, $3.18.

MARTIE FLYNN moved up with a rush in first quarter, but had to race wide, came strong in the stretch and drew away from KING NADI in last sixteenth. KING NADI, well up during entire trip, showed a good effort. DON DIEGO held on well during stretch drive and was kept slowly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving. Place same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:23. Winner, J. McPherson's br. g. KNOCKOUT FORECAST IN MANDELL-M'LARNIN FIGHT

Hard Hitters In Combat Thursday

Italian Sammy Is Not Likely to Try to Outslug Rival.

Irish Jimmy Boasts Impressive Record of Speedy Win.

By F. G. VOSBURGH
(Feature Service Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, May 12 (A.P.).—Knockout hounds at the Mandell-McLarnin lightweight championship fight at the Polo Grounds May 17 are pretty apt to have something to yell about.

It isn't likely in view of Irish Jimmy's fame as a knock 'em dead puncher that Italian Sammy will elect to slug with him, but the records show the champion is anything but a powder puff fighter and dangerous every minute he is in the ring. In fact, Mandell leads his challenger in quantity of knockout victims with his total of 22 in 118 battles. But McLarnin is ahead in quality.

Among those who have felt the McLarnin kayo punch are numbered such little giants as Jackie Fields, Joe Sangor, Louis Kid Kaplan and Sid Terris, all Jewish fighters strangely enough.

Sangor incidentally, whom Jimmy knocked out in three rounds in 1926, is the only man on record who ever scored a knockout over Sammy Mandell.

That was in 1923, long before Sammy became king of the lightweights, and was achieved in technical fashion in the seventh round. This same Milwaukee Joe now is matched for a featherweight title scrap with Tony Canzoneri this summer.

Perhaps the most memorable of McLarnin's sleep-producing punches was that applied to the whiskers of the boxing ghost, Sid Terris, at Madison Square Garden a few weeks ago after just one minute and 47 seconds of the first round. That little job was not so easy as it looked, the baby-faced boy from the Far West said afterwards. Only a fraction of a second before he landed that telling short right cross, McLarnin said, Terris caught him on the chin with a punch that would have been a knockout if it had been one inch lower. As a matter of fact, McLarnin never has been knocked out—and he doesn't intend to begin now.

It ought to be another indication of a real fight that the Mandell-McLarnin go will pit a fighting Irishman against a fighting Italian. The champion was born in Chicago of Italian parents, while the challenger first saw daylight in the little hamlet of Inchacore, not far from Dublin, Ireland. Jimmy's family moved to the State of Washington and then to Vancouver, B. C., while he was a good deal smaller than a lightweight.

Jimmy is only 22, but has been fighting for five years. Mandell is two years older and has been campaigning about three years longer.

Although Mandell has defended his title only once since he won it on a ten-round decision over Rocky Kansas in 1926, he hasn't been as idle as some would think. In the past year he has fought some fifteen battles, all but one nonchampionship affairs, but surely enough to keep any boxer in shape. Mandell's only title defense was against Phil McGraw a year ago and was an easy ten-round victory for the champion. This time the route is fifteen rounds.

G. W. Racketers Tie Virginia C. C. Team

Richmond, Va., May 12.—County Club of Virginia fought to a 3-all tie with the crack George Washington University Tennis Team from Washington this afternoon.

The rival teams shared in both the doubles and singles. Considine, ace of the Hatchetites, with forceful brilliance and displaying an excellent all-court game, defeated V. Dabney, 7—5, 8—6.

Watson of George Washington gave his team its second victory in the singles when he brushed aside Blannen of the locals after three hard sets. Rallying after a poor start, Watson made up for his 7—9 loss in the first set by humbling Blannen in the next two, 6—3, 6—1.

In the doubles, Stickler and Watson lost to Blannen and Spicer after defeating the Richmond entries in the first set, 6—3.

Singles—Considine (G. W.) defeated Dabney (C. C.), 7—5, 8—6; Valentine (C. C.) defeated Phillips (G. W.), 6—0, 6—1; Watson (G. W.) defeated Blannen (C. C.), 7—9, 6—3, 6—1; Spicer (C. C.) defeated Stickler (G. W.), 6—4, 6—4.

Doubles—Considine and Phillips (G. W.) defeated Valentine and Dabney (C. C.), 6—1, 6—1; Blannen and Spicer (C. C.) defeated Watson and Stickler (G. W.), 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Aztec Tossers Win Seventh Straight, 15-2

The Aztec Nine scored easily over the Thirty-fourth Ordnance Team of Camp Meade yesterday to win its seventh straight game of the season, 15 to 2. P. Jones, a new Aztec player, made an auspicious debut by socking two home runs to star for his team.

CHAMPION AND CHALLENGER IN NEXT TITLE BOUT

Cooking the kayo punch! Here's how Lightweight Champion Sammy Mandell and Jimmy McLarnin, challenger, start the sock that flattens. They do their stuff in a 15-round lightweight championship match at the Polo Grounds May 17.

Mandell and McLarnin Versatile, Declares Pegler

Are Willing to Claim Any Nationality Helpful to "Gate"—Champion "Slips" in Bout With Friendly Amateur.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., May 11.—There has been no lightweight championship prize fight in New York since Benny Leonard whipped Leftie Lewie Tendler in the Yankee Stadium, at 145 pounds, and retired because it would have killed him to make that weight again and he wished to be good to his mother. Therefore, there is much interest in the impending prize fight between Sammy Mandel, of Rockford, Ill., and Jimmy McLarnin, of California, to be celebrated at the Polo Grounds on the evening of the 17th. That is, when among Californians McLarnin is a Californian, but he is versatile in such matters, and if the poll of the house should happen to show a preponderance of Irish he may be introduced as Jimmy McLarnin, the Belfast Spider.

Mandell is versatile, too. His father is an Albanian and his mother was an Italian and his name in the first place was Mandello. But when Mandell is fighting in New York he does not deny that his name was Mandelbaum nor that his parents both came from Kishiniev, and if you should greet him with "Sholem alai chem," he would reply "Sholem" in perfect Italian. Samuel is training for the prize fight at a farmhouse conducted by Gus Wilson, the Alsatian Frenchman, who used to train Jack Dempsey.

The farmhouse is set in a grove of fruit trees on the bank of a brook and in the garden there is a small concrete basin full of fish. As Samuel and the other prize fighters in the camp pass by the fish bowl they come to attention, remove their caps and silently salute the fish. It is a pretty gesture of reverence and respect for the race of prize fight customers who are also known as fish.

Samuel's chief second and exponent is a plump old gentleman from Chicago by the name of Teddy Bodkin. It is a peculiarity of some young prize fighters that they charm and enlist old gentlemen, who follow them about the country, watching over them fussily like brood hens while they sleep and defending them with the most abandoned physical recklessness against imaginary slights and affronts.

Wild Will Lyons, the big wind from the Rio Brazos, attached himself to Jack Dempsey in this manner and for years he went about the United States declaiming about Dempsey's sterling virtues with such ardor that his teeth would come unstuck and his toupee would skid over on one ear. Under normal conditions, Wild Will's toupee had a white blaze running fore and aft, but after a brisk five minute oration about Jack Dempsey, the white strips would run due east and west.

Gene Tunney has his Teddy Bodkin, too. His name is Will McCabe. He is so infatuated with Tunney that he thinks there ought to be some kind of law requiring people to take off their hats when Tunney goes by. He thinks Tunney is intellectual.

Mr. Bodkin has been tagging around after Sammy Mandell for five or six years now. He wears a picture of Sammy's baby boy in the back of his watch.

This afternoon an amateur middleweight from Rockford named Al Isaacs, a friend of Mandell, who wouldn't do him harm a purpose, reached out with a left hook that chinned Samuel and dumped him so hard on the ring floor that he didn't land on his thanks at all, but hit square on his neck.

Samuel was up in one jump and Gus Wilson, greatly mortified that a champion and an honored guest had been floored in his ring even by a friend, dashed around the platform shaking resin powder onto the mat from a can with a sifter top. It was a delicate intimation that the floor, not the hook under the chin, had caused this mortifying mishap.

Gus Wilson is wrestling with a puzzling problem of diet. He owns a heavyweight prize fighter named Pierre Charles, the champion of Belgium, and is trying to make him eat large quantities of food in order to increase his weight and strength.

"I don't know what to do with this boy," Mr. Wilson said. "He just left the luncheon table without eating anything to speak of. All he had was a steak and half a chicken. It was his first meal since 10 o'clock this morning when he had a couple of mutton chops for his second breakfast. About 3 in the afternoon I may persuade him to eat a pound of hamburge to steady him until dinner time, when we are going to have lamb stew and steaks. But even if I force him to eat these meals I will have to watch him along toward 11 at night, or he will just turn off his light and go to sleep without a bite to last him until morning. I don't see how the fellow lives. I tell him he has to eat if he wants to beat these big strong fighters, but he only takes four or five meals a day and when I insist he says, 'Gus, I don't feel good today; I haven't got any appetite.'"

KILBY TO PITCH.

Kilby will pitch for the Royals against the Tris Speakers today at 11 o'clock on Diamond No. 2. All Royals are to report at the home of their manager at 10 o'clock.

ISHERWOODS PLAY.

The Isherwood A. S. will meet the Liberty A. C. on the latter's diamond today at 3 o'clock. All players are to report at Rosedale playground at 2 o'clock.

INSIDE STUFF on the OLYMPICS

Eccentric Characters in the Marathon

PERHAPS the question most frequently voiced by spectators at a marathon race is, "How do they get that way?" The supposition seems to be that there must be an eccentric streak in an athlete willing to punish himself to the extent it requires to traverse some 26 mils, 385 yards, at a steady jog.

Few marathon characters have been as unique as Felix Carvajal, the Cuban, or the story of his exploits in the 1904 Olympic games, as it is told by Harry Hillman, Dartmouth's famous coach and a triple winner in the meet that year.

"Carvajal was only about 5 feet tall and had been a mail carrier in Cuba, running many times from one end of the island to the other," Harry relates. "He obtained sufficient funds to get him to Key West by running around the square at Havana for a whole day. By short trips he worked his way to Missouri for the Olympic race. He started the race clad in a cheap negligee shirt, wore heavy street shoes and, having no running trousers, had to cut the legs of his street trousers to make himself look like a runner. His pace was slow, more or less of a dog trot, but he was a strong runner.

"Whenever he came to a crowd along the course he would stop and converse in broken English, and must have lost almost an hour of his time.

"On one occasion he stopped at an automobile, where a party were eating peaches and, being refused one, snatched two and ran along the road eating them while he ran. He stopped at an apple orchard and ate several apples, but notwithstanding all this he finished fourth and had he known anything about marathon running, or had some one to advise him, he undoubtedly would have been right up in front fighting for the winner's berth.

"The American athletes offered Carvajal a running suit and shoes, but he preferred to run in his home-made outfit. Carvajal was the freshest runner to finish the race.

"Another amusing incident occurred in the same race. Lentauw, from the Kaffir tribe, Zululand, South Africa, ran with his teammate, Yamasani. Lentauw finished ninth and Yamasani finished twelfth. Lentauw ran very well and would have been closer to the winner, but at one stage of the race he was chased about a mile and a half off the course by a dog, losing valuable time."

SCHOOL NINES BUSY THIS WEEK

Two Series, Six Other Games on Week's Schedule.

THE ultimate winner of the inter-high school baseball series may be decided this week in games at Central Stadium on Tuesday and Friday, as Tech, Central and Eastern, the three leaders figure in the games. Central meets Tech on Tuesday, while in Friday's game Eastern battles Western.

Western opens the week's activities with a game with Georgetown Prep and, in addition to the Tech-Central game of Tuesday, a rifle match is listed between Central and Eastern.

On Wednesday, at baseball, Central meets the Catholic University Freshmen at Brookland, Business journeys to Swavely, Eastern plays Devitt and Western plays the Georgetown Freshmen Nine.

Four events are listed Friday, Tech meeting the Georgetown Freshmen, Western and Central meeting in a rifle match, Western playing Eastern in the series game, while Business tackles the St. John's Nine.

HOUGHTON WINNER IN GOLF TOURNEY

The battle for the consolation prize in the first sixteen was a much more memorable struggle. The contestants were Joseph Beger, the young Shackamaxon star, and a student at the Georgetown University, paired against John F. Brawner, Columbia, who two years ago won the medal in the Town and Country qualification round. Brawner was 2 down with only 3 to play, but won the sixteenth with a par 4 in regulation fashion.

Both players halved the seventeenth with birdie 2s, Brawner chipping in from off the green and Beger holeing a 10-foot putt. Then Brawner squared the match with a par 4 on the eighteenth and won the nineteenth when his approach shot left him a putt of not more than 18 inches. Brawner finished in 4, 3, 4, 3, to win, three under 4s.

Two winners of nineteen-hole matches in the forenoon were eliminated in the finals. John F. McCormack, Indian Spring, won his extra hole match against Fred S. Walen, Indian Spring, with a birdie 3, but was defeated in the afternoon by C. C. Heath, Bannockburn.

Frank J. Pickett, Bannockburn, won on the nineteenth hole in the morning, but fell a victim to O. L. Veerhoff, Washington, in the afternoon.

Another unusual match occurred between W. J. Strobel, Argyle, and J. V. Brownell, Indian Spring, in the final round of the second sixteen. Both players were all even at the eighteenth tee, but Brownell, on his second shot, a brassy, drove his ball into a cedar tree near the home green and it lodged in the branches, where it was unplayable. Eventually he lost the hole. The summary:

FIRST SIXTEEN.

Final round—Houghton defeated Wilson, 7 and 6.

Defeated eight (semifinal round)—John F. Brawner (Columbia) defeated Harry G. Pitt (Manor), 5 and 3; Joseph Beger (Schackamaxon) defeated Earl McAleer (Indian Spring) by default.

Final round—Brawner defeated Beger, 1 up, 19 holes.

SECOND SIXTEEN.

Semifinal round—W. J. Strobel (Argyle) defeated C. I. Putnam (Indian Spring), 5 and 3; J. V. Brownell (Indian Spring) defeated Thomas A. Kelliher, jr., (Manor), 5 and 4.

Final round—Strobel defeated Brownell, 1 up.

Final round—Anderson defeated Spicer, 5 and 4.

THIRD SIXTEEN.

Semifinal round—C. C. Heath (Bannockburn) defeated C. M. Noetzel (Argyle), 1 up, 19 holes; John F. McCormack (Indian Spring) defeated Fred S. Walen (Indian Spring), 1 up, 19 holes.

Final round—Heath defeated McCormack, 3 and 2.

FOURTH SIXTEEN.

Semifinal round—Ben L. Fuller (Washington) defeated D. R. Elmore (Washington), 3 and 2; R. L. Taylor (Columbia) defeated George B. Christian, jr., (Columbia), 3 and 2.

Final round—Taylor defeated Fuller, 4 and 2.

Final round—Veerhoff defeated Pickett, 3 and 1.

Tech Track Team Beats Maryland Cubs

Showing marked superiority in the track events Tech High of Washington handily vanquished University of Maryland Freshmen, 71 to 46, at track yesterday afternoon at College Park. The visiting schoolboys swept the 100 and 220 dashes and rolled up 45 points to 18 for the Old Line cubs in the track tests.

Edwards starred for Tech, winning the 100 and 220 in the fine time of 10 1-5 and 22 1-5. Henry McDonald, for Maryland, was high point scorer of the meet, counting 22 points.

100-YARD DASH—Won by Edwards (T.); second, Bailey (T.); third, Quinn (T.). Time, 10 1-5 seconds.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Edwards (T.); second, Quinn (T.); third, Mullen (T.). Time, 22 1-5 seconds.

440-YARD DASH—Won by Nebel (T.); second, Ladd (M.); third, Schrider (T.). Time, 54 1-5 seconds.

880-YARD RUN—Won by Reichman (T.); second, Fouts (M. C.); third, Smith (T.). Time, 2 minutes 11 2-5 seconds.

MILE RUN—Won by Shaw (T.); second, Ziegler (M.); third, Kibler (M.). Time, 4 minutes 32 1-5 seconds.

120-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Pope (T.); second, Fellows (M.); third, Kinnemon (M.). Time, 17 seconds.

220-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Bailey (T.); second, Cosimano (M.); third, Fellows (M.). Time, 26 3-5 seconds.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Cassassa (T.); Kinnemon (M.), McDonald (M.), all tied. Height, 5 feet 2 inches.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Postlethwaite (T.); second, Waesche (M.); third, Kinnamon (M.). Distance, 20 feet 9 inches.

12-POUND SHOT PUT—Won by McDonald (M.); second, Dyott (T.); third, Edwards (T.). Distance, 43 feet 7 inches.

DISCUS THROW—Won by McDonald (M.); second, Edelbuit (T.); third, Wall (T.). Distance, 104 feet 2 inch.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by McDonald (M.); second, L. Winston (T.); third, Oehmann (T.). Distance, 149 feet 5 inches.

POLE VAULT—Won by McDonald (M.), Hissey (T.), tied; third, Ziegler (M.). Height, 10 feet 6 inches.

NOTES OF THE NATS

The second game of the series with the White Sox is booked for this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, with Irving Hadley due to do the Washington hurling. Manager Schalk stated last night that he had no idea what flinger he would call on.

Schalk, by the way, is having his troubles battling illness. Not only is he sick himself with a bad cold, but Pitchers Ted Lyons and Urban Faber are just recovering from the same ailment, while Outfielder Alex Metzler yesterday came down with a severe attack of "flu" which will keep him in bed for several days.

As the umpires are not noticed particularly unless they make what the fan consider bad decisions, attention is called to the fact that another shift—Ormsby, Guthrie and Hildebrand—was on hand yesterday. Guthrie, who was in the American League several years ago, is one of the three new arbiters appointed by President Barnard this season. Connolly, Van Grafian and McGowan are now the only umpires who have not shown here this season.

Mostil made a great try for Barnes' triple which scored Judge in the first inning yesterday, but the wind dragged the ball away from the alien fly chaser.

Indications now are that Manager Harris will not get back in action until the series with the Indians, which opens here Thursday, following an open date on Wednesday. Not only is the Nat leader's hurt finger showing stubbornness in losing its soreness, but Harris' injured instep also is giving him more trouble.

Bib Falk, veteran Chicago outfield star, who has not been hitting well this season, was benched yesterday because Tom Zachary, a left-handed pitcher, started for the Nats. This was a most unusual experience for the flychaser. Carl Reynolds took his place.

"Old Sol" helped Sammy West get a double which was turned into a Washington run in the third inning. Reynolds lost the fly when he was blinded by the sun.

Ossie Bluege again injured the fingers on his throwing hand when Al Thomas, Sox pitcher, slid into the base on the alien third, Pal Ballinger relieved the third-sacker in the next frame. Bluege will be back in the line-up this afternoon.

There is one particular play in which the Nationals need to do some practicing and that is on capturing trapped runners. Hofnefield almost got away from Tate and Ballinger in the fourth inning yesterday. Instead of chasing the runner back to the base and nailing him with one throw the Nats toss the ball back and fourth entirely too much. This not only gives more chances for an error but frequently lets the other runners gain extra bases.

Immediately after Burke's triple to the center-field fence in the fifth Manager Schalk sent three pitchers to left field to warm up.

Outfielder Johnny Mostil made an exceptional catch to rob Rice of an extra-base hit in the fifth. After chasing back almost to the flagpole Mostil turned just in time to snare the ball down by his shoe tops. In the next inning, Barnes, made a fine catch to rob Mostil of a hit.

NOTICE, CLOVERS.

The Clovers will meet at the Garfield Playgrounds today at 1 o'clock for their Capital City League game.

RELAY TEAMS SEEK MD. TITLE

Event Will Be One of Features of "C" Club Meet.

ONE of the features of the annual C Club track and field meet, under the auspices of the Alumni C Club of Central High School next Saturday at the Wilson Stadium, will be a relay race for the Maryland scholastic championship. Some of the best schoolboy sprinters in Maryland are expected to run in this event.

Entries have already been received from many Maryland schools, namely, Gilman, Baltimore Poly, Forest Park, Mount St. Joseph, Sparrows Point and Frederick. Leading the list of Virginia schools entered are Woodberry Forest, Staunton Military Academy and Episcopal, the latter the winner of the meet last year.

It is expected that entries will be the largest since the introduction of the meet. All of the public high schools of the District and Devitt, of the prep schools, will compete, as well as the junior high schools, who will run in their usual events.

Of the many awards to be made, the most coveted will be a leg on the Cornell Cup, which will go to the team winning the meet three years. The Wilson Memorial Cup will go to the team capturing the games annually, while the team scoring the highest number of points will be awarded the George Hamilton Memorial Cup. Central is the only local school eligible for a leg on the Cornell Cup. The junior high school teams also will be awarded a trophy for the team scoring the most points.

The Post Donates to Olympic Fund

May 10, 1928.

Sports Editor, The Washington Post—Sir: I acknowledge receipt of your letter inclosing $204.53 for the District of Columbia Olympic Fund, this contribution being the proceeds of the recent South Atlantic Basketball Tournament, sponsored by The Washington Post.

I desire to express to you, and through you to The Washington Post, my personal appreciation and the appreciation of the committee for this splendid contribution to the District's quota of the Olympic fund.

The spirit always displayed by The Washington Post in cooperating with local activities is most commendable and shows the keen interest which The Post displays in civic projects which reflect credit on the National Capital.

Again thanking you and The Washington Post, I am sincerely yours,

ANTON STEPHAN, Major General,
Chairman, D. C. Olympic Fund Committee.

Tech's High Title Chances Depend on Central Game

By MIKE KELLEY
(Central High School Coach).

COACH GUYON'S ball club from Eastern certainly lived up to the predictions the writer made about it being a troublesome contender this season, in adding Tech to its string of inter-high victims, just about the time every one was conceding the Manual Trainers the big edge in the race. Eastern's victory complicated matters to the extent that right now, Eastern, Tech and Central remain in the running for the title, with Western and Business practically eliminated by reason of their defeats in series games.

Of course, Eastern and Central, being undefeated to date, might be given some preference over Tech, but Tech can get back in the running with a vengeance next Tuesday, when Central is met in another crucial game of the present set, since a Tech victory over the Mount Pleasant nine would give Coach Glenn's charges a rating of three wins and one loss for the series and make it possible for them to gain a final tie, in the event of Central being able to turn back the Lincoln Parkers when the two teams play off their postponed game.

Eastern, now out in front with two wins in as many starts, has no easy road ahead, having to meet Western and Central in future games. Coach Ahearn's supposedly weak Eastern aggregation gave Central the scare of its life last week.

The series so far has been an interesting one from the competitive standpoint, the Eastern-Business, Central-Western and Eastern-Tech games being close enough to furnish plenty of thrills to adeherents from these schools and with three or four more struggles on tap that will mean so much to the contending nines, the race promises to be hard fought right up to the final game.

The leading clouters of last year's series, May of Business and Berger of Tech, have had their heavy guns silenced somewhat to date but are liable to break them out any time now unless their clouting was a flash in 1927. New members have broken into the charmed circle, such as Roberts and Brown of Tech, Wilson of Western, Ware and Wood of Eastern, and Ault and Fisher of Central. Business also possesses some promising hitters in Lewis and the two Joneses, not to mention May, whose bat is always a menace to opposing nines.

Ineligibility, always a bugaboo to the high school coaches, seems to have delt lightly with the teams this past advisory, as few regulars failed to make the scholastic grade necessary to insure their presence with their teams for the rest of the series.

Central suffered the hardest blow by losing a shortstop who had played three seasons, and Eastern will be minus the regular first-sacker on the club in the remaining games.

While Western and Business are to fight it out Friday, to keep out of the cellar the Tech-Central engagement next Tuesday promises to be the next big spot in the series as each will be out to keep in the running, aside from the natural athletic rivalry that exists between the two schools.

Broken Jaw Stops Baltimore Fighter

Centerville, Md., May 12.—Handley Stinson, of Easton, Md., won a technical knockout over Johnny Conover, of Baltimore, when the Monumental City fighter sustained a broken jaw in the third round of the scheduled six-round semifinal at the Centerville Athletic Club Arena here last night.

Kid Cosden, of Cordova, Md., knocked out Heine Welch, of Baltimore, in the first round of the first preliminary, while Student Marth, of Washington College, gained a decision over Joe Tucker in the six-round second preliminary. Lew Haywood, of Baltimore, was given a decision over Bob Trafton after eight rounds of the main wind-up.

CARDINAL JUNIORS PLAY.

The Cardinal Juniors will play the Sam Rices today at 2 o'clock on Rosedale Diamond. Cardinal players are to meet at Wisconsin avenue and O street at 1 o'clock. For games call Cleveland 5894 after 5 o'clock.

France May Defend Davis Cup in Britain

Paris, May 12 (A.P.).—The Davis Cup challenge round may be played in England instead of France, holder of the championship tennis trophy. The French tennis federation is seriously considering staging the matches in England—Wimbledon preferred—unless the government abandons its policy of taxing not only gate receipts at tennis tournaments, but dues members pay various clubs as well. An official statement from the tennis federation, issued this evening, reveals that a change of venue is under consideration.

The entire question depends on the outcome of several suits instituted in Paris courts by the treasury against tennis clubs for recovery of taxes claimed and which clubs have refused to pay. The suits will be heard before the end of May.

TATES WIN, 12-7.

The Tates scored a 12-7 victory over the Marberry Nine yesterday. For games with the winners call Manager Smith at Franklin 5399-J after 5 o'clock.

Later Inaugural Contests Urged for Big Leagues

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

MANY complaints have been registered in recent years because of the early opening of the major league baseball seasons, but, apparently, no action has been taken by the schedule-makers. Conditions this spring were worse than ever, fans who attended the early games taking their lives in their hands. As a matter of fact, asking athletes to play in near-freezing weather immediately upon their return from their Southern training camps also is a hardship on them and, to a certain extent, undoes much of the good which their preliminary work did for them.

And, as weather conditions vary in the several league cities, those teams playing under "winter rules" are at a great disadvantage in competing with rivals who are fortunate enough to have normal weather at the start.

A glance at the big league schedules shows any number of open dates wasted throughout a season. There are 174 days between the opening and closing games of the 1928 American League game-list, with but 154 games to be played. This means that the season could be started 20 days later and finish at the same time if every day were used.

The Nationals, for instance, have 23 blank dates on their schedule, as double-headers are booked on Decoration Day, Independence Day and Labor Day. One day was wasted last month, two will not be used this month and, as the weather gets more and more favorable for baseball, more and more blank dates appear on the schedule.

There are three open days in both June and July and seven each in August and September. In August, the Nats only play once between the 28th and the first of the following month, while they draw four blanks in a row in September, the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th.

In the National League, conditions are somewhat similar, a glance through its schedule showing 33 days on which only six teams play, 20 days on which only four teams see action, and 7 days on which only one game is booked.

President Clark Griffith, of the Washington Club, has informally taken up this question of a later start with the members of the joint schedule committee, which assigns the playing dates to clubs of both leagues but has gotten no satisfaction. They contend that this flock of open dates is necessary so as to avoid conflictions in cities which are represented by entries in both organizations and also because no Sunday baseball is permitted in Pittsburgh, Boston and Philadelphia, the last two cities named having teams in both leagues.

These conditions no doubt make the task of arranging schedules for the two leagues a difficult one, but it is hard to believe that so many off days are necessary. If some of the long jumps scheduled this season and in the past were eliminated, it would save lots of time while better judgment in making routes would help some. The gamblists each season look so much alike that one is led to suspect that those in charge have given the question little or no study, but simply have assigned different teams to series of dates used the previous year.

Although the present season is more than a month old, already there have been approximately 45 games postponed in the two leagues. Three weeks ago, a record was set in this respect when eighteen games were called off on account of weather conditions in the short seven-day span, eleven in the National League and seven in the American.

Baseball is "big business," and its officials have tried to keep up with the times in other respects, but they surely have failed in this matter of schedules in not recognizing the fact that in recent years weather conditions throughout the United States have been gradually changing. Here in Washington for instance, old-timers have noted that the winters are not as cold nor the summers as hot as they used to be.

The "frost line" almost yearly moves farther South and many Dixie cities are now colder during the winter months than they used to be. Several years ago big league teams trained as far North as Louisville, but gradually they have been forced to move farther South and now even northern Florida and northern California are considered too cold for spring training camps, the southern parts of these States getting practically all of the diamond athletes.

If the major league schedule-makers were on the job they would take cognizance of changed weather conditions in the spring and not ask fans to pay or players to play, with the thermometer registering around the freezing point. As pointed out above, if all of the Nationals' open dates were used, it would not have been necessary for this season to have started until the first week in May. Seven of the Nats' eight postponements occurred before May 1. In 1918, because of the World War, a full season was played following an April 20 inaugural, and there was room for a few open dates, which means that with a little study schedules could be crowded in a season opening as late as April 25.

AULT LEADS SCHOLASTIC HITTERS

R. Jones, Keefer Top in Homers, Thefts, Respectively.

EDMUND AULT, captain of the Central High School Baseball Team, though he has played in only one game, tops the list among the leading hitters of the interhigh school baseball series with an average of .833. Technically, Eagle, of the Eastern Team, leads with a perfect percentage, but he has been to bat only once, during which time he served as a pinch hitter and came through with a single.

Ault was way up on top last year, but the same is not true of Charles May, of Business, who hit .714 last year. Louis Berger, of Tech, and others.

Sorrell, of Tech, who has played in three games and been at bat thirteen times, has a percentage of .538.

Revelle Jones, of Business, leads in home-run honors with two, while Richard Keefer, of the same team, and Henry Gorman, of Tech, are fighting it out for stolen bases. Keefer leads with five thefts.

THE Catholic University Track Team easily defeated the George Washington runners yesterday in their final dual meet at Brookland, scoring 69 points against their opponents' 48.

The West Catholic High School, of Philadelphia, Pa., brought home the honors in the interscholastics by totaling 72 points to lead the large field of teams in competition. La Salle finished second with a mark of 29, followed by Mount St. Joseph's, who scored 19½ points. The St. John's School of this city brought up fourth position with 6½ points, while Oakdale failed to garner a point.

An ideal day greeted the teams and the events were run off with clocklike regularity, with the most of the interscholastics being run in the morning and the dual events between Catholic University and George Washington rounding out the interesting afternoon program.

The entire meet was sponsored by the Catholic University of America and the event was the second of its kind in this city. More than 200 athletes competed in the events, with teams from Philadelphia, Long Island, Baltimore and Brooklyn being represented in the interscholastic events.

D. C. Boy's Bat, Arm Wins for Richmond

Richmond, Va., May 12 (A.P.).—Earl Mattingly is a pitcher, but Richmond fans are wondering today if there isn't some way to keep him in the line-up every day. Relieving Drake after Petersburg had scored five runs yesterday, Mattingly pitched shut-out ball for seven and one-third innings; struck out seven men, and hit three home runs and a single in five times at bat. He was accredited with driving in eight runs. Richmond, occupying the cellar in the Virginia League, won the game, 17 to 5.

Earl Mattingly gained his early baseball experience on the Washington sandlots and was recognized among this city's foremost pitchers with Independent teams. He was also known as a heavy hitter while playing with Washington teams.

PENN, TIGERS BEATEN BY COLUMBIA

Crew Wins Childs Cup in Comeback by Wide Margin.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 12 (A.P.).—Only a week after taking the wash of Yale's shell on the Schuykill River, Columbia's intercollegiate championship varsity crew staked a sensational comeback today to trim Pennsylvania and Princeton in the feature race of the Childs Cup Regatta on Lake Carnegie.

Rowing without their captain, Alastair McBain, who was forced from the boat by illness only a few days ago, the Columbia eight nevertheless came through in sparkling and convincing fashion. They set the pace from start to finish, beating Pennsylvania by two and a half lengths, with Princeton another length and a half behind the Quakers.

VARSITY (1¾ MILES)—Won by Columbia, 9 minutes 8 seconds; second, Pennsylvania, 9:16; third, Princeton, 9:23.

JUNIOR VARSITY (1¾ MILES)—Won by Princeton, 9:12 4-5; second, Columbia, 9:19; third, Pennsylvania, 9:24.

FRESHMEN (1¾ MILES)—Won by Princeton, 9:20 1-5; second, Columbia, 9:27 2-5; third, Pennsylvania, 9:34 4-5.

SPECIAL RACE (1 5-16 MILES)—Won by Princeton Freshmen seconds; second, Hun School; third, Pennsylvania Freshmen seconds. (Penn. No. 2 broke oar and crew stopped). No times taken.

Tourneys on 12 Links Asked as Olympic Aid

Golf tournaments at twelve clubs in Washington and vicinity are planned as an aid to raising Washington's quota for the Olympic fund. Gen. Anton Stephan, chairman of the District Olympic fund committee has enlisted the aid of Chester C Caywood, president of the District Golf Association in the proposal to devote the entry fees of the tournament toward the District's quota which is $3.500 short of the $5,000 required.

The tournaments will be held during the late days of May, according to present plans. Notices of the proposed tournaments have been forwarded to the following clubs: Argyle, Beaver Dam, Army War College, Bannockburn, Chevy Chase, Columbia, Congressional, Indian Spring, Manor, Town and Country and Washington.

NAVY DOWNS HOPKINS AT LACROSSE

Comes From Behind to Turn in 5-to-3 Victory.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., May 12.—Johns Hopkins, intercollegiate lacrosse champions for the last two years, faded from the picture as far as chances of representing the United States at the Olympics is concerned, when they bowed to the prowess of the Annapolis Midshipmen in a bitterly contested game here today. The score was 5 to 3, the same count by which the Blue Jays fell before the West Point Cadets two weeks ago.

CITY LEAGUE UNLIMITEDS TO PLAY 10 GAMES TODAY

4 Tilts Mark Opening of Section B

All Section A Clubs to Start Second Round of League Play.

Shamrocks to Oppose "Big D's;" Adison vs. Champs.

SOME merry scrambles will be in order on the local sandlots today when the unlimited teams of Sections A and B of the Capital City League swing into action in ten games.

It will be the second games of the season for Section A teams, but the opening games for Section B teams. Opening games in this section are carded on the District Heights, Washington Barracks and Walter Reed diamonds at 3 o'clock and at Silver Spring diamond at 1 o'clock.

At the Barracks, the Auths will clash with the Army War College Team; District Heights will entertain Ross Council Junior Order United American Mechanics; the Army Medical Center Team will play the Clovers at Walter Reed diamond and the Anacostia Eagles and the Douglas A. C. will hold forth at Silver Spring.

Gaity Hamel or Magee will take the mound this morning at 10:45 o'clock when the Woodridge Club goes after its second straight league victory when it meets the Jewish Community Center Team. This game is expected to draw a big crowd, as Woodridge will have a large following. Sauber or Dreifus will pitch for the Center Team.

The Addison Club will be the home team on the Lyon Village diamond at 3 o'clock through the courtesy of the Cherrydale Club, which plays Herndon at Ashburn. The Addisons will be hosts to the Georgetown A. C. and will send Robertson or Sebastian to the mound in hopes of scoring a decisive victory. Phipps or Hughes will twirl for Georgetown.

Maryland A. C. will play on its home diamond and will attempt to stop the St. Joseph's Nine, winners of the league banner last year. Cinotti, shortstop of the St. Joe Team, will take the lead among the league hitters if he can hold the pace he set last week against the Busmen when he collected three hits.

The Busmen will also hold forth on their home diamond at Arlington, meeting the Chevy Chase Team. The Busmen dropped a close game to St. Josephs last week, while the Celtics won an easy 14-to-2 victory, and the Busmen are prepared to give the Alexandria Team a hard battle.

In the other two games, the Dreadnaughts entertain the Shamrocks at Dreadnaught Park and Chevy Chase plays the Petworths at Friendship Field The Dreadnaughts dropped a ten-inning game last week and hope to get back into the running today, but will find a tough foe in the Big Green Nine. Larry Schneider, former Western High School star, of Frisbie will pitch for the Chevy Chase Team, while Petworth is expected to start Pope for the first time.

Terminal Ice Co. Nine Meets Jefferson A. C.

The Terminal Ice Co. will play the Jefferson A. C. today at 1 o'clock on the Addison diamond. The Terminal players are to meet at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue at 11:30 o'clock.

Guyer or Di Nenna is slated to do the pitching for the Terminals.

Tris Speaker Insects Win Eleventh in Row

The Tris Speaker Insects, who are entered in the Capital City League, won their eleventh straight victory by defeating the Senators yesterday 10 to 6. For games with the winners call Decatur 548 between 5 and 7 o'clock.

GEORGETOWN TIES NAVY ON TRACK

9 Points in Half-Mile, Final Event, Prevents Defeat.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 12.—It has been many years since a Navy field and track team has been victorious over Georgetown University. But today the Middies came mighty close to turning the trick. The final result was a deadlock with each side amassing 63 points Ties in track are few and far between, and it was only by rising to the occasion that the Hilltoppers were able to overcome Navy's 9-point margin with one event remaining, the gruelling half-mile run.

In this, Gorman, Milstend and Julicken finished in order for G. U. to prevent Navy from taking at least one lone point to clinch the meet. Webb, of Navy, all but overcome Julicken in the last 200 yards, but the visitor had just enough stamina left to get over the line by inches.

The academy record for the pole vault was broken by. Midshipman White, who scaled 12 feet 6 inches. The old mark was 12 feet 3 7-10 inches. A break prevented "Whitey" Lloyd, of Navy, from smashing the record in the 120-yard high hurdles. Two of the timers slipped up on the starting gun and the only time gave Lloyd less than 16 seconds. This, however, was ruled unofficial.

In this event, Navy had more bad luck when Williams, trailing Lloyd, fell on the last hurdle, losing the points that would have given Navy the margin of triumph. Lloyd also won the 220 low hurdles in 25 2-10 seconds, with Williams, his teammate, second. The time was only 1-5 of a second behind the academy record.

In the 2-mile run, no Georgetown man completed the course while seven Navy cinder path men finished, the first three joining hands for a triple tie at the finish.

"Doc" Wilson, husky Navy ball pitcher, won second place for the Tars in the discus throw. Sexton, of Georgetown was first by less than on inch.

Georgetown won 9 of the 14 firsts Sexton and Gorman were the visitors' high-point scorers.

100-YARD DASH—Won by Connors (Georgetown); second, Johnson (Navy); third, Jacobson (Navy). Time, 10 2-5 seconds.

MILE RUN—Won by Hennessey (Georgetown); second, Urquhart (Navy); third, Karrer (Navy). Time, 4 minutes 38 seconds.

200-YARD RUN—Won by O'Shea (Georgetown); second, Price (Navy); third Jacobson (Navy). Time, 22 flat seconds.

120-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Lloyd (Navy); second, K. Jellstrom (Georgetown); third, Bruner (Navy). Time, 16 seconds.

2-MILE RUN—First, tie between Nichols, Karrer and Lippert (Navy). Time, 10 minutes 24 2-10 seconds.

220-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Lloyd (Navy); second, Williams (Navy); third, K. Jellstrom (Georgetown). Time, 25 2-10 seconds.

440-YARD RUN—Won by Howell (Navy); second, Gorman (Georgetown); third, Briner (Navy). Time 51 8-10 seconds.

HALF-MILE RUN—Won by Gorman (Georgetown); second, Milstead (Georgetown); third, Julicken (Georgetown). Time, 1 minute 59 2-10 seconds.

DISCUS THROW—Won by Sexton (Georgetown); second, Wilson (Navy); third, Adelman (Georgetown). Distance, 123 feet 3 inches.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Farrell (Georgetown); second, Johnson (Navy); third, Strohbehn (Navy). Distance, 21 feet 6½ inches.

POLE VAULT—Won by White (Navy); second, tie between Kolhas and Snow (Navy). Height, 12 feet 6 inches.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Sexton (Georgetown); second, tie between Baldauf, McPeake and White (Navy). Height, 5 feet 11⅛ inches.

SHOT PUT—Won by Adelman (Georgetown); second, Sexton (Georgetown); third, Crook (Navy). Distance, 43 feet.

Score—Navy, 63; Georgetown, 63.

8 Good Games Promised By Capital City Midgets

"Kiddies," Supported by American Legion Posts, Battling for Chance in Junior World's Series—Sections A and B Active.

TODAY'S games in the midget (American Legion) section of the Capital City League are expected to reveal the true strength of the teams now fighting under the colors of the various legion posts for the right to represent Washington in the State finals, which lead up to the junior world series at San Antonio next September.

Today's schedule calls for eight games, four in section A and four in section B. Some interesting clashes are in store for the sandlot fans in both divisions.

In section A, the Plansky A. C. of Georgetown will meet the Vic Sport Shop Nine on Diamond No. 3 at 11 o'clock; the Powhatans clash with the Boys Club Standards on the same diamond at 1 o'clock; the North Ellipse at 1 o'clock will be the scene of the Corinthian-Mercury game, while Woodside will play Lincoln Post on diamond No. 7 at 11 o'clock.

In section B, the Sam Rices, champions of the league last year will clash with the Corinthian Tigers on diamond No. 4 at 3 o'clock. The Cassies will play St. Stephens at Washington Barracks at 11 o'clock, while Park View and Alexandria Post will play on diamond No. 7 at 3 o'clock. The Russells, winners in the insect class last year, will meet the Kelleys on the West Ellipse at 11 o'clock in the other game listed.

COLLEGE GUN TITLE WON BY G. W.

Colonials Score Handily at Annapolis; Navy Second.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 12.—Marksmen of George Washington University won the intercollegiate rifle championship here today from a field of three other competitors. The Colonials showed consistent firing at all ranges, the 200 and 600 yards slow and 200 and 300 yards rapid.

George Washington piled up a score of 1,375, while the Annapolis Midshipmen, closest competitors, registered 1,358. Two weeks ago the Middies defeated the Colonials in a dual engagement by a somewhat similar margin.

University of North Carolina was third in today's shoot, with a score of 1,277. The team of Virginia Military Institute scored 1,264.

The winners did their best work in slow firing, while Navy held the advantage at rapid Midshipman Little was high gun for the day with a score of 234 of a possible 250, while Hayward, a teammate, was 1 point behind.

Lane, of George Washington, was third with 231, and Parsons and Ladue, of the Colonials, tied for fourth with 229.

The team scores at the respective ranges follow:

G. W. U..	245	292	292	554	1,373

KEIO TOSSERS AT HILLTOP TOMORROW

Japanese Nine Here as Feature of Week's College Card.

A FEATURE of one of the busiest weeks in college circles this year will be the appearance of the Keio University Baseball Team at the Hilltop tomorrow for a scheduled game with Georgetown University at 3:30 o'clock. This team from Japan has been touring the United States, meeting the leading college teams and has displayed plenty of ability

While this is the only game listed for tomorrow, Catholic University and Maryland swing into action on Tuesday, the Old Liners entertaining V. P. I., while the Cardinals travel to New ark for a game with Delaware.

The Maryland Lacrosse Team, which has visions of a trip to the Olympics, meets Lehigh in the only event on Wednesday The Maryland Baseball Team will engage Navy and Catholic University meets Army at West Point in the other event

The only local baseball game on Thursday will be a track meet at College Park between Maryland and Virginia. Playing away will be the Catholic University-St. John's game at Brooklyn, N. Y.; the Maryland-V. P. I. game at Blacksburg, and a tennis match between Maryland and Swarthmore.

The Maryland Tennis Team will stop over in Newark on Friday for a match with Delaware, while the Maryland Baseball Team will journey to Lexington for a game with Washington and Lee.

Three baseball games will be played Saturday, Catholic University meeting Navy at Annapolis, Georgetown entertaining Penn, and Maryland meeting V. M. I. at Lexington CORINTHIAN INSECTS WIN.

The Corinthian Insects scored a 26 to 2 victory over the Joe Judge Insects yesterday. The winners collected 22 hits.

Great Season Predicted For Pitcher Gaitey Hamel

Veteran, After Bad Start, Settled Down and Hurled Woodridge to Victory Over Dreadnaughts—Starred in Pro Ranks.

GAITEY HAMEL, a familiar figure on the local sandlots and a former semipro player, who is appearing in the line-up of the Woodridge Team of section A, of the Capital City Baseball League, is destined to be one of the sensations of the season.

Hamel, who has been in baseball 10 or more years and who has played for Petersburg, of the Virginia League, two years with Louisville, of the American Association, and three years in the old Michigan, Ohio and Indiana League, pitched for the Woodridge Team Sunday in one of the opening games of the league and turned the "Big Dr" back in 10 innings, 5 to 4.

A closer inspection of the box score, however, reveals more. Hamel, pitching his second game of the season was erratic in the first inning. He threw twelve successive balls to put the first three Dreadnaught batters on base and, when he grooved them a little too well to Sweeney, the next man, he connected with one of Hamel's offerings for a home run, giving the Dreadnaughts a 4-0 advantage.

Hamel settled down after that and with no one out he set three men down in the first frame and twirled nine more innings, during which time he allowed only one man to reach second base. In the meantime, his team scored five runs to win 5-4 in 10 innings.

The Southeast star remained out of semipro ball last year for the first time, due to an autom bile accident in which he lost three fingers of his catching hand. He did not remain out of baseball, however, for he pitched two shoutout games in the Government League.

For the three years that Hamel played in the old Michigan, Ohio and Indiana League, he led each year at the bat. He was used almost totally in the outfield during his semipro days because of his hitting ability. Hamel is comparatively young as ball players today go, being only 29. He undoubtedly will be called to the mound today when the Woodridge Club meets the Jewish Community Center Team at Union League Park at 10:45 o'clock.

FIVE OLYMPIC BOXERS ON D. C. CARD

Notables to Compete in City Club Tourney May 25.

FIVE members of the United States Olympic Boxing Team, including the captain, two runners-up for places and a member of the Argentine Olympic Team, have agreed to appear on the boxing program which will be staged at the City Club on May 25.

Chief interest will center about Tommy Lown, who retained his National A. A. U. welterweight title after three days of fighting in the recent Boston tournament. Appearing in the feature bout, Lown will oppose Hector Mendez, Argentine consul to Baltimore, who is a member of the Argentine Olympic Team. Lown outpointed Mendez in a bout here last winter.

Other winners of places on the Olympic Team who will fight on the card are: Marti Sici, of Philadelphia, bantamweight; Ensign Harry Henderson, of Annapolis, middleweight; Leon Lucas, of Philadelphia, light-heavyweight, and George Hoffman, of New York, heavyweight.

The bouts will be restricted to members of the City Club.

The program as arranged thus far follows:

118-pound class—Marty Sici, Philadelphia (Olympic team), middle Atlantic A. A. U. champion vs. Ensign Richard Collins, U. S. Naval Academy, intercollegiate champion.

126-pound class—Ray Gadson, Philadelphia (runner-up, Olympic team), middle Atlantic A. A. U. champion, vs. Ensign Daniel Weintraub, U. S. Naval Academy intercollegiate champion.

135-pound class—George White, Yorkville, N. Y., (runner-up, Olympic team), metropolitan A. A. U. champion, vs. Lee Halfpenny, Baltimore, south Atlantic A. A. U. champion.

Alexandria, Va., May 12.—The St. Mary's Celtics defeated the Allied Roofing Co. this afternoon by the score of 7 to 5 at the Dreadnaught Park.

Struler, on the mound for the winners, pitched a fairly good game, allowing six hits. He had a bad sixth inning when the visitors scored four runs to tie the score, but during the rest of the game he was never in danger.

Tomorrow afternoon, the youthful St. Mary's Club will travel to Arlington to play the A. B. & W. Team in the Capital City League.

SIX AMERICANS SEEK BRITISH WOMEN'S OPEN TITLE

Glenna Collett Chief Hope Of U. S.

Yankee Never Won Tourney to Open Tomorrow.

Mlle. Thion Defends Title Against Field of Stars.

HUNSTANTON, Norfolk, England, May 12 (A.P.).—Seeking the only major British golf title never won by an American, the British women's open golf championship, Glenna Collett, former American champion, Monday launches her third attack. For 30 years British women successfully fought foreigners back as they reached for the cup, but last year Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume, of France, took it at Newcastle, County Down. Miss Collett and the champion play in the first round Monday.

Five other Americans support the New England girl's challenge to a record field of 168 entries, including the French titleholder and four compatriots, three Australians and a German girl.

The Americans are Miss Madge Miller, Birmingham, Mich.; Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Clinton, Iowa; Mrs. Stewart Hanley, Grosse Point Shores, Mich., and Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, British born, who has won the British, American and Canadian women's championships.

Although this is Miss Collett's third entry in the British title event, she has played in it but once before. After losing to Joyce Wethered in 1925, she returned for another try in 1926, but the championship was postponed on account of the nationwide strike, and she could not wait.

Joyce Wethered, who won the title three times, has retired from championship golf after mob scenes at Troon in 1926 when she defeated Cecil Leitch at the 37th hole. She was battered and bruised by a thundering gallery of golf enthusiasts, trying to see her every shot. This year she will be fishing in Scotland as the tournament play goes on.

Should Miss Collett be swept away in a burst of Gallic golfing brilliance, an Anglo-American player may carry on. Miss Maude Hunnewell, a New England girl who has lived in England for some time and will be married in June to Ray Atherton, counselor of the American Embassy in London, plays a good steady game and may seriously be considered as a finalist. Her clubs are Sunningdale and North Berwick, in Scotland.

Mlle. Thion de la Chaume plays much golf on British links and has been practicing steadily to defend her title. She recently won the French title for the third straight time. Judging from her play at Stoke Poges, near London, she will give her American rival a sturdy battle.

Should she fall at the first hurdle, a worthy compatriot, Mlle. M. Le Blan, who reached the semifinals last year, may remain to fight for France.

Neither of Britain's leading players are at Hunstanton, for Cecil Leitch like Miss Wethered, has remained out of the play. Mrs. E. A. Garsdalla, the former Edith Leitch, present English ladies' native champion, is entered, as are Miss Dorothy Pearson, runner-up in the championship last year; Mrs. Garon, runner-up in 1926; Molly Gourlay, native champion of 1926; Enid Wilson, former girl champion and a semifinalist last year.

Swimming Marathon Is Planned by Ross

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Norman Ross, of Chicago, the 1920 Olympic swimming champion, proposes to go Charles "Cash" Pyle, transcontinental derby entrepreneur, one better in marathon promotion. He is planning a long distance swimming race from either Chicago, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis or St. Paul to New Orleans.

The race is to start about August first, with cash prizes totaling $50,000. There are to be two divisions, one for men and another for women, under tentative plans, contestants would swim not more than six hours daily with a two-hour stop for luncheon and rest. Ross believes the race will last 90 days.

Three routes are being considered for the swimming marathon: From Pittsburgh to New Orleans via the Ohio and Mississippi rivers; from Lake Michigan to New Orleans via the Chicago drainage canal, the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, or from St. Paul or Minneapolis to New Orleans down the Mississippi. The distance over the latter course is approximately 2,000 miles.

Although conditions for the contest are yet in the formative stage, entry blanks containing all details will be ready June 1, Ross said. Ross said he expects 500 entrants.

Portuguese Netmen Tie New Zealanders

Lisbon, Portugal, May 12 (A.P.).—Portugal and New Zealand each won a singles match today in the second round play in the European zone Davis Cup eliminations.

Ed Andrews, of New Zealand, defeated Pinto Coehlo, Portugal, 6-3, 6-4, and 6-0. Jose Verda, Portugal, defeated Young, New Zealand, 6-2, 6-2, and 6-3.

Woman Fencer Makes Rapid Strides to Top

London, England, May 12 (A.P.).—Great Britain's new woman's fencing champion, Miss P. Butler, who won the title from the holder, Mrs. Freeman, took up fencing only three years ago.

"My success is not due to an, wonderful gift I am thought to possess,' she said. "It is entirely due to hard work. Long before I took it up I had been keenly interested in fencing. I went to see a few matches and then decided to study the art. My progress seems to have been very rapid but I am sure it is only because I have tried really hard."

Miss Butler considers fencing a wonderfully graceful and healthful sport and says, "I don't known of a better exercise or one better suited to girls."

Court Tennis Crown To Pierre Etchebaster

London, May 12 (A.P.).—Pierre Etchebaster, of France, completed his international court tennis conquests today by capturing the world's professional championship from George Covey, British holder of the title. Etchebaster, who took the American title from Jock Soutar at Philadelphia last January, beat Covey by seven sets to three.

The French star had gained a commanding lead over Covey by taking each of the first two blocks, three sets to one. By dividing the first two sets today Etchebater settled the issue which was on a basis of the best seven out of thirteen sets.

A year ago Covey successfully repelled Etchebaster's challenge by a score of 7 to 4.

Etchebaster, within a year, has demonstrated his supremacy at court tennis in France, the United States and Great Britain to establish an undisputed claim to the world title.

District Electricians In Golf Tourney

Washington's golfing electricians will tee off at the Indian Spring Golf Course Thursday, in the first tournament of the season to be staged by the Electric League of Washington.

Through Jack Burns, vice chairman of the league's sports and outing committee, 20 electrical concerns have donated prizes in merchandise or cash, each worth at least $10. The cash awards will be split so that not less than 30 prizes will be offered to the golfers in the match. The Potomac Electric Power Co. has offered a large silver cup as the first prize. A luncheon for the league members and their guests will precede the match at 12:30 o'clock.

Joe Kirchner is chairman of the sports committee which includes J. C. McLaughlin, A. Dunlop, E. S. Cassidy, E. R. Bateman, F. C. Cox and C. Shropshire.

Tobacco Golf Tourney Starts Tomorrow

A golf tournament, open to all amateur players in the District, will begin tomorrow morning under the direction of Ray Kappler, vice president of the American Tobacco Plantation Co. whose organization has inaugurated the event. Competition will be 72 holes, medal play, each day on the East Potomac course and 36 at Rock Creek Park. Prizes costing $900 have been provided, the principal being the Tobac Cup, a silver trophy 30 inches high. The second prize will be a silver tray, with a cocktail set for third prize.

In addition, there will be nine blind prizes, the committee having selected nine totals for the 72 holes, and the players whose aggregate scores correspond with, or come nearest to these numbers are being awarded a prize. These totals have already been selected and are enclosed in a sealed envelope. The tournament will continue until next Friday and the prizes will be awarded at 5 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

Jack Johnson in K. O. Over John Barleycorn

Kansas City, May 12 (A.P.).—A technical knockout over John Barleycorn before an audience of churchmen has been added to Jack Johnson's long list of triumphs.

Appearing before a world-wide prohibition meeting at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here yesterday, the former heavyweight champion was applauded by bishops and ministers when he attributed his physical condition to "not drinking, not carousing and getting a good night's rest."

The veteran negro fighter was introduced by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of Washington, D. C., Methodist dry leader, who announced Johnson as an impromptu prohibition speaker.

"I want you to know," said Johnson, "that I am absolutely against whisky, beer and all intoxicating liquor, because I do not believe liquor helps the human body at all."

ELECTRIC FARMS SPRING UP ALL OVER COUNTRY

One Near Chicago Is Equipped Under Now Famous Red Seal Plan.

POWER IS WARMING MILK

Uses of electricity on the farm are daily spreading. All over the country model farms are being established, to conduct experiments in the application of electricity for the advancement of agriculture. Information received by the Electric League of Washington, D. C., shows that many of these experiments have resulted in the full developement of practical applications never before dreamed of.

Among these the old-time pig comes into his own in securing the benefits of the modern uses of the genie, electricity. On one Wisconsin farm buttermilk is warmed electrically and kept in circulation to prevent carbonization.

This brings about a material increase in the rate of gain for early spring pigs. Electric immersion heaters and small circulating p ps are used. On a farm at Cedar Falls, Iowa, electric b bs are used to heat the food for pigs, only a few days old. It is important agriculture experts point out, to start the pig off properly so that he will develop into the right kind of a hog.

Another application of electricity on the farm is at Auburn, Ala., where light traps are installed to fight the insect. Such installations have been found to protect cucumbers, tomatoes and muskmelons, which are raised in quantity by truck farmers.

The Associated Press recently released a news story, dealing with an address made by Dr. H. J. Muller, of the University of Texas, before the National Academy of Sciences, in which Dr. Muller told of the development of important information concerning evolution by use of X-ray. The actual fundamental nature of certain forms of life are changed with the application of the light rays, Dr. Muller said. The extent of the importance of such studies can not possibly be foreseen.

One electrical farm located within 35 miles of Chicago follows the Red Seal plan of wiring in all of the buildings. This plan is operated in Washington by the Electric League, and is available to a residences and apartments. Its application on farms and in rural communities is inevitable, but so far unusual.

In the near future an electrical model farm will be installed somewhere near Washington and will be conducted under the cooperative direction of the Department of Agriculture, the University of Maryland, a National Rural Project Committee, and a local committee of those interested in the developement of the use of electricity on the farm.

Electric Light Bulbs Popularize Whiteman

Paul Whiteman, the master orchestra leader of the day, has been becoming more popular on Broadway by the use of electric light, the Electric League of Washington has learned recently. The manager of one of the mammoth theaters of New York City has painted a likeness of the musician with light.

The head is outlined in black on white board, the face is a caricature, and the characteristic lines are separate pieces of wood painted black. A spotlight trained on this from below gives the face a natural appearance by the casting of the shadows. It is something rather new and is reported to attract theater goers effectively. It could be seen several blocks away.

Electric League Briefs

By NORMAN H. BARNES, Secretary.

The meeting of the Electric League of Washington was one of rather unusual attraction. The president of the league, A. F. E. Horn, was absent attending a meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, where his chief, Owen D. Young, acted as chairman, and the vice president, Joseph T. Kirchner, presided. The humble secretary was attending a business meeting, and his chair was amply filled by B. E. Dement, a long-time worker in the Electric League's affairs. No substitute was needed in the explanation of the Red Seal Plan, however. George P. Mangan, sales manager of the Potomac Electric Power Co., and chairman of the red seal and wiring committee of the league, performed his duties in this capacity as only a veteran could. An electrically-prepared buffet supper was served.

All eyes owned by the members of the Electric League, particularly those golf shooters and the aspirants in that direction who like to play the game, are turned toward the spring tournament, to be held over the Indian Spring course on May 17—starting with a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. There will be something like 30 prizes valued at around $10 each to be awarded to about 50 participants in the competition. A. C. Burns, vice chairman of the committee, accumulated the prizes.

Harry Kirkman, of the Society for Electrical Development was a visitor at the office of the Electric League on Wednesday. He is supervisor of electrical wiring standardization and code activities of the society and is recognized as a national authority on electrical installations. He assisted in the production last year of the new electrical code of rules and regulations for the District of Columbia.

At its meting Monday the Executive Committee of the Electric League decided to renew its arrangement for the Society for Electrical Development with the United States whereby Dr. Louise Stanley conducts a series of experiments and tasks of electrical refrigeration. This work is considered of national importance since the work of Dr. Stanley guides the electrical refrigeration manufacturing industry in the proper direction. The matter is handled locally by the refrigeration group of the Electric League of Washington, which is headed by Harry R. Carroll.

The current issue of the Electragist, the official monthly publication of the International Association of Electrical Contractors, carried a picture of the annual banquet of the Electrical League here.

N. F. Norfesi, electrical contractor, member of the Electric League, does not say a great deal but proves to be one of the really aggressive members of the organization. Mrs. Morfesi is a great help in the contracting business of her husband. She is a student of electrical engineering at G. W.

R. R. Breen, chairman of the subcommittee on fixtures and lamps of the business promotion committee of the Electric League, and vice president of the C. A. Muddiman Co., has some interesting news to be announced in the late summer or early fall in connection with electrical fixtures for the Washington home.

In addition to the weekly cooking school held at the Potomac Electric Power Co., Fourteenth and C streets northwest, C. M. Marsh, vice president and manager of the Potomac Electric Appliance Co., and member of the Electric League, announces that similar schools are now being held on Mondays and Tuesdays in Upper Marlboro, Md., under his direction. These schools are conducted by Miss Mary Turner, home economist.

P. A. Davis, chairman of the fixture dealers' group of the Electric League and vice president of the O. R. Evans' & Brother Co., has one good idea after another about electrical applications. He recently brought out the cordiality which is added to the home by the burning of the outdoor lights, and received the attention of many interested listeners. Davis served for two years as secretary of the Electric League.

At the recent testimonial dinner given to Maj. W. E. P. Covell, at the Columbia Country Club, league members displayed talents not known before to be theirs. G. P. Mangan and Fred Mitchell proved to be competent soloists, and L. T. Souder and A. F. Horn again showed themselves as real orators, while Jack Burns and Frank Shull led the very long list of capable comedians. Maj. Covell and every one else had a tremendously fine time at that ver, delightful and informal dinner

A recent conference was held by the Red Seal and wiring committee of the Electric League with representative electrical contractors. Representing the union contractors were Theodore E. Mullican, Carroll P. Carpenter and J. C. Harding. The nonunion contractors had present at the meeting R. P. Gibson, L. L. Hayes and E. R. Bateman. G. P. Mangan, the committee chairman, presided.

Electric League Recipes

By MARY TURNER, Home Economist.

Electrically Baked Ham.

Ham baked in the electric oven is tender, juicy and of a superior quality. If the ham is salty, soak it overnight or for several hours in cold water. Ham that is sweet cured need not be soaked. Wash thoroughly. Place in large pot on top of the electric range with 4 cups of water, juice from 1 can pineapple, 1 small bay leaf, 3 stalks celery cut in small pieces, 1 small onion cut in small pieces and steam for 2 hours. Have switch turned to high until water boils, then turn to low. Cover must fit tightly to create steam. Remove from pot and place on rack on the broiler pan of your electric oven. Preheat electric oven to 350 degrees and bake two hours. Remove from the oven, skin it, cut off some of the superfluous fat, cover with brown sugar and place slices of pineapple on top secured with toothpicks and stuck with cloves. Return to oven and bake 1 hour.

Ham Souffle.

2 cups milk.
2 tablespoons melted fat.
¼ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
1 cup cold finely chopped ham.

Add bread crumbs to milk, add fat, seasoning and ham. Fold in 3 eggs, beaten very light. Pour in a buttered baking dish and bake ½ hour in the electric oven at 350 degrees.

Ham Hash.

2 cups chopped boiled ham.
2 cups cubed cold potatoes.
1 cup of stock or milk.
Salt and pepper to taste.
2 tablespoons minced onion.
2 tablespoons minced green pepper.
2 tablespoons of bacon fat or drippings.

Melt fat in a frying pan. Add the minced onion and peppers. Cook until light brown. Add the remaining ingredients, well mixed. Put them into a shallow buttered baking dish, sprinkle the top with buttered bread crumbs and bake in the electric oven for ½ hour at 350 degrees. Left-over gravy or white stock may be used in place of milk or stock.

Scalloped Ham.

1 large slice of uncooked ham.
2 large potatoes.
1 carrot.
1 small onion.
1 teaspoon parsley.
1 cup milk.
Salt and pepper.

Put a layer of thinly sliced potatoes in a buttered baking dish, season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with chopped onion, parsley and carrot and cover with slice of ham, cut in three or four pieces. Cover with another layer of potatoes, carrots, onion and parsley and pour milk over all. Cover and bake for 1 hour in an electric oven at 350 degrees.

Slice of Ham Baked in Grapejuice.

Select slice of ham 1 inch thick. If salty, cover with milk and let stand for 1 hour. Drain. Brown slightly on both sides in frying pan over high heat. Remove to baking dish and cover with mustard and brown sugar. Pour 1 cup of grapejuice over ham and bake in electric oven for 1 hour at 350 degrees.

Roast Pork With Raisins.

Select loin of pork about 5 pounds. Wipe the pork with damp cloth. Cut 3 deep slashes in the loin and stuff with raisins. Dredge with salt and pepper, place on rack in broiler pan provided in your electric oven and dredge with flour. Preheat electric oven to 400 degrees. Set oven control at 400 degrees. Bake for 2½ hours. Serve with candied sweet potatoes and apple sauce.

ELECTRIC DEVICE BEST GIFT MOTHER'S DAY

Manual Labor of Other Times Ended by the Newest of Mechanical Aids.

This is Mother's Day. There is no more appropriate time to bring forth the benefits which the use of electricity has been and continuing to be to lifting of the load from the shoulder of mother. It hasn't been so long since, when mother was altogether a manual laborer, with not nearly the time that she wanted to devote to the guiding of the children and to the other finer things which she clearly realized a part of her duty to the family.

Now, however, with the electric sewing machine, the washing machine, the ironing machines, the vacuum cleaner and the hundred and one other electrical contrivances, mother not only has time to spend with the children, but also occasionally is able to find time to play, to freshen her mind and to rest her body so that she can go on with the most serious task which is assigned to her, the keeping together of her family and the bringing up of the children.

It is the most important task in the world, and the application of electricity to assist in its simplification is as important as the application of electricity in the great factories of the country, where industry could move at one-fiftieth the rate of speed which the genie, electricity makes possible.

Mother's tools, in the form of electrical labor savers should be provided and kept in operation with much more faithfulness than the tools of the carpenters and the other builders, for is it not true that the leader of all the builders is none other than mother.

CAPITAL MAN INSTALLS ELECTRICAL DISPLAY

Miami Shriners' Event Held Enhanced by Designs in Colored Lamps.

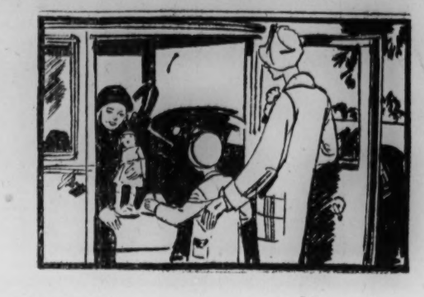

The glorification of the already glorified Miami, Fla., was a thousand times enhanced during the recent Shrine convention, by the elaborate and extensive electrical display, installed by the Howard P. Foley Co., members of the Electric League of Washington. This colorful annual event, the conclave of the Shriners, featured miles of special illumination, consisting mainly of thousand upon thousand of colored lamps fashioned in unique and original designs, and spreading in arches across the main thoroughfares of the resort city.

Each street lamp post contained two theatrical-type Kleigle flood lights, each with a 1,000-watt lamp, thus giving the section designated as the "Garden of Allah" a daylight appearance throughout the night. In the bay, off the coast of Miami, an electrical reproduction of the aurora borealis was continually visible and ever changing in hue in the same manner as the actual northern lights.

This electrical installation will be looked upon, authorities have already indicated, as the outstanding accomplishment in outdoor spectacular illumination. Cameras were constantly clicking the display, and it is expected that textbooks brought out to illumination will soon give much space to explanation of this electrical exhibit.

Mother's Day—1928

TODAY custom urges that we honor our Mothers particularly—do something out of the ordinary as a slight return for the great meaning embodied in the word "Mother."

But EVERY day can be Mother's Day in the electrically complete home! By being provided with all the electrical conveniences and comforts so essential in the modern home, Mother's jobs become JOYS!

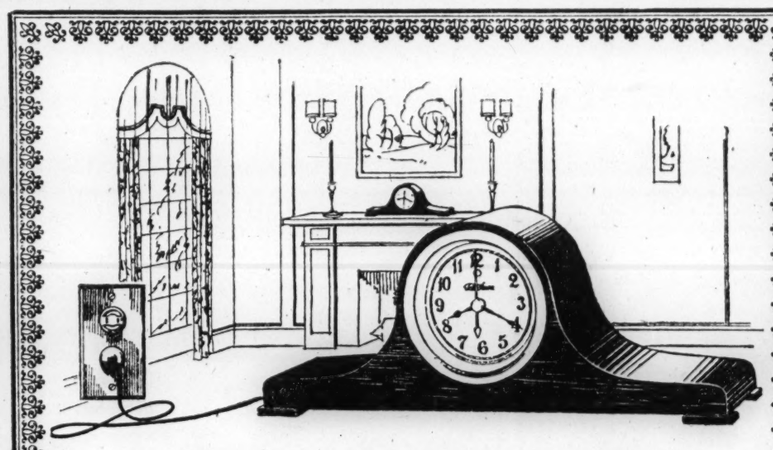

Resolve this Mother's Day to visit your neighborhood electrical shop to make home electrically complete and give Mother those leisure hours to which she is entitled.

MOTHERS OF YESTERDAY —AND TODAY

Yesterday's Mother

had many oily lamps to fill—many wicks to trim and lamp chimneys to clean. She had to read by the uncertain flicker of lamplight, cook over a hot coal range, sew by hand or foot power, sweep with an old-fashioned broom in an atmosphere filled with dust and germs. She had to contend with the unreliable cooling facilities of a mussy ice box, do her washing over a wash tub and scrubboard and her ironing with flats heated over a blazing fire.

Yes, indeed, yesterday's mother worked hard and long—no wonder her work was never done—but that was before the day of the modern Aladdin —Electricity.

How Different Today

The twentieth century mother merely touches a switch or pulls a little chain and instantly she has a brilliant, steady light by which to read—no smoke—no odor. She sews without effort on an electric machine. Electric servants, attached instantly and easily to handy duplex outlets in every room, wash her clothes and her dishes—sweep and clean her house—cook her meals—do her ironing and keep her food supplies from spoiling by dependable refrigeration. Are you an up-to-date mother? Members of The Electric League will supply you with these modern electric servants.

GRAIN MART WEAK, PRICES UNSETTLED, REVIEW DISCLOSES

Rains in Drought Areas and Favorable Weather for Spring Crop Recorded.

HEAVY ABANDONMENT OF WHEAT REPORTED

Corn Registers Sharp Decline as Week Ends. Rye and Oats Hold Firm.

The grain market continued rather unsettled during the week ended May 12, but rains in the drought areas of the central West, together with more favorable weather for the planting and growth of spring grains, brought about a weaker situation toward the close of the week and prices of both wheat and corn declined sharply, according to the Weekly Grain Market Review of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The rapidly decreasing supply of rye and oats held the market relatively firm for these grains. Barley and flax were also steady under a continued good demand.

An unusually heavy abandonment of winter wheat has occurred this season, according to the May 1 estimate, which indicated that the acreage remaining for harvest this season is 25.1 per cent less than the acreage planted last autumn and totals about 35,858,000 acres compared with 37,872,000 acres harvested last season. The condition of the crop on May 1 was also unusually low, being 74.9 per cent of normal, which on the acreage reported for harvest would indicate a production of about 486,478,000 bushels, or about 65,000,000 bushels less than was harvested last season. The heaviest abandonment occurred in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky, where approximately two-thirds of the crop has been abandoned. On the basis of the May estimate, the production of soft red winter wheat would amount to around 118,000,000 bushels and of hard winter wheat about 365,000,000 bushels. The remainder, or about 63,000,000 bushels, would be accounted for in the white winter wheats.

The weather during the week was more favorable in both the soft and hard winter wheat areas. More favorable weather also was reported in the spring wheat areas where seeding has now been mostly completed and in Canada where an increased acreage of spring wheat is in prospect. Moisture is plentiful in the spring wheat areas of both Canada and the United States, and only warm weather is needed to give the crop a good start.

Weather Conditions Abroad.

Weather conditions in Europe also became more favorable, according to trade reports. Heavy rain and snow were reported in Russia. Conditions in Italy were generally satisfactory with rainfall plentiful. The end of wheat harvesting in France is rather thin with weather unfavorable. Some districts of Germany reported poor prospects, but conditions generally were about average. Abandonment of wheat acreage in Prussia is estimated at 3.5 per cent. The Indian crop of rye at 2.9 per cent and the movement of the crop is completed, and the movement of grain from this country is increasing. Crop reports from North Africa. Prices of native wheat in Europe fluctuated more than usual, being about 3 cents higher than a week ago at Hamburg, 2¼ cents lower in Paris and 4 cents lower at Milan. American amber durum wheat was quoted in Genoa at $2.18 compared with quotations of native wheat at Milan of $2.15¾.

Cash wheat in the domestic markets declined even more than future prices, resulting in a material lowering of protein premiums for both hard winter and spring wheat. Dull demand for flour at current quotations has curtailed milling demand for high grade wheat. Mills generally were buying only limited amounts for immediate requirements. No. 2 hard winter was quoted May 11 at Kansas City at $1.58-$1.65 per bushel for 12 per cent protein or 13-20 cents over the July quotation. Twelve and one-half per cent protein was quoted at 19-25 cents over the July, and 13 per cent protein at 25-30 cents over.

Winter Prices Reduced.

Soft winter wheat prices were also sharply reduced, particularly at St. Louis where Western white and red winter wheat has accumulated and weakened the market. Soft red winter was quoted 15c to 20c lower than a week ago, No. 2 red selling at $1.95@1.97. The substitution of low protein hard winter has also become a weakening factor in the soft winter wheat market. Demand from Southern mills was the dullest for some time, particularly at Cincinnati where No. 2 red was quoted May 11 at $1.98@2.00 per bushel. No. 2 red was quoted at Toledo at $1.98@1.99 and nominally at Chicago at $2.01 per bushel.

An easier tone prevailed in the spring wheat markets with milling demand slow. Cash prices declined more than futures with No. 1 dark Northern quoted May 11 at Minneapolis at $1.58½@1.63½ for 12 per cent protein. This quotation is 9c to 14c over the May delivery price; 13 per cent protein of the same grade was quoted at 29c to 33c over the May and 14 per cent at 45c to 50c over. Winnipeg cash wheat declined with the futures. No. 1 Northern Manitoba being quoted at Winnipeg at $1.60 which would compare in a general way with Montana No. 1 hard spring quoted at Minneapolis at $1.93@1.95½. The demand for durum wheat was also dull, but offerings were small and premiums remained practically unchanged. No. 1 amber durum was quoted at $1.41@1.63 at Minneapolis, which was 2c to 25c over the Duluth May which advanced 1½c for the week.

Coast Markets Weaker.

Pacific Coast markets were also weaker, influenced by the favorable new crop prospects and the lower prices in Eastern markets. Eastern demand has taken most of the wheat from the Pacific Northwest recently and trade estimates are that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels of soft wheats have been sold to the Midwest this season. Exporters have been unable to compete with the Eastern buyers. The first cargo of new crop wheat was reported sold during the week. New crop wheat for Eastern shipment was quoted at around $1.49 per bushel at Portland. Weather is favorable and the growing crop is in good condition. Offerings of old crop grain were light at San Francisco, where good milling wheat was quoted at $2.70 per 100 pounds. Some new crop wheat was reported contracted for in the country on the basis of $2.25 per 100 delivered San Francisco. Good milling wheat at Los Angeles was quoted at $2.75@2.85. New crop Imperial Valley wheat of good quality and practically no dockage was offered in that market during the week. Bids for this wheat were $2.67½ but $2.85 per 100 was being asked.

The rye market had independent strength and did not follow the decline in wheat prices. The unfavorable prospects for the new crop, the condition of which was only 73.6 per cent of normal May 1, according to official estimate, together with the limited amount available for the remainder of the season and prospects of further export inquiry from European countries were the strengthening factors. The acreage intended for grain is estimated at 3,562,000 acres, compared with 3,670,000 acres harvested last year. On the acreage remaining for harvest the condition May 1 would indicate a yield of approximately 11.1 bushels, or a total production of about 39,368,000 bushels. This would be about 19,000,000 bushels below last season's harvest. The unfavorable outlook for the Polish and German crops would indicate further export takings from these countries. May rye at Minneapolis advanced 3¼ cents during the week and closed May 11 at $1.28⅞. No. 2 rye was quoted in that market at $1.29⅞, and at Chicago at $1.35. No. 2 rye for export was quoted f. o. b. New York at $1.49¾.

Corn Prices Show Decline.

Larger offerings of corn brought out by the recent high prices, together with more favorable weather in the corn belt which has enabled farmers to make good progress with their planting operations brought about a weaker tone in the corn market and prices declined 3 to 5 cents per bushel at the principal markets. With considerable of the abandoned wheat acreage going into corn an increased acreage is in prospect with moisture conditions generally good and only warm weather required to give the crop a favorable start. Farm stocks of old corn, however, are materially smaller than last year and market stocks have been reduced about 12,000,000 bushels during the past month. No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at the close of the week at Chicago at 1.06½@1.07½; Omaha, $1.01 to $1.01½; Kansas City, $1.02½ to $1.04. No. 2 yellow was quoted at St. Louis at $1.09 per bushel.

The oats market also had independent strength as a result of a continued active demand for the limited supply of oats yet available. May future prices advanced nearly 2 cents and cash prices were equally firm. Quotations on new crop deliveries, however, are being made at sharp discounts under spot prices because of the generally satisfactory stand and favorable prospects for the new sown crop. No. 3 white oats were quoted at the close of the week at Chicago at 66½ to 71 cents; Minneapolis, 62¾ to 64¾ cents, and at Kansas City at 67½ to 68½ cents.

The barley market was firm with all grades being readily taken at slightly higher prices than a week ago. Best malting types were quoted at Minneapolis at 95 to 97 cents, and at Chicago at $1.01 to $1.10 per bushel. Feeding grades were quoted at Minneapolis at 87 to 89 cents, and at Chicago at 94 cents per bushel. Special, No. 2 barley was quoted at $1 to $1.09 at Toledo, where good quality barley was bringing the best price on the crop. No. 2 barley for export was quoted at $1.06 f. o. b. New York.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, May 12 (A.P.).—Staggered by an unexpected jolt from official sources, the wheat market reeled heavily downward today in the late trading. Reports that the Government May crop report added 7,392,000 bushels to the 1928 probable yield of domestic winter wheat, and brought a bid of series of rushes to the selling side of the market.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 2⅝c to 3⅛c net lower, with corn ¾c to 1¼c off, oats varying from ⅛c decline to ¾c advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10c.

Changes in the Government crop figures made the forecast of winter wheat production 486,780,000 bushels, as compared with 479,086,000, the total given from Washington a few days ago. In itself, the difference was not of great importance, but the announcement happened to come at a time when the market was sensitive to any kind of bear influence.

On the sudden downward plunge of wheat values which took place, the market fell to 4¾c a bushel under top figures that were reached earlier in the day. Every future delivery of wheat went as low as $1.50, and afterward displayed little power to recover. Early advances were ascribed chiefly to persistent dry weather in spring wheat territory and to Liverpool quotations higher than were looked for. Besides, a comprehensive trade summary issued here today said that in the United States, as a whole, the 1928 agricultural season is now 15 to 40 days late.

Corn held better than wheat, but nevertheless reflected the action of the bread grain. Good cash demand for corn was in evidence.

May and July oats rose temporarily to the highest prices yet this season. Frost in part of the oats belt led to more or less apprehensoin of crop damage.

Provisions were easier on account of scattered selling. Weakness in cotton and grain had some influence.

What's Behind Your Stock?

New York, Ontario & Western Ry. Co.

The New York, Ontario & Western Railway Co. operates 513 miles of roads and branches. The New Haven Railroad acquired control of the property in 1904 through purchase of a majority of the capital stock, but the investment has not proved profitable. Three-fourths of the company's revenue freight tonnage is products of mines, chiefly anthracite. Manufactures and miscellaneous items account for about another 15 per cent.

This company's ability to show a small balance applicable to dividends is due mostly to its "other income," in turn chiefly consisting of returns from its anthracite coal holdings. Net income has shown considerable variance, being $123,000 for 1923, increasing to $628,000 for 1924, and declining to $41,000 in 1925. The net income in the early part of 1926 of the last anthracite strike allowed the road to show for that year the largest figures for both gross and net income which it reported in the last half decade. Net for 1926 was $775,000, but 1927 showed another shrinkage, net income dropping to $5,631.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—The cotton market was lower today under week-end liquidation and some trade or commission house selling, evidently inspired by reports of rains in Texas. July sold off to 21.03 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 25 to 34 points.

The opening was steady at declines of 5 to 14 points, with active months soon showing net losses of 26 to 30 points on the rain reports and the failure of Liverpool fully to meet yesterday's local advance. This selling brought in considerable commission house trade calling and a renewal of consequent house demand. Prices steadied points during the middle of the morning, but reports of rains in the Southwest continued to come and the market weakened in late trading under renewed selling. May sold off to 21.32 and October to 21.02 late in the morning, and the close was within a point or two of the low figure.

Trading was fairly active at the start, but became comparatively quiet during the middle of the morning. There was another spurt toward the close, probably on liquidation by weak holders.

The opinion was generally expressed that the rains in the Southwest would be beneficial, although there appeared to be some doubt as to how much relief they might have afforded in the drouth sections. The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at 94,556 bales against 118,675 last year, and 91,162 two years ago.

Private cables said there had been continental buying and trade calling in the Liverpool market which had been supplied by realizing, and that there was only a limited business in cotton cloths. The selling here was supposed to include orders from the Southwest, but the bulk of it was attributed to realizing or liquidation of long accounts. It was reported that moderate warm rains were wanted in some central belt sections to bring up replanted cotton, but a possibility that the western belt rains might work eastward by Monday morning may have caused some covering.

Securities Prices Abroad Move Toward Higher Levels

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Prices of stocks listed on leading foreign exchanges have shown a slowly rising trend during the past two years, although various factors, such as currency depreciation and unsettled business and governmental conditions, have caused wide fluctuations.

A chart prepared by the New York Stock Exchange for use in the annual report of the president shows the movement of leading foreign stock exchange share indices, or averages. While these are not exactly comparable, each shows the price trend of securities in its partitcular country.

A slowly rising tendency is noticeable in the average for all classes of shares on the London Stock Exchange, with the extreme advance of chemical shares the feature of 1927. Values of French shares rose rapidly, despite stabilization of the currency and government financing operations. Critical conditions in the Berlin money market affected security prices on the Berliner Borse, but recovery is shown Shares in the Amsterdam market have been steady. Austrian currency troubles and partition of the empire adversely affected prices on the bourse of Vienna, but they improved last year. At Milan prices have risen since the currency was stabilized.

FINANCIAL DISTRICT CHATTERBOX

Roland MacKenzie last week joined the local office force of G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., investment bankers and members of the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. MacKenzie, in entering the investment security field, is starting at the bottom so that he may make a thorough study of the business.

The Washington offices of Harris, Mooney & Co., investment bankers and fiscal agents for Bankstocks Corporation of Maryland, have been moved to the ninth floor of the Southern Building L. R. Mayhew is the local manager.

Hugh W. Barr, executive vice president International Exchange Bank, is passing the week-end at Pennsylvania State College with his son, who is a junior there.

Maurice Otterback, president of the Anacostia Bank, is enjoying a brief vacation with friends in Pennsylvania. He hopes to return in time for the preconvention dinner of the District Bankers Association tomorrow night at the Columbia Country Club.

The Security Club of the American Security & Trust Co. will today complete the two-day golf tournament which the members are playing on the course at Friendship, the home of E. B. McLean, a director of the trust company.

Arthur B. Dickinson, of the bond department of the local office of J. & W. Seligman & Co., was yesterday explaining away a broad grin with the statement that a son and heir had arrived at his home on Friday night.

Charles Carroll Morgan, manager of the bond department of G. M.-P. Murphy & Co., has returned from a short business trip to the home office in New York.

Charles D. Boyer, cashier of the Federal-American National Bank, and party departed yesterday by motor for a week-end visit in Cumberland, Md.

Laurence A. Slaughter, vice president Commercial National Bank, who was confined to his home for several days last week as the result of a severe cold, was back at his desk on Friday.

E. J. McQuade, vice president of the Liberty National Bank, chairman of the general convention committee of the District Bankers Association, expects to visit Montauk Beach, Long Island, tomorrow, in connection with the convention arrangements.

W. B. Hibbs, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., departed on Friday to pass the holidays at his country estate near Leesburg, Va.

The popularity of the interior plans of the Federal-American National Bank is increasing generally among the financial institutions of the country where new buildings are being erected.

The Independent Trust Co. of Charlotte, N. C., recently installed duplications of the local bank equipment in copying the floor, ceilings, desks and the cageless counters, while the Security Savings Bank & Trust Co., of Toledo, Ohio, adopted the upstairs banking room plan, installed cageless counters and copied much of the furniture, including the desks.

Several members of the Washington Bond Club have been invited to attend the luncheon of the Bond Club, of Baltimore, on May 23, at which Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will be the speaker.

Philip M. Brown, of the stock department of Eastman, Dillon & Co., who was a visitor last week to the Washington offices of the company, returned to New York on Friday.

Gov. Roy A. Young, of the Federal Reserve Board, is in the South, where he will attend several bankers' meetings in a number of States.

The Security News, monthly publication of the American Security & Trust Co., was received yesterday by its host of eager readers. The current issue carries several interesting articles on subjects pertinent to banking, as well as numerous items of interest to the officers and auxiliary staff of the trust company by which it is published. Robert L. Flather, assistant secretary of the company, is the editor of this sparkling publication.

B. Ashby Leavell, trust officer of the Merchants Bank & Trust Co., is passing the week-end at his country home in Montgomery County, Md.

The District of Columbia Conference of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers held its monthly meeting last week preceded by a dinner at the University Club. J. Dann Faber, president, presided.

CAPITAL COLLEGES GIVEN TWO BANK SCHOLARSHIPS

George Washington and Georgetown Universities Favored by Association.

BOND OFFERINGS FEWER

By F. W. PATTERSON.

The educational foundation of the American Bankers Association has awarded two scholarships to the District of Columbia—one at George Washington University and the other at Georgetown University. The scholarships will be available for the scholastic year beginning next fall and will provide recipients with loans of $250, to be repaid on easy terms after leaving college.

The apportionment of the scholarships by the educational foundation follows receipt by the American Bankers Association of $469,377 of the fund of $500,000 subscribed for educational purposes as an appropriate marking of the fiftieth anniversary of the association and is the sequel to the report of John H. Puelicher, chairman of the board of trustees, to the executive council at its recent meeting in Augusta, Ga.

In each of the selected colleges a committee is to be appointed to make the awards, one member of which will be a banker selected by the president of the college. Applications must be made direct to the colleges and not to the educational foundation.

The conditions under which the scholarships are placed were given by Mr. Puelicher and are set forth in the current issue of the American Bankers Association Journal as follows:

"The board of trustees has now so shaped its affairs that it is ready to award scholarships in the selected schools of the various States which have completed their quota.

"One scholarship will be awarded to a higher institution of learning in 1928 in every State in which the quota of that State has been covered by cash payments or by collectible pledges due at a definite date. Additional scholarships shall be awarded to higher institutions of learning in every State for the amount of its quota or contributions above $1,000 on the basis of one scholarship for each unit of $2,000 or fraction thereof in the amount of $500."

The scholarship awards which are apportioned in practically all of the States, will in addition to those in the District go to the following States in the Fifth Federal Reserve District: Maryland, Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore and University of Maryland at College Park; Virginia, University of Virginia, Washington & Lee University, of Richmond and William and Mary College; West Virginia, West Virginia University; North Carolina, University of North Carolina and North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering; South Carolina, two scholarships to be apportioned later.

Bond Offerings Decrease.

There was a slight falling off in bond offerings last week, the total being $140,320,000 compared with $148,386,000 during the preceding week and $232,136,000 in the corresponding week in 1927.

The year to April 30 witnessed heavy financing particularly in the utility field, which furnished $1,211,710,000 of the $3,226,467,000 for the period. Industrials contributed $1,512,246,000.

Texas Gas Bonds Offered.

An issue of $5,400,000 Texas Cities Gas Co., first mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, series 1928, dated May 1, 1928 and due May 1, 1948, will be offered tomorrow by the Century Trust Co. and P. W. Chapman & Co., Inc.

The Texas Cities Gas Co. will own and operate the gas manufacturing and gas distributing systems in the cities of El Paso, Galveston, Waco, Paris and Brenham, Tex., serving a population estimated in excess of 255,000. The properties have been in continuous and successful operation for various periods up to 72 years.

The proceeds from the sale of these securities will be used to reimburse the company for expenditures in connection with the acquisition of properties and for other corporate purposes. Gross earnings of the properties for the year ended February 29, 1928 amounted to $1,837,507, while operating expenses, maintainance and taxes, not including Federal income taxes totaled $1,292,217.50.

150 Dinner Reservations Taken.

With more than 150 reservations Washington bankers will gather tomorrow night at the Columbia Country Club for the annual preconvention dinner of the District Bankers Association, while many of them will take part in golf matches which are booked to take place during the late afternoon.

Laurence A. Slaughter, vice president Commercial National Bank, and C. H. Pope, vice president Munse Trust Co., the committee in charge of the get-together-dinner, have announced that the custom prevailing in the past which did away with speeches will be enforced tomorrow night. This being so, when W. W. Spaid, president of the association, and E. J. McQuade, general chairman of the convention committee, complete their reports, the evening will be given over to entertainment and the enjoyment of social contacts for which bankers have little opportunity.

New York Bank Shares Up.

Average price of 122 stocks, representing 13 different industries, increased 11.25 points in April, largely due to an increase of 127.8 points in the stock of 10 New York bank and trust companies, according to the index of security prices compiled by the New York Trust Co. The month's advance in the stock of 10 New York bank and trust companies brought the total increase in this average price for the year so far to 167.9 points.

The stock of ten utility companies increased 9.5 points during April; of nine oil companies 6.71 points; and of 25 railroads 4.87 points. Stock of five tobacco companies declined 4.17 points.

In the list of 66 bonds representing six different classifications, there was a slight decline during April of .27 points. Bonds of ten public utilities increased .34 points and of ten industrials .15 points.

Bankers' Bulletin Appears.

The Monthly Bulletin of the District Bankers Association, which is edited by Frederick P. H. Siddons, secretary of the American Security & Trust Co., in his capacity of vice chairman of the publicity committee of the association, was placed in the hands of Washington bankers yesterday.

While the Bulletin contains numerous reports on activities of committees, calls attention to meetings through the month and prints other interesting subject matter, it might well be named the "Convention Number," for throughout its pages is stressed the fact that the annual convention will be held June 7 to 10, at Montauk, Long Island.

Pleased With Loan Plan.

Arthur J. Morris, founder of the Morris Plan banking system, and president of the Morris Plan Co. of New York, expressing his views regarding the recent announcement of the opening of the personal loan department by the National City Bank, expressed himself as delighted that the principles behind the Morris Plan System which have been confirmed and demonstrated as a result of Morris Plan transactions aggregating more than $1,000,000,000 among more than 5,000,000 people, has at last found recognition and open commendation by the largest financial institution in America.

"If other banks follow the lead of the National City Bank," said Mr. Morris, "it will simply mean that industrial banking will be more generally understood and its facilities more generally offered to 90 per cent of the people, which, until the advent of the Morris Plan banks, had no opportunities and access to credit, and only knew the loan shark. No system which has been the pioneer in this field and which has the record of accomplishment which the Morris Plan System has need have any fear of high class competition such as the National and State banks of this country might offer. On the contrary, the more general the facilities the larger will be the response and their constructive and productive use by the great mass of the people."

George E. Parks, an examiner in division 4, has been transferred to division 12.

Charles Baraff, of division 52, returned to his duties in the Patent Office the first of the week, having been absent several days on account of sickness.

Lewis Bembo, of division 35, has been promoted from an assistant to an associate examiner and assigned to the same division.

Lewis Sheldon, of division 52, and Mrs. Sheldon are entertaining the latter's mother, of Boston, Mass., who is spending several days in Washington

B. J. Chromy has been transferred from division 40 to division 8, where he has been assigned as a junior examiner.

George Stoner, chief of the attorneys and record room, enjoyed several days' vacation last week, which he passed in Arlington, Va.

Raymond C. Casler, assistant chief of the publications division, left the office the first of the week for a short visit with friends and relatives in Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

Mrs. Ursula McElroy, of the publications division, left the first of the week for Brooklyn, N. Y., where she will spend several weeks with friends.

Rush G. Barrick, a clerk of the publications division, who was injured in a fall at his home recently, is still confined to his home.

M'INTYRE WILL ADDRESS SALVATION ARMY DINNER

Drive for $500,000 Building Will Begin Tomorrow Evening.

COL. HARPER TO PRESIDE

Commissioner William A. McIntyre, commander of the Southern territory for the Salvation Army, will be one of the speakers at the dinner marking the opening of the Salvation Army's campaign for $350,000, in the ballroom of the National Press Club Building tomorrow night at 6 o'clock. Col. Robert N. Harper, chairman of the campaign committee, will preside.

Team captains and teams will select from a list the names of persons they wish to solicit funds, to avoid any duplications in soliciting. Maj Gen. Anton Stephan, chairman of team organization for the campaign; Merritt O. Chance and Edward D. Shaw, section leaders, and all division leaders are among those to be present at the dinner. All other persons interested in the campaign are to attend, including the various teams.

The campaign is to aid in a $500,000 building project at Sixth and E streets, in order to give the Salvation Army a modern service center to house its activities. The building is to take the place of the Salvation Army's quarters on lower Pennsylvania avenue which are overcrowded. The avenue property rests on a site to be taken over by the Federal Government for a development project.

It is pointed out by Salvation Army officials that the public is asked to contribute only one-third of the money spent by the organization for its various forms of relief work. Various other funds are raised through the Salvation Army's salvage operations and its men's hotel is self-supporting.

The new building will enable the Salvation Army to expand its work of rendering aid to the "down and outers" and to avoid a condition existing last winter when it frequently had to turn away as many as 50 men a day desiring free sleeping quarters, due to lack of space in its present quarters. This is without counting, it is pointed out, the hundreds of others who had some money with them, but not enough to obtain a room in a regular hotel.

BROTHERS TO LASSO JAGUARS IN MEXICO

Two Texans Who Have Won Record by Roping Pumas Will Join Expedition.

Raymondsville, Tex., May 12 (A.P.).—Two brothers who capture pumas or mountain lions with lassos will accompany a scientific expedition to Mexico in quest of jaguars, the ferocious cousins of pumas.

They are Robert Snow, deputy State game commissioner of Texas, and Luther D. Snow, sheriff of Willacy county. A. C. Rogers, curator of the Denver Museum, will head the expedition. A representative of the Smithsonian Institution also will go. The expedition will study various fauna of Mexico.

The Snow brothers attack together when they want to catch a mountain lion, for they know that the beast still can fight if it is held by only one rope. They invariably carry pistols for emergency use.

Luther Snow has killed 34 pumas, but he says he will never kill another except in self-defense, for he finds capturing them alive a thrill even grater than fishing.

Irish Official Loses $5,000, Rue to Speech

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Dublin, May 12.—Patrick Hogan, minister of agriculture, today was relieved of 500 pounds ($2,500), by a Dublin high court jury for defaming Joseph Muldoon, a lawyer in County Mayo, in a speech during the election campaign in May, 1927.

Mr. Hogan was speaking at Ballaghaderren when his meeting was interrupted by a party of Fianna Fail supporters, headed by Mr. Muldoon. He charged Mr. Muldoon with stealing money belonging to a client and added that he was a proper leader for bank robbers and looters. Mr. Hogan admitted he had made the statements and attempted to prove them true. Mr Muldoon alleged he had suffered professionally in consequence of Mr. Hogan's speech and failed to be elected to the Dail when he was a candidate.

The verdict carries costs, so Mr. Hogan's bill probably will reach $5,000.

MUSOLIT CLUB HEARS LECTURE BY GRANT 3D

Discusses "City Beautiful," Showing Capital Slides by Aid of Stereoptican.

Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, gave an illustrated lecture, "The City Beautiful," Friday night at the Musolit Club, 1327 R street northwest, showing development of the Capital. The original L'Enfant plan, together with inconsistencies which have crept into its development throughout the years, were set forth with aid of the stereoptican.

Special tribute for engineering work in grading downtown construction was given Alexander Shepherd as governor of the District of Columbia under its territorial organization. Pictures of reconstruction work at the White House, especially the new steel roof construction as compared with the old, proved interesting.

The building plan of the Mall triangle was set forth in detail, as was the general plan for preservation of sites of Civil War forts and locations where Indians manufactured pottery and stone materials. Appreciation of the club for the presentation was expressed by M Grant Lucas, sr. Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, presided.

REPUBLICANS OUT TO WIN.

If Herbert Hoover had carried the Indiana primary the Pennsylvania delegation would have seen the handwriting on the wall and would have taken instructions to vote for him at Kansas City. The Pennsylvania delegates and alternates who held a caucus yesterday decided to go to Kansas City without instructions. Secretary Mellon, while praising Mr. Hoover, advised against commitment to him or any other candidate.

This is the most significant development in Republican national politics. It emphasizes the importance of Senator Watson's victory over Mr. Hoover in Indiana, and possibly it foreshadows the action of the national convention.

The one thing upon which Republicans are united is the desire to win the Presidency. Upon that hangs the political fate of thousands of Republican leaders in all the States. They will continue to fight for the nomination of this or that candidate, but in the end they will do their utmost to concentrate upon a nominee who in their opinion can beat Gov. Smith. If any candidate suffers under a handicap that would increase the doubt as to his ability to beat Smith, he will be set aside. The most ardent followers of any candidate will quit him and support another, if it becomes evident that their first choice can not command the united support of Republicans in the East and West.

Although Mr. Hoover received a flattering vote in Indiana, everything considered, an analysis of the vote shows unmistakably that the disaffection of the farm element is not a myth. It is a vital force throughout the Mississippi Valley, threatening to defeat the Republican party if it nominates a candidate who is objectionable to the farmers. Republicans everywhere are becoming alive to this danger, and they will not persist in supporting any leader who has been marked for slaughter by the farmers.

Gov. Smith's amazing popularity in the Mississippi Valley creates a situation that instantly commands the attention of Republicans in Pennsylvania, New York and all other States. This is not necessarily a Republican year, when a Democrat appears who is extraordinarily strong in both East and West. There are perhaps 4,000,000 new presidential voters this year, young men and women who are not bound by tradition to any party. There is popular unrest and a desire for change. The Republican party is supposed to have nearly 50 per cent greater strength than the Democratic party, but it wields this strength only when it is united and enthusiastic. Give it a candidate who can not unite the party, and place against him Gov. Al Smith, who unites Democrats and arouses the enthusiasm of independents who are looking for a change, and the Republican party may easily lose.

This is the last thing that Republicans desire; the last thing that they will permit to happen if they can prevent it by cooperation at Kansas City. The grand old party will have lost its cunning, indeed, if it leaves Kansas City with a nominee who is foredoomed to meet the angry opposition of Republican States in the Mississippi Valley.

OFFICIAL MURDER.

Following the shooting of J. D. Hanson, of Niagara Falls, by members of a rum patrol, it is announced that the Prohibition Bureau does not countenance the unauthorized use of firearms by its agents. They are furnished with revolvers, according to Prohibition Commissioner Doran, for self-defense, or to prevent commission of a felony. "We are not going to put up with firing on vehicles on highways whether they stop when commanded or not," said Dr. Doran. "We will certainly not shield officers charged with this offense, and we will aid States at any time within reasonable limits."

If the prohibition commissioner means what he says this is a decided reversal in policy on the part of those charged with prohibition enforcement. In the past those charged with the administration of the dry law appear to have "put up with" anything in the name of the eighteenth amendment. Vehicles on the highways have been fired on, for no other reason than that the occupants refused to halt when told to do so by unidentified officers of the law. Officers who have shot down men in the name of prohibition have been shielded. The prohibition enforcement officials have not aided the States even within reasonable limits. It has always been insisted that agents in such cases must be tried in the Federal courts, and United States attorneys have acted as defenders instead of prosecutors.

The time has come for the Prohibition Bureau to live up to some of its promised reforms in the name of law. This is not the first instance in which more reasonable methods have been put into effect orally. The words spoken in Washington appear never to reach the men to whom they are directed. New outrages upon innocent citizens are all too frequent. Reforms in high quarters are useless unless they extend down into the ranks.

THE CHINO-JAPANESE COLLISION.

The Nationalist "government" of China has addressed an appeal to the League of Nations asking it to call upon Japan to withdraw the Japanese troops immediately from Shantung. The Nationalists declare that Japan was the aggressor in the fighting at Tsinan and is now occupying Chinese territory with additional troops. "The territorial and political independence of China have been ruthlessly violated," says the appeal, "and the peace of nations threatened by this aggression on the part of Japan."

Before outside nations become excited over this charge of Japanese aggression it would be well to inquire how and when the Nationalist faction acquired the right to call itself the government of China. Less than a week ago the United States received indemnity from the Nationalists for outrages against Americans at Nanking. Similar outrages were committed against Japanese citizens at Tsinan, and wholesale massacre was threatened as the Nationalist hordes swarmed into the city and began looting and burning.

The Chinese who are engaged in civil war are doing more to destroy their country than Japan could do, even if Japan were bent upon aggression. The anarchy and famine in China are the result of the crimes of the Chinese war lords who sacrifice their country to their own greed. When the crazed multitude composing the northern and southern armies in China come into collision the lives and property of foreigners are in deadly danger. Japan foresaw this danger at Tsinan and stationed a force there, fortunately strong enough to beat off the Chinese. Then, when this force was threatened by the Nationalist army, it was necessary to dispatch reinforcements and clean out the Tsinan area entirely. The Japanese government has acted with commendable promptitude in defending its people. It has a right to expect all nations to give it credit for honorable intentions in dealing with a most embarrassing emergency.

As between the statements of Chinese representing factions that have already proved to be destroyers of foreign lives, and the statements of the Japanese government, which has not interfered in China except to protect Japanese citizens, Americans will believe the Japanese.

The life of a saintly American woman has just been taken by Chinese Nationalists near Tsinan. No one can charge any such crime against Japanese soldiers.

If Japan will make known that it is acting solely in defense of its people, and will not seize upon the present disorder as an opportunity for aggression against Chinese territorial integrity, the world will retain its confidence in Japan. There is not the slightest indication that Japan is about to engage in a war of aggression in China.

HARDY NO NOVELIST!

It would seem that at all stages of his lengthening career George Moore was predestined to stir up strife and controversy. Years ago with his audacious novels, such as "Esther Waters," more recently with "The Lake" and "Hail and Farewell," and most recently of all with the play in which he sought to dethrone Shakespeare by depriving him of the authorship of the plays, he set tongues wagging and succeeded in riveting attention on himself. He is as good a showman as his fellow countryman, that other George, to wit, George Bernard Shaw.

From his sickbed Moore, now 76, has been issuing fulminations against modern woman and the modern writer. What is one to think of the cocksureness of criticism that emboldens a man to speak contemptuously of Thomas Hardy and to describe him as "a village schoolmaster, not a novelist?" When one thinks of the supreme artistry of "Tess" and of "The Mayor of Casterbridge," one can only liken Moore's effrontery to that of Jeffrey, who began his review of Wordsworth's "Excursion" with the famous sentence: "This will never do." Again, when one thinks of the grand style of Meredith and of his deep psychology, one is shocked to hear Moore damn him with faint praise by saying: "The fellow could at least write English."

The fact, of course, is that Moore is an egregious egoist and that, in his opinion, no author, of any age, can approach his own performances. He is fascinated by himself and, by good showmanship, has managed to cause others to be similarly fascinated. His self-revelations are, indeed, interesting in much the same way that Montaigne's are interesting, perhaps even more so, because they possess that dash of malice toward others in which the Frenchman is so conspicuously lacking. But Moore is far from being the only pebble on the literary beach, although it may be an article of faith with him to believe that he is.

SHIPPING COMPETITION.

In chronicling the sale of the last seven ships of the Australian Commonwealth Line and the relief given by that sale from the burden of continual losses suffered since the inauguration of the line in 1916, the shipping correspondent of the London Times makes the comment that, in incurring heavy losses through its shipping venture, Australia has not been exceptional, for loss on government operation of ships has been the experience everywhere. In proof of his statement, he instances not only what happened to Australia but also what might have happened to Great Britain and what did actually happen to Canada. While he was about it he might also have dilated at length on the deficit caused the United States Government by the operation of its mercantile marine, but he omits that item, or at least particulars regarding it.

The correspondent, however, goes on to complain of the assiduity with which the United States Shipping Board seeks and collects commercial information, with a view to securing for its own vessels a larger share in cargoes. Much of the complaint is based on the alleged use of the custom houses for the purpose. Having quoted some evidence given by "Shipping Board Commissioner" Teller, the arraignment goes on thus:

> It thus appears that not only is the customs house used for the collection of duties, but also for the collection of information, in order that attempts may be made to divert trade to the vessels of the Shipping Board, which are maintained in service at the cost of enormous losses. Such information could clearly be used for other purposes, if the Government decided to encroach on other forms of private enterprise. Methods of this kind are not calculated to instil confidence in business men, and general relief will be felt that there will be no temptation in Australia to follow them.

One can afford to despise the innuendoes contained in the foregoing. In this country there would be "general relief" to learn that the Shipping Board was preparing to do some paying business.

WALTER HAGEN.

Golf has witnessed few more remarkable achievements than the victory of Walter Hagen in the British open. The American pro's prowess makes him a dangerous competitor at any time, but his warmest admirers did not think that this was his year to repeat his triumphs in the English classic. Hagen, like many other prominent figures in the world of sports, had succumbed during the winter to the lure of the moving pictures. He passed the winter in Hollywood and gave little time to golf. Just how far off he was in his game was demonstrated when he landed in England and was beaten 18 up and 17 by Archie Compston. That he could come back in a little over a week and head a field made up of the world's greatest golfers shows how his nerve ministered to his skill.

In years of championship golf Hagen is getting along. It was in 1914, still nothing more than a boy, that he won his first major title. That year he came in first in the American national open. Since that time he has been the winner of more big tournaments than any other player, professional or amateur. He had become the world's greatest match player, in the opinion of many persons. His poorest record is in the competition where he first established himself. He has only two American opens to his credit. Three times he has won the British title, and on five occasions he has led the field for the professional golfer's crown.

It may be said without fear of contradiction that the two best golfers in the world today are Americans. Hagen has only one rival, and that is Bobby Jones. The records of these men are astounding. They have developed their play to a machine-like precision that defies imitation. As long as they remain in form the United States need not fear the challenge of any other nation, either in professional or amateur play.

Let the Senate Also Explain.

NEW JERSEY'S CAMPAIGN.

No matter where a New Jersey Republican stands on the question of prohibition, he will have an opportunity in Tuesday's primary to register a vote in behalf of a sympathetic senatorial candidate. Five candidates are in the race, ranging from bone-dry to dripping wet, and the fight they are making before the electorate overshadows all others in interest. The Democrats are solidly behind Senator Edward I. Edwards for reelection, and the presidential vote resolves itself into a pro-forma indorsement of Hoover and Smith.

Public opinion in New Jersey has considered prohibition an issue above party lines ever since the adoption of the eighteenth amendment. Senator Edwards (Democrat) and Senator Edge (Republican) are politically wet. Wet governors have been elected for the last three terms. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that the majority of the Republican senatorial candidates come from the wet camp. The only pronounced dry in the race is a woman, Mrs. Lillian F. Feickert. Former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who was defeated six years ago, when he ran as a dry, has announced that his position will be guided by a referendum on the liquor question. Former Gov. Edward C. Stokes and Hamilton F. Kean stand for modification of the Volstead act. Former Representative Edward W. Gray favors the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Obviously in such a many-sided campaign it is hard to determine the trend of public support. Expert observers believe that victory lies between former Senator Frelinghuysen, former Gov. Stokes and Mr. Kean. The latter two, it is said, may divide the organization support and give the nomination to the former senator. Mrs. Feickert has been attacked from her own camp. A woman traveling companion has made public the charge that Mrs. Feickert drank while on a European trip. The W. C. T. U. has deemed this sufficient to disown the dry candidate. Mr. Gray, it is said, has little chance of getting anything but the protest vote.

It is an involved situation, certainly, that confronts the New Jersey Republicans. They hope, however, to find through the primary a candidate sufficiently strong to reclaim for their party the Senate seat which is now in possession of the opposition.

POLITICS IN RATE MAKING.

The effort to square economics with politics in the lake cargo case goes on unabated. Following a series of complicated moves involving the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Senate and the Federal courts, the balance between the Southern and Northern coal fields is right where it was when the Interstate Commerce Commission gave the roads serving the central competitive coal field a differential over those in the Southeastern section. The Northern roads have just announced a voluntary cut in their rates on coal to points beyond the Detroit River of 20 cents a ton. This meets a similar reduction made by the Southern roads in an effort to nullify the differential granted their competitors by the commission.

The question is now how long the game can be kept up. The Southern roads can not well order an additional reduction and still show a profit on their lake cargo business. Yet if they do not, some of their biggest customers will not have an equal opportunity to market coal in the Northwest. Similarly, the coal producers in the North insist that unless the present differential is maintained they will be deprived of their market in the same territory.

Meanwhile the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission has been seriously challenged. Heretofore, the commission has had the right to fix both minimum and maximum rates. In the present instance the Southern roads appealed to the courts when the commission refused to sanction a voluntary rate reduction. A stay has been granted to the roads, preventing the commission order prohibiting the reduction from going into force, and until the case can be heard by the Supreme Court there the matter rests.

The result then of the play of politics in connection with the lake cargo coal case, which began over the appointment of Cyrus Woods to the Interstate Commerce Commission, is that a railroad war has been added to the existing coal war and the usefulness of the commission has been curtailed, both by the political standards by which the Senate now judges its members and by its threatened loss of power. A better job of wrecking has seldom been initiated, and all because the legislative branch of the Government usurped functions beyond its province.

EMERGENCY OFFICERS' RELIEF.

The House has passed the emergency officers' retirement bill. The measure already has received approval of the Senate and it now goes to the President. There seems to be some doubt that it will be signed. The fact that the measure calls for an annual expenditure of $2,294,000 in additional compensation may affect the economy program. Yet the measure corrects a grave injustice, and as such is entitled to extraordinary consideration.

Reserve officers of the World War, disabled in line of duty, were discharged in the care of the Veterans' Bureau. They are entitled to disability compensation. Regular Army officers, however, disabled in line of duty, were retired upon the pay called for by their rank. In all cases they receive more liberal allowances than disabled reserve officers.

Reserve officers of the World War were as a general thing older than enlisted men. In most cases they abandoned promising professional or profitable business careers to join the colors. Many of them had families to support. Most of them became soldiers at considerable financial sacrifice. Those disabled still have families to support. Almost 3,400 officers would be benefited by this legislation. They constitute a group that sacrificed much during the war and to whom the Government now has an opportunity to make partial restitution.

A Glasgow inventor has put a machine on the market that destroys the organisms in cream so that it will not sour for a week or more. But who ever heard of Scotch milk voluntarily yielding up its cream?

Parachutes are improving all the time, and eventually those marooned on the ninth floor needn't wait for the elevator.

Gov. Al Smith is so popular that he may be nominated in spite of having been indorsed by Senator Wheeler.

The really shrewd presidential candidate hereafter will employ an expert in explosives to handle his slush fund.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Red River Canal, Spillways on Each Side of New Orleans and Two Parallel Channels for the Mississippi Seen as Real Need for Control of Floods—Constant Dredging Must Be Continued, It Is Stated by Correspondent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped that when a plan is finally adopted for the control of the flood waters in the lower Mississippi Valley it will prove to be a permanent success, and not a mere makeshift as has been the case heretofore.

The Eads jetties in the south pass of the delta constructed 1875 to 1879, at great expense, were heralded at the time as being a wonderful accomplishment, but in periods of high water have always proved to be an obstacle, and, in fact, retarded the free flowing of the current.

The levee system of the past has proven of temporary benefit, but has produced a situation most difficult to overcome, due to the fact that the sediment carried from up stream constantly settles in the river bed, thereby necessitating the continued raising of the levees until the bottom of the stream is higher than the land on either side.

It has been estimated that nearly two billion tons of silt and mud are carried down from the higher altitudes into the valley annually. What disposition will be made of this in the future in order to avoid past experience?

It must be remembered that St. Paul, Minn., the head of navigation, is only 900 feet above the level of the Gulf of Mexico, which allows a fall of only about five inches per mile on the average, nearly all of that decline being above St. Louis, where the main stream is joined by the Missouri, generally referred to as the "Big Muddy."

The lower reaches of the Mississippi below that point of contact are nearly level and were it not for the pressure of the water from up stream, would remain nearly stagnant.

It is this condition that accounts for the very slow currents and the length of time required for the water to reach its destination thereby causing the frequent overflow.

The nearly level character of the southern part of this territory always has been, and will continue to be, a problem to be encountered at all time, the solution of which must be had for future protection.

It will be well for those who have the project in hand to remember that more than 40 per cent of the territory in the United States drains into the Mississippi Valley and more than one-half of the States of the Union contribute their quota, not to mention the volume added through the Chicago drainage canal from the Great Lakes. It would require but a slight lowering of that canal bed to divert the flow from Lakes Superior, Huron and Michigan to the Mississippi Valley, instead of their natural outlet to the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The topography of the country lying between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains together with the nature of the soil should be taken into consideration, for a long distance above the Gulf of Mexico the soil is alluvial and therefore easily eroded. There is a vast depression of low lying land through the center of the North American continent extending from Hudson Bay in Canada to the Gulf of Mexico a large part of which was formerly a lake known to naturalists as Lake Agassiz.

From Rock Island, Ill., to St. Paul, Minn., the Government has already expended large sums for the construction of wing dams to improve navigation; also has done much riprapping to prevent erosion and snagging to clear the channel, but it was money well spent.

Suppose a great tidal wave like the one which overwhelmed Galveston, Tex., in 1900, drowning over 7,000 people, and causing $30,000,000 damage, had struck a little further east. It would have entered the six mouths of the river at the delta, demolishing most of the lower levees, and inundated the whole region.

Several schemes for future prevention of overflow have been suggested. Reforesting is one. Do not the advocates of this method know that the most of the territory embraced was prairie and never was forested, and, further, that it would be an impractical and futile undertaking?

The building of dams on the upper branches in order to restrain flood waters is another chimerical fallacy entailing an unwarranted expense, a long time to accomplish and of little practical benefit if built.

The policy of continually raising the levees while the accumulation of sediment at the river bottom proceeds must ultimately produce a condition whereby the river will become an elevated aqueduct difficult to bridge and a hazardous experiment to tunnel. Again, if the main channel becomes higher other rivers entering would have to be elevated to a similar level in order to prevent a backflow.

The final question is what will accomplish the desired outcome permanently? It would seem to be a foregone conclusion that adequate means to carry a great volume of water to its final destination through several outlets.

First dig a canal from the Red River in Avoyelles Parish to connect with the Atchafalaya to divert the flow of the Red River into the new course and at the same time take up the back water from the Mississippi.

Construct a spillway of ample capacity north of New Orleans leading into Lake Pontchartrain, and another south of that city to Lake Borgne. There should be two separate parallel channels to the main stream, one of them to carry the larger volume of water when the water is low, while dredging proceeds on the other.

It will always be necessary to remove the silt and mud from the bottom and therewith raise the banks for some distance back in order to erect a permanent barrier to insure future protection. Secretary Hoover is probably better informed on existing conditions and better qualified to judge of future requirements on account of his engineering ability than any other person in the country.

Respectfully,
WILLIAM C. SEVERNS, F. G. I.
Washington, D. C.

Political Prediction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Farm Journal, a leading monthly farm paper published in the United States shows that in a straw vote of over 60,000, Coolidge polled 13,139, Lowden 9,164; Hoover, 7,045; Smith, 6,997 and Dawes, although not a candidate, polled 1,816.

Undoubtedly the country wants Coolidge, but it is very evident that if if can not have Coolidge, it will not have Hoover, as witness the smashing victory of Senator Watson in Indiana. Had Willis lived, he would have beaten Hoover in Ohio, more decisively even than Watson did in Indiana.

Finally, the people want a man who stands in his own shoes. Either Lowden or Dawes will be nominated.

Story That John Wilkes Booth Was Not Killed But Escaped and Is Still Living In Texas, Disguised, Revived Through Tale of Actor, to Which Profession Assassin of Lincoln Belonged.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a story that has persisted throughout the years that John Wilkes Booth was never captured nor killed. It matters not at all now, but if he had been killed quite often before he snuffed out the life of one of the best men on earth and the best friend to the South that was then on the Northern side of the Civil War, it would have been a Godsend to the South.

Some years ago I was somewhat intimately associated with a man here in Washington whom I will call Smith. Smith said to me one day: "Do you know that Boston Corbett and his men never killed Booth, but did kill a young man who was in that barn at the time, a young man who knew nothing of the assassination of President Lincoln, a young man who was trapped there and fought to his death?"

"No, I did not know that. How do you know it?"

"Well, prior to coming to Washington and settling down I was a traveling theatrical man, an actor of the stage with a theatrical company. That was twenty years ago. (About 40 years ago from 1928). Booth escaped from the barn, fearing pursuit and capture or death, leaving David Herod, the Washington boy who had been fascinated by Booth and who had held Booth's horses at the rear of Ford's Theater the night of the shooting of Lincoln. About ten miles from the barn Booth discovered that he had left at the barn some papers that he wanted. He met the young man who was killed as John Wilkes Booth by Boston Corbett's party at the barn. Booth had directed this young man to the barn and paid him liberally to go there and get the papers and bring them to him farther down the country. The sequel is history.

"The reason I know it is because there is professional courtesy and secrecy between people of the same profession, remarkably so of the theatrical profession. I have seen and talked with men and women on the road who had seen and talked with John Wilkes Booth. He is in a far southwestern Texas county, living out the age-old tragedy of a hunted murderer. He has been a local music teacher and painter there for many years. He got into Mexico after escaping the dragnet set for him in this country, but came back across the line and settled hundreds of miles from a railroad. Edwin Booth saw his brother, John Wilkes Booth, nearly every time he went to Houston or San Antonio, Tex."

I said to this man Smith: "That is a remarkable story from every angle and you must be more wedded to your theatrical profession than you are a patriot to your country. Now, you are a Northern man and I am a Southern man, and if John Wilkes Booth is not dead and comes within my power that will be the end of him. He killed the best friend we had and ushered in those horrible Andrew Johnson years of murder and burning."

I was never thoroughly convinced of the truth of Smith's story, but what appeared to be a corroboration appeared about six years ago in the Oklahoma City News. (I think the News was the name of the paper.) A long article was printed purporting to be a posthumous letter to the public written by John Wilkes Booth, the history of his escape, where and how he had lived in disguise so many years, and finally the end.

Mr. George Washington Kieffer, a collateral descendant of Gen. George Washington, would probably deny this story as true, but it certainly bears some of the earmarks of possibility. I have heard the Government always knew that Booth had escaped and for reasons of the public peace of mind had accepted the death of the other man as that of Booth. Possibly so, possibly not. JAMES W. GATES.

"MOTHER'S DAY."

By JEAN D. ROSS.

There's a friend that's always with us
Watching o'er us with a love,
Surely 'tis a love from Heaven,
Only such comes from above.
Always patient, kind and loving,
Always ready and on hand,
God Almighty blessed His Kingdom
Putting "Mothers" on this land.

"Mother" is the friend who's with us
As we stumble through this life,
And each tear drop that we cause her
Stabs her heart as does a knife.
But she bravely wipes the tear drop,
And to us her eyes seem bright,
As she helps us o'er rough places
And gives us a fond good-night.

Will we ever know the value
Of a "Mother's" love and trust.
Will we never place it higher
Than the dollar's cursed lust?
We are always chasin' rainbows
At the end, we want the gold.
Never thinking of our "Mother,"
And that she is growing old.

Now we wish to thank you, "Mother,"
For the things that you have done,
We will never once forget them
And we'll count them one by one.
That is why we write these verses,
And in them we wish to say,
"Now, dear Lord, please bless our 'Mother'
On this Sabbath "Mother's Day."

King Alfonso of Spain is now the only ruler who performs for the poor the feet-washing ceremony of Maundy Thursday.

BOY SCOUTS

In spite of a reluctant winter, spring has finally come and restless scouts and officials are rushing their plans for camp.

Many camping opportunities are before the Scouts this year. Some have troop camps, where they will spend week-ends until schools close, and many are taking advantage of the Woodrow Wilson Reservation, which is one of Washington's beauty spots, but the great majority are looking forward to a stay at Camp Roosevelt at Calvert Cliffs on the Chesapeake Bay.

A preliminary trip to Camp Roosevelt is scheduled for May 26, in the form of a special one-day excursion. This is the chance for new Scouts to look the place over for the first time and for old Scouts to renew their acquaintance with the haunts of past years.

Scouts Honor Unknown

At the suggestion of the executive board of the District of Columbia Council, the award of the silver buffalo, for distinguished service to boyhood, was tendered to the Unknown Soldier at Arlington by the National Boy Scout Council at their annual meeting in San Francisco, April 9 to 11. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was also cited as another of the seven to be honored with the award.

Arlington Flags.

In addition to the Camp Roosevelt trip on May 26, scouts of the District of Columbia Council have also accepted again the task of placing flags on the 36,000 graves in Arlington Cemetery. This service has become a tradition with Washington scouts.

Camping Contests.

With the idea of representing the District of Columbia Council in the camping jamboree at Frederick, Md., on June 22 and 23, more than 25 troops are hard at work on camping projects. Patrols will be selected from 2 troops in each division and will meet for an elimination contest on June 9 and 10.

Troop No. 123, of Falls Church, Va., Charles R. Fenwick, scoutmaster, won the Fifth division camp and field meet held along the Potomac near Cherrydale last Saturday. Troop No. 104, of the Clarendon M. E. Church, P. L. Ports, scoutmaster, was second, and Charles Gordon's Troop No. 147, of Leeway, Va., was judged third. Seven troops participated, and weather conditions were ideal, with just enough storm to put the scouts on their mettle.

The Third division overnight camping contest will be held at Wesley Hills near the American University on Saturday, May 19, starting at 9:30 a. m.

The selection of the entries for the First, Second and Fourth divisions in the city meet is still to be made, but each division has indicated that it will be represented by two patrols.

The week-end camp of the Fourth division scout officials at Branchville last week as the guests of Troop No. 40, turned out to be quite an exciting affair when the smouldering remains of a previous forest fire sprang into life fanned by a strong wind.

Showers finally came to the rescue and sent the blackened scouts back to camp and pleasant reposes in snug and dry "pup" tents. About 30 older scouts and officials, representing eight troops, spent the week-end at the camp.

The Fourth Division Forum will meet in a special session at the Wilson Normal School, Monday, May 14, to discuss plans for the Fourth Division overnight camp.

The Scoutmasters' Key.

To be eligible for the gold scoutmasters' key, now on exhibition at headquarters, a scoutmaster must complete the five-year training program of the National Boy Scout Council, which includes: An elementary training course, a standard course, an advanced course, three specialization courses, one of which must be first aid, and a total of two weeks in a council scout camp with his own troop.

Upon certification by the local court of honor that the above requirements have been met, and upon completion of five years of successful service, a scoutmaster is eligible for this significant award.

The Camp Roosevelt training course, from August 13 to 19, will include both the elementary and the standard requirements. It is hoped that scoutmasters, assistants, troop committeemen, and all other men interested in boys' work will plan for their vacations this week and take the training course.

Scout Plans Cuba Trip.

When Dr. Paul Bartsch, vice president of the District of Columbia Scout Council leaves for Cuba, about June 1, he will have with him Scout Ray Greenfield, formerly a member of Troop 33 and now connected with Troop 61, the natural history troop at the National Museum. Most of the trip will be made by automobile. This season will be the first in ten years that Dr. Bartsch has been absent from the Washington Boy Scout camps.

Rickenbacker Presents Plane.

A model airplane, made of sugar, was presented last Saturday to the Washington Boy Scouts by Eddie Rickenbacker, America's war ace, and is on exhibition at Boy Scout headquarters. The plane was received by the Flying Eagle Patrol of Troop 73.

Scouts Find Body.

Following an appeal by relatives and friends of Walter B. Campbell, Scouts of Troop 39, of Brightwood, William T. McCloskey, scoutmaster, started a search of the woods of Rock Creek Park last Sunday. The search ended with the finding of Campbell's body by Scout George Kremhau.

Bird Identification Tests.

A bird identification contest which has been developed for use in the summer camps is also available for troops where it is desired to develop interest and qualifications in bird study.

A new series of publications has recently been made available from the national Boy Scouts headquarters, some of which are "Investiture Ceremonies," "The Y. M. C. A. Patrol Idea," "The Good Turn Test" and "The Father and Son Idea on Scouting."

Flint Record Equaled.

At a most successful indoor rally, held by the First Division troops, at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church Friday night, Noble Hunter, of Troop 108, equaled the District of Columbia Council record for "fire by flint and steel" by producing flame in four seconds. Troop 20 won the meet, with Troops 108 and 10 in second and third places, respectively.

Crandall Cup Award.

The Fourth Division Crandall Cup award went to Troop 51, of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, Edw. H. Lyles scoutmaster. The award was made on the basis of the greatest advancement per capita. Congratulations are due Scoutmaster Lyles and his troop for their remarkable showing in spite of many handicaps.

The Second Division Scoutmasters Club met Tuesday evening at the City Club and made arrangements for participation in a camping contest. The question of a swimming meet and indoor field meet was also discussed.

West Point.

Lieut. Frank T. Balke, scoutmaster of Troop 3, will conduct a week-end trip this month to West Point. The charge for this trip will be $30, including fare, Pullman berth space, meals, ferry, sightseeing trip to New York. Party leaves Washington May 19; returns in time for school May 21.

Among the Troops.

At Troop 20 parents' night celebration last Saturday, Mrs. Murray, mother of Scout Arthur Murray, and a member of the Troop Mothers' Club, presented the troop with a beautiful silk American flag. The Class A efficiency contest cup was awarded by the scout executive. "Robinson Crusoe's Island" was the subject of a talk by Dr. Schmidt, of the Smithsonian Institute, before Troop 20 Saturday, May 5.

Troop 40 was host to Troops 41, 42 and 69 last Friday a week at a showing of camp slides and moving pictures at Wilson Normal School.

Troop 49 celebrated its eleventh anniversary last Friday a week at Park View School. The Parent-Teacher Association presented to Scoutmaster Cole a birthday cake with eleven candles and lauded the work of both Scoutmaster Cole and Assistant Scoutmaster Sergeant Henry Loveless.

Troop 57 bade farewell to Col. William B. Greeley last Friday night at a huge parents' night celebration. The colonel, who has been assistant scoutmaster, as well as scoutmaster of Troop 57, was presented with a scout handbook autographed by the scouts and officials of the troop and other officials of scouting.

Troop 70 held their birthday party Friday, April 27, when, with impressive ceremonies, the troop was reconstituted.

Troop 96 has a good Mothers Club. The mothers held a card party at the Nativity Auditorium Tuesday, May 8, to raise money for the Camp Roosevelt fund.

COMMUNITY CENTERS

Community Center Department, Franklin Administration Building, Main 6036.

Many of the centers are closing the season with entertainments and community meetings. The closing event at the Macfarland Center will be on Saturday night. YOUR home is a part of all that you have met. It is a reflection of your industrial and financial success. It mirrors your culture and taste—it incorporates every opportunity for the indulgence of your personal preferences in sports, games and the more serious pursuits of your profession and business. The importance of choosing this permanent life influence cannot be minimized. Rock Creek Park Estates, which is truly a part of Rock Creek Park, was created for those who wished their home to epitomize and reflect increasing charm as the years roll on. Advantageously located well within the District's limits in a great natural wooded environment, the opportunities afforded for original architectural interpretations are numberless. Great natural dignity is enforced by broad driveway approaches, while the atmosphere is serene, totally devoid of the traffic of city street and sidewalk. Golf courses and tennis courts are close by, while bridle paths abound. Flower gardens, both formal and informal, may be indulged in and children have an abundance of country air essential to growing bodies. Rock Creek Park Estates is permanently protected by wisely enforced restrictions that allow for the variance in personal tastes but preserve the natural background and neighborhood. Edson W. Briggs Co., owners and developers of Rock Creek Park Estates, act as financial and building counsel to the purchasers of property within this one hundred-acre park.

HARRIS-EWING

Mrs. David A. Reed and the portraits of four other Senators' wives

THOUGHTS of vacation pleasures evidently occupy the attention of the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the present time, judging from the interest which is taken by them in the pictures and descriptions of attractive estates which have been offered as possible summer White Houses.

No decision has been announced as yet, but it is understood that the holiday of President and Mrs. Coolidge will begin, in all probability, shortly after June 11. Therefore, some proud section of the country may soon expect to come to the preeminence that befell White Pine Camp and the Black Hills of the Dakotas as the summer White House in other years.

Wherever the summer White House is located, it is safe to venture the prediction that it will be in easy access of the Capital this year. For interest will focus on Washington from a political point of view, no matter who may be the candidate at Kansas City. The President undoubtedly will want to keep his finger on the pulse of things, political and official, at the Capital this summer. For these reasons it is understood that estates in Virginia, North Carolina and other near Southern States have been surveyed with more than ordinary interest by emissaries from the White House.

* * * *

THE political exigencies of the hour will lead to an early adjournment of Congress, an issue on which all parties and factions seem to be able to agree. Repairs of fences in home districts loom as of greater importance than national legislation. Capitol Hill, therefore, soon will be left to the mercies of drowsy watchmen and tourists, if all goes well with adjournment plans. Washington will be, by no means, a "deserted village," however, even with the President and Congress away. Official business has grown to such magnitude in recent years that Cabinet members and other builders of the Nation find it imperative to spend at least part of the summer at the National Capital. This provides for a constant, if more or less, informal stream of entertainment.

Then, too, the spring and summer are favorite periods for foreign notables to visit America, which generally means a visit to its Capital City as well. The exodus to Europe is matched to some extent by the migration of Europeans, anxious to see America during their own holidays. The international aspect of the summer colonies at Newport, Bar Harbor, North Shore resorts and mountain retreats has become more pronounced than ever in recent years. Princes and dukes and other lordships appear at these shrines of fashion with American celebrities of one type or another.

DESPITE their democratic tendencies, Americans enjoy meeting royalties. The drawing rooms at the Court of Saint James often have a decided American atmosphere, particularly this year, when many Americans will make their curtsies at the five drawing rooms of the present season. Washington had a special interest in the second drawing room on Wednesday, because of the presentation then of Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution. The other Americans who shared this honor with Mrs. Brosseau were Mrs. John B. Stetson, wife of the Minister to Poland; Miss Virginia Booth, of Detroit; Miss Katherine Bullock, of Denver; Miss Evelyn Clark, of New York City, and Miss Diana Rockwood, of Indianapolis. Among the English debutantes presented this season was Phyllis Astor, daughter of Lord and Lady Astor, Nancy, Lady Astor, is as well known in Washington, Baltimore and Richmond as she is in London. Her girlhood was passed in nearby Virginia, where she was a noted belle as one of the famous Langhorne sisters.

ON Tuesday, the Defense Highway to Annapolis will be thronged with pilgrims to the quaint Maryland city on the Severn, beloved of George Washington and other revolutionary chieftains, eager to join in the festivities of the Colonial Day celebration there. President and Mrs. Coolidge will be among those who will go to Annapolis for that purpose. They will be received by Mr. John Hays Hammond, chairman of the celebration, and his daughter, Miss Natalie Hammond, who is to fill the role of hostess to the presidential party on their visit to the famous old Hammond-Harwood House, now preserved as a colonial museum by St. John's College. Miss Hammond will be garbed in colonial costume and will impersonate Mrs. John Hammond, whose husband was a brother of Mathias Hammond, builder of the Hammond-Harwood House and great-uncle of John Hays Hammond.

Rear Admiral L. M. Nulton, superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, and a number of naval officers will be present at the colonial ball in the grand corridor of the State House in Annapolis, which will be the climax of the celebration. The grand march will be led by Gov. Albert Ritchie of Maryland and Mrs. Enoch B. Garey, wife of President Garey, of St. John's College. It is expected that a large representation of the Maryland contingent at the Capital will attend the celebration.

THE week-end cruises on the Mayflower doubtless form a most welcome break in the routine of executive life as the end of Congress draws near for both the President and Mrs. Coolidge. It has been said that more important decisions have been reached through the various administrations on this home-like yacht than even in the Executive Mansion. One can readily believe this, when they read the lists of interesting guests the Coolidges invite to share their outings with them.

Even if the ship did not belong to the President for his term of office as Chief Executive, the Mayflower would be conceded as the very trimmest vessel that frequents the Potomac. That is from the outside, and from the inside viewpoint, it is charming and comfortable, indeed. The large salon is furnished and, in fact, has all the aspects of a comfortable, handsome living room, with its furniture covered with lovely chintz, flaunting flamigoes and pheasants against a dark black ground and the numberless reading lamps, book shelves and tables of interesting books and magazines.

Wedged in between the suites reserved for the President and Mrs. Coolidge is a huge mahogany desk and a chair and a smaller desk, the President's floating office, where he can work on important papers. He can look through the port hole at the waters of the Potomac and the steep green clad banks of Virginia and Maryland. He gazes in this way on the very scenes which came before Washington's eye as a lad and a young man and as the leader of the Continental forces, as he cruised on the river which was historic even in that day. The dining salon on the Mayflower, like its other assembly places, is comfortable and attractive and has a real nautical atmosphere.

ON Thursday, Friday and Saturday all roads for society will lead to the old Bradley Farm at Kentsdale, near the Congressional Country Club, where the National Horse Show will take place. This will be the first show held in the new grounds. The opening day will be, therefore, fraught with the greatest interest.

From Maryland and Virginia will come horse lovers who follow their sport from Warrenton, Culpeper, Orange and the Green Spring Valley, and who rejoice at the opening of another center. The old Bradley mansion which has been converted into a charming early American clubhouse has been left in all its quaintness. Even the antique farm bell and stone well have not been touched. The bell will be used to start the races, hunts and to summon the riders to the hunt breakfasts, so popular during the season.

The apple orchard back of the clubhouse will form an ideal gathering place for spectators between events. From the grandstand, backed against a strip of pines and oak woods, across the tan bark ring and rolling fields, a vista of Washington can be seen through the trees. Below the elevation of the clubhouse and grandstand are the long, low rows of whitewashed stables where Washington's favorite mounts await their turn to show their prowess. Under these most auspicious circumstances the National Horse Show Association will start on their first venture in new headquarters. A very gay and brilliant event it promises to be, too.

Friday the Willard was the scene of one of the most charming and interesting events of the season, the Friday Evening Dancing Club entertaining at the last of a series of dances. To this dinner-dance many members brought guests. The large ballroom was most attractively decorated with spring flowers and ferns, and during the dinner a string orchestra played.

The committee of the club, including Mrs. William H. King, wife of Senator King; Mrs. Peyton Gordon, wife of Justice Gordon; Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Charles B. Drake, Mrs. Robert Henderson and Miss Mary Morgan received the guests. After the dinner two orchestras alternated in playing for dancing.

One of the most important and worthy benefits will be given for the House of Mercy on May 21 in the beautiful ground of the Washington Cathedral. For many seasons this garden party has proved a great success and this year many interesting attractions are being planned. Mrs. Sim Lee is chairman of the book table and will be assisted by Mrs. Edward Harriman, Mrs. George Dudley and Mrs. Medorem Crawford. Here one will find reading material with which to wile away lazy summer vacation days.

Mrs. Duncan Phillips will be in charge of scores of fascinating packages. She will have assisting her Miss Janet Ball and Miss Mary Elizabeth Achor. Among the other tables set under the great shade trees will be the candy table, where Mrs. William Sowers will preside, assisted by Mrs. Newlands Johnston, Mrs. Henry Miller and Mrs. Frederick Faust. Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, with Mrs. Case Brodrick Rafter and Mrs. Robert Clement Watson will dispense lemonade from their booth.

When George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Pierre L'Enfant and Andrew Ellicott planned the Federal City, the water front came in for a great deal of consideration. These plans went astray as we know, just as the Capitol Building faces away from the growing city. In recent years Washington has become cognizant of the joys of the banks of the Potomac. Many beautiful country estates have been established along its shores or old ones restored and more and more the water sports and regattas are becoming fashionable.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Wilbur, who follow the example of the President and Mrs. Coolidge, often use the yacht Sylph, designated for the Secretary's use, for week-end entertaining and for luncheons, teas and even dinners.

The British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, will entertain at a dinner on June 2 in celebration of the anniversary of the birthday of the King of England. Lady Isabella Howard sailed yesterday on the Conti Biancamano for Italy and will later visit in England. The Ambassador, who accompanied Lady Isabella Howard to New York, will return this evening.

The Spanish Ambassador and Mme. Padilla with Senorita Rosa Padilla will go to New York Wednesday to attend the banquet to be given by the chamber of commerce in celebration of the king's birthday on Thursday evening.

The Ambassador of France, M. Paul Claudel, returned Friday night from New York where he accompanied Mme. Claudel and their daughters, who sailed on the Paris yesterday for France where they will pass the summer.

The Minister of Panama, Senor Dr. Don Ricardo Alfaro, returned from Cleveland, Ohio, last evening where he attended the American Peace Society Conference. Mme. D. Perez, who has been the guest of Mme. Alfaro for several weeks, wil lgo to New York tomorrow and will sail for Cuba on Saturday.

The Minister of Greece, Mr. Charalambos Simopoulos, has returned from New York where he passed several days. Mme. Simopoulos will go to Newport, R. I., this evening and will return on Tuesday.

The Minister of Honduras, Senor Don Luis Bogran, has gone to New Orleans and will sail from there today for Honduras, where he will join Senora de Bogran.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik will go to New York this evening to remain several days.

The Minister of Sweden will return from New York today, where he went to see Mme. Bostrom and Miss Pauline Bostrom sail on the Gripsholm for Sweden yesterday.

The Minister of Roumania, Mr. George Cretziano, will return to Washington tomorrow from Cleveland, where he passed several days attending the American Peace Society celebration.

The Minister of Nicaragua, Senor Dr. Don Alejandro Cesar, has returned to Washington after passing several days in Cleveland.

The Minister of Canada and Mrs. Vincent Massey have as their guests at the legation Mr. and Mrs. George E. Vincent, of Connecticut.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Lithuanian Legation, Dr. Mikas Bagdonas, has returned from Cleveland, where he attended the American Peace Society celebration.

The Postmaster General and Mrs. Harry S. New have as their guests for the week-end Mr. and Mrs. John Mason Tilney, of Plainfield, N. J.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur were the guests in whose honor Capt. and Mrs. Frank Burrows Freyer entertained at dinner last evening, when the Ambassador of Peru, Dr. Hernan Valarde, was the ranking guest. There were twelve guests.

Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg Hosts

Senator and Mrs. A. H. Vandenberg entertained at dinner last evening at the Willard in honor of former Senator and Mrs. William Alden Smith, of Michigan. The guests were the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Senator and Mrs. James Couzens, Gov. and Mrs. Green of Michigan, Representative James McLaughlin, Representative and Mrs. Carl E. Mapes, Representative and Mrs. Louis C. Cramton, Representative and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, Representative and Mrs. Frank James, Representative and Mrs. Earl Michener, Representative and Mrs. John Clark Ketchum, Miss Helen Hudson, Mr. Bird Vincent, Mr. Grant Hudson and Mr. Perry Heath. The table decorations were most unusual, designed by Mrs. Vandenberg, a pathway from one end of the long table to the other giving the various milestones in the life of Mr. Smith which finally led up to a miniature capitol.

MRS. FRED BRITTEN,
wife of Representative Britten.

The Chief of Staff and Mrs. Charles P. Summerall were the ranking guests at a dinner given last evening at the Mayflower by Col. Stanley H. Ford, United States Army, when the other members of his party included Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Briant H. Wells, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Herbert E. Crosby, Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, Mrs. Frank Parker, Mrs. Archie Miller, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. H. O. Williams, Col. and Mrs. Henry M. Morrow, Col. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, Col. and Mrs. Christian A. Bach and Maj. and Mrs. Charles F. Thompson.

Representative and Mrs. Guinn Williams, of Texas, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Minnie Lee Williams, to Mr. Raymond Wire. The wedding will take place the evening of June 7.

Fashions of Capital Women

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

ECHOES from Paris tell us that the romantic school is making steady progress in that fashion center and that the sentimental is the prevailing wind in the mode, a term which will be understood by all good Mah Jong players.

Not only in apparel is the romantic uppermost, but it is reflected in present day literature and on the stage and the modistes and sartorial artistes have taken advantage of this to bring about a renewal of so-called "old-fashioned things" in order to typify this drift toward romance, which lingers more in frills and furbelows than in severity of clothes type and line.

Indeed, so pronounced is the tendency that everything Victorian promises to be the rage this summer, it is well to overhaul those cedar chests filled with the forgotten garments of the 80's and 90's of the past century if one wishes to be within the vogue this summer.

Of course, if one plans to look Victorian, a garden must be handy as an accessory, for the era of that good queen abounded in garden frocks, frocks of figured chiffon with ample flounces (georgette under another name) and dainty silks to set off the still daintier hues in my lady's garden at twilight.

If the return of the Victorian means as well a return of the simple it will be a fine thing. Lavishness in dressing is a clothes vice into which unfortunately all may fall and if the pocketbook is not ample it brings many attendant evils in its train.

Becoming Dress Is the Thing.

After all, the big thing is to dress becomingly. How that can be best accomplished is still a mystery, although femininity has solved the problem to an amazing degree. Perhaps the most fortunate of women are those who dress to please themselves; who know enough to suit their types to the fashions and the fashions to their types, or who have individuality enough to be pioneers in new fads and fancies.

This class will seldom copy fashion wrinkles; rather, it will be the copied, and that imitation which is the sincerest flattery will be their fate, a not unpleasant one to a woman's heart. For they can be satisfied with the knowledge that they are of the few and the elect.

Of course, the woman who has genuine style must have a keen sense of proportion, a real feeling for line, color and composition and a thorough knowledge of what is appropriate in costume. The knowledge may be either inborn or acquired. It may be something which naturally expresses itself in this manner, or something which she may have studied to attain. But she must have, at least, a natural love for clothes and understanding of the human figure, or she will study to little advantage.

The ability with which American women will fit the Victorian mode to present-day needs shows, in a world of all-changing fashion and furbelows, how little human nature varies, even if the human figure can be altered by skilled designers to accommodate itself to the prevailing mode.

Style for the Season.

The importance of the afternoon costume grows apace and the predominant notes are elegance and simplicity. The two-piece afternoon costume, composed of a dress and a long, straight coat, either of the same or contrasting material, still hold their places in the fancy of the well dressed woman.

The most noticeable feature of the more elaborate afternoon costume for late spring and early summer is the skirt, which consists of small petals embroidered in contrasting tones of a darker color. The petal skirt, by the way, is rapidly making inroads in the realm of the evening gown.

There is a straightness of line and grace of motion to these petal skirts which appeals to even the most conservative of women.

One of the innovations in elaborate costumes for the afternoon are tailor-made suits of lace. These have been enthusiastically seized upon by the woman who likes to welcome different styles, and they have the added value of being softly becoming, in spite of their rather severe lines. One suit of dark blue has a skirt cut on circular lines with the fullness in front and short jacket on classic tailored lines. With this is worn a blue crepe de chine blouse.

For both the afternoon and evening black lace ruffles on colored or white gowns seem to be a high note of fashion. Of course, this effect is better on white, following out the revival of the vogue for black and white. One gown of heavy white or crepe de chine suitable for a formal afternoon event or an informal summertime dinner is made with a round neckline and elongated shoulder with ruffles of black lace with a white line running through in graduated flounce effect.

UNDERWOOD

daughter of Judge and Mrs. Harry Covington.

Lace Gowns Popular.

Lace dinner gowns generally seem to have a place of their own in the sun of fashion at the present time. Some of these gowns are designed for wear at resorts and are as apt to have long tight or long flowing scarf-like sleeves as they are to be sleeveless, as many women prefer with a dinner gown for restaurant wear. Of course, in this regard the cape effect, which still stays with us, is very good.

Many of the evening gowns of lace have simple, rather tightly fitted bodices, showing a somewhat higher waistline than we have been used to seeing for the last few years. Sometimes this waistline is lower in the back than the front. Then there are the bloused effect gowns, with tightly swathed hips in girdles or clever folds of the dress, but cut in with the dress. Invariably this type of dress has a wide skirt.

The flare has increased rather than diminished in the skirts, and some of the leading modistes have even gone back to the fashion of 20 or 25 years ago of applied ruffles, stiffened with horsehair lining, or utilizing the smart new straw embroidery to give the proper "body" to make the flare stand out. Practically all the skirts are either tiered or have a number of circular flounces with uneven hemlines.

But lace does not occupy the only place in the realm of evening gowns, for foulards and flowered chiffon and the soft heavy satin and taffeta also are counted in.

Linens and cotton have stepped forth into the limelight of fashion and will brave the summer sun at the fashionable resort this summer, according to the latest news from headquarters.

Odd Jewelry Is Keynote.

Odd jewelry which goes exactly with the costume with which it is worn is one of the keynotes of the world of fashion for this summer. The woman who possesses handsome pearls will wear them for dressy occasions, but the smartly dressed woman is choosing beads or some of the artistic modern jewelry for wear with her tailored and street costumes.

With the vogue for navy blue the fortunate possessor of handsome lapis lazuli ornaments will be envied by all her sisters, for the lovely rich-hued blue gives just the proper emphasis to the blue of the costume. These ornaments are particularly effective when they are in the form of beads combined with old gold or pearls.

The possessor of amber ornaments is also to be envied, for these are very fashionable just now and combine so well with the beige costumes many women like to wear.

The coral fad seems to grow by leaps and bounds. It must be acknowledged that the chains and earrings and other pieces garnered from the family treasure chest or the exclusive little shop are most effective with the gray and black costume with which so many women like to wear them.

The wearing of these ornaments has probably been responsible for the return of the vogue for earrings with daytime costumes for even young girls, for somehow earrings seem to go so well with an odd amber chain or a necklace of lapis lazuli or coral, if they are handsome odd ones.

Navy Blue Worn.

Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, who has just returned from Europe, one day last week wore a navy blue costume composed of a blue dress and a coat of blue woolen material. Her hat was of blue felt, with a shaped, narrow brim. With this costume Mrs. Fahnestock wore a string of old gold and lapis lazuli beads and earrings of lapis lazuli hung from tiny pearl beads. She wore a fur scarf.

Mlle. Marie Claudel had on at a party before sailing for Europe a gown of old blue chiffon, embroidered in panel effect in tiny light blue beads. She had a large bow of chiffon on her left hip.

Mme. Claudel had on at one of the teas a gown of gray chiffon, also embroidered in panel effect in tiny beads. The bodice was surplice and knotted at the left hip. She wore a small, close-fitting gray hat.

Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the senator from Missouri, who came to Washington from her home in Missouri for the congressional breakfast for Mrs. Coolidge, wore one day a gown of black foulard, flowered in blue of dark and light shade. Mrs. Reed wore a black coat, a black hat and a fur scarf.

Mrs. George Barnett is wearing an afternoon gown of beige chiffon with flounces of beige lace. With this she wears a black hat and a fur scarf.

Mrs. Frederick Britten had on at a party a dress of black chiffon with graduated pleated tiers forming the skirt. The bodice was surplice and deep Vee neckline back and front and tied in a huge bow with long ends on one hip.

Mrs. Anne Archbold is wearing a dinner dress of henna georgette untrimmed, but made on becoming modish lines.

Mrs. George Thorpe had on at an evening entertainment an effective costume of satin embroidered in sequins and made on draped lines.

Mrs. William MacCracken, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, has a very becoming costume of figured chiffon in large design, made with diagonal flounces and a surplice bodice.

Miss Betty Chilton wore recently a dress of powder-blue chiffon, made in a girlish design and with a garland of roses on one shoulder.

Miss Margot Couzens looked charming at a daytime event in a dress of purple and white checked silk with a plain purple silk coat and hat to match.

Mrs. Alexander Gregg, who always is smartly dressed, wore at a luncheon a costume of black satin made on simple lines. With this she wore a small black hat.

Senora de Agacio, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, has a gown of sapphire-blue georgette, made with a pleated skirt. With this she wears a small blue straw hat.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover has a costume of dark-red silk, made in ensemble effect. With this she wears a small red hat.

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry wore at a luncheon at the Congressional Club a dress of beige chiffon, made with a flared tiered skirt and surplice bodice. With this she wore a brown straw hat and a brown fur.

Mrs. Richard Wilmer is wearing a green coat with beige collar and cuffs with a green silk dress and a small green hat.

HARRIS & EWING

MISS KATHERINE PHILLIPS,
daughter of former Representative and Mrs. Thomas W. Phillips, jr.

Mrs. Tuckerman in Velvet.

Mrs. Walter Tuckerman wore a rose velvet dress with garlands of roses down the back at one side at a recent dinner party.

Mrs. Frederick W. Hicks was an attractive figure recently in a spring-like costume of grey composed of a sport dress and small grey hat with footwear to match.

Miss Emma Roberts, of Boston, recently had on at a luncheon an effective Russian dress of dark blue silk trimmed with red, and a small red hat.

Mrs. Sidney Tallaferro has one of the new printed silk dresses with a great deal of red on it. With this she wears a small red hat.

Mrs. Dion Williams wore at a dinner a handsome rose beaded dress made with a tiered skirt and a V neckline back and front.

Countess Scherthose wore for one of the dinners of last week a handsome dress of silver cloth. At a luncheon she had on a dress of black and white printed silk, with this she wore a small black hat.

Mrs. Frederick Atherton is wearing a blue crepe de chine gown effectively piped in red. With this she wears a black hat.

Mrs. Everett Sanders, wife of the Secretary to the President looked very smart at one of the daytime events in a green silk and wool sport suit with a small green felt hat to match.

Mrs. Ira Bennett is caring a most becoming dress of black and white silk, made with a tiered skirt and surplice bodice. With this she wears a small black hat.

Mrs. Chindblom, wife of the Representative from Illinois, has a dress of periwinkle blue silk made with a two-tiered skirt. With this she wears a small leghorn hat trimmed with blue.

Mrs. Dawes Favors Gray.

Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, has a very becoming gray costume composed of a gray chiffon dress with tiered pleats on the skirt, and a surplice bodice. With this she wears a wide brimmed gray hat with a pink rose on it.

Mrs. Demorest Lloyd was seen at a dinner party in a becoming dress of black lace over cloth of gold made in draped effect.

Mrs. H. H. Rosseau, wife of Rear Admiral Rosseau, looked very handsome recently in a gown of white silk made on modish lines.

Mrs. Andrew Wheeler has a black georgette dress made with a cape back tiered skirt and long sleeves. With this she wears a small black satin hat.

Mrs. John C. Hull is wearing a becoming evening gown of black lace made with a tiered skirt and a tied to one side bodice.

Mrs J M Carlisle had on at one of the recent dinners a gown of canary color chiffon embroidered in beads.

Mrs George Mesta looked charming at a dinner in a gown of pale green satin heavily embroidered in pearls. Mrs. Mesta also is wearing a grey ensemble costume of satin and chiffon with a medium sized grey hat and a large grey fox fur.

Spring Tailored Suits Fuller

The tailored suits of the late spring season are taking on themselves new fullness as to the skirt and bloused coats. Many of the newest coats fit snugly about the hips and blouses quite fully at the back.

Of course, some of the tailored suits follow the man-tailored models to a great degree, but they are apt to have some kind of flare to the skirt or a deliberately inserted bloused effect in the black.

Some of the newest of the tailored suits are frankly bloused jackets worn with the skirts formed of hanging panels over the silk slip or petticoat of exactly the same shade. These panels are cut to fit quite snugly in the back, but some of them are pleated or have a flared effect to give fullness to the skirt in front, which seems to be one of the latest dictates of fashions.

Just when every woman has accepted the edict from the fashion centers that no trimming at all must appear on a suit, women are startled by the innovation of bold and striking embroidery designs on some of the latest models. In fact, the simple little suit has become a most elaborate affair.

Girl Rebels Obtain Right to Lipstick

Havana, May 12 (A.P.).—High school girls here were forbidden to use lipstick, eyebrow pencil or rouge. They rebelled, and won permission to employ cosmetics when garbed in the school's "dress uniform"—middle, blue skirt and black sailor hat.

—for the Bride:

A GOWN of DIGNIFIED SIMPLICITY
The Vogue of Femininity—now in the ascendancy—is our guide as we prepare for the style-adequate appareling of the bride. And we can suggest nothing more lovely—nor more finely the interpreter of the reigning mode—than lustrous white satin, embroidered with pearls.
—for the Bridesmaid —for the Graduate —for the "Prom"
Tailored tulle—superlatively youthful and infinitely chic—is our suggestion for the bridesmaid and for the "prom." For the graduate, authoritative fashion sponsors white chiffon and emphasizes the charm of the circular skirt and the new Pelerine collar that drapes to the waist.

appeals with its artistic diversity of designing, and its unmistakable exclusiveness, protected by rational restrictions.

Out of the grandeur of a primitive forest has grown a community unequaled in beauty, unparalleled in personnel, and incomparable in investment values.

The latest exemplification is the Old Homestead—a Colonial conception, modernized to luxuriously meet present-day tastes and living requirements.

It truly typifies the standard aspired to, and successfully achieved in, The Garden Spot of Washington.

THE POST Melody Way CLUB

TWELFTH LESSON

Copyright, 1927, by W. Otto Miessner

The poem, "I Am Music," gives you my best thought upon the finest of all the Arts. I hope it will help you to see more in Music than, possibly, you have thought of, heretofore.

Truly, Music is in everything. Its Rhythm, the life of Music, is also the life of all Nature. The motion of Music is also the motion of all the stars and planets. Its ebb and flow are also the ebb and flow of the sea.

Its Melody is also the song of birds, the sighing of the winds, the murmur of the brook, the roar of the water-fall, the mighty thunder crash!

Its Harmony is also the harmony of the heavens, the blue of the sky, the crimson and gold of the sunset, the glory of the rainbow. It is in the green of the fields, in the myriad shades and colors of the flowers, in the gleaming yellow desert, in the purple haze of mountains.

Its Form is also in the hills and valleys, in the symmetry of trees, in the order of the leaves and petals, in every blade of grass and in every humble weed.

Its Mood is also in the brilliance of the sunlight, in the "cold light of stars," in the romance of the twilight, in the "rosy-fingered" dawn. It is alike in the glowing summer's heat and the chilling winter's frost; in the gentle zephyr and the angry storm.

Music is in all things, but it becomes most divine in the human breast. No savage is so wild but is moved by Music. No man has stooped so low but that Music may lift him up again. No heart has ever found a grief that Music could not soothe.

As a babe, the first sound to reach your ears was the music of your mother's voice. As a child, you lisped in nursery rhymes. You skipped and you danced to show your heart's delight. You sang and you whistled in the very joy of Life. Many of your playthings were musical toys. Many of your games were played with Music taking part. Always it has been Music's place to bring you happiness. And, if you have grown older, Music still has charms to please.

And now, may I hope that you have become interested to be more intimately acquainted with Music? You have almost reached the end of this little musical journey. Your term of Melody Way lessons has nearly run its course. How much have you learned? What have you accomplished? Can you play every piece, in every key? Do you know the names, terms and signs that make Music intelligible?

No good teacher would complete his course without being anxious about the progress of his pupils. A fitting close, then, it would seem, would be a brief review of the journey we have taken. Pleasant memories, I trust, will return as we travel o'er the road once again.

Music, we have said, is a language. Some have vaguely called it the speech of angels, the expression of the soul. But I would also have you think of Music as a language of ideas and of thoughts, expressed in sounds as intelligible as in speech and in patterns as traceable as in any art design.

I have tried to make this clear to you by separating Music into its elements. You have seen that what we call Music is made up of rhythmic pulsations, melodic patterns and harmonic designs. We have studied these separately, have named them, memorized and mastered them. You should now know them when you hear them and when you see them.

You should feel each rhythm and be able to express it. You should recognize each bit of melody when you hear it and be able to sing or play it. You should be able to distinguish between the familiar harmonies you hear and see and play as well as write them.

The printed page accompanying this lesson should prove to you whether or not you can recognize a Melody at sight. Twelve of your familiar pieces are represented on this page, the first phrase only of each Melody. In order to test you thoroughly, each piece is written in a different key from the original.

Your first test should be to name each piece by merely studying its notation without playing it at the piano.

The second test is for you to name the key of each piece as the first phrase is now written.

The third test is for you to name the letter names of the major scale in the key in which each Melody is written.

The fourth test is to play from memory the chords used to accompany each Melody in the key in which it is written.

The fifth test is to write out these chords from memory. If this seems too difficult, then you may refer to the table of Complete Cadence Chords, which are a part of this review.

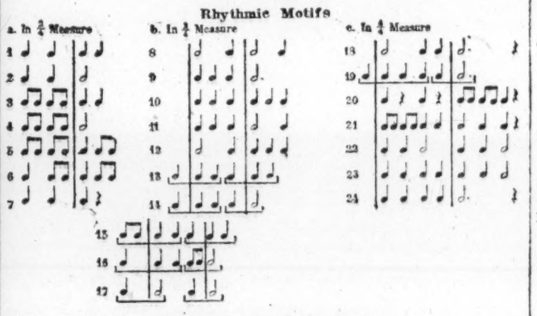

For the remainder of this period let us make a list of the ideas we have gained. There are hundreds more in Music, but these are fundamental and you will meet them again and again in the new Music you will learn.

For your convenience I shall list the Rhythmic Motifs and Figures, the Melodic Motifs and Figures and the Harmonic Motifs as you have learned them in the pieces of the Melody Way. Your part will be to identify them and to associate or connect them with the Melodies in which they occur.

I. Rhythmic Motifs

Play the above Melodic Motifs and Harmonic Motifs in all keys, with each hand separately.

Complete Cadence Chords

Below you will find the complete cadence chords in all 12 keys. The first six of these were introduced to you in the seventh lesson. For convenient reference, the keys are grouped in the order of their sharps and flats.

For daily practice, I should suggest this order:

Monday—F and C.
Tuesday—D and E.
Wednesday—G and A
Thursday—D flat and E flat.
Friday—G flat and A flat.
Saturday—B flat and B.

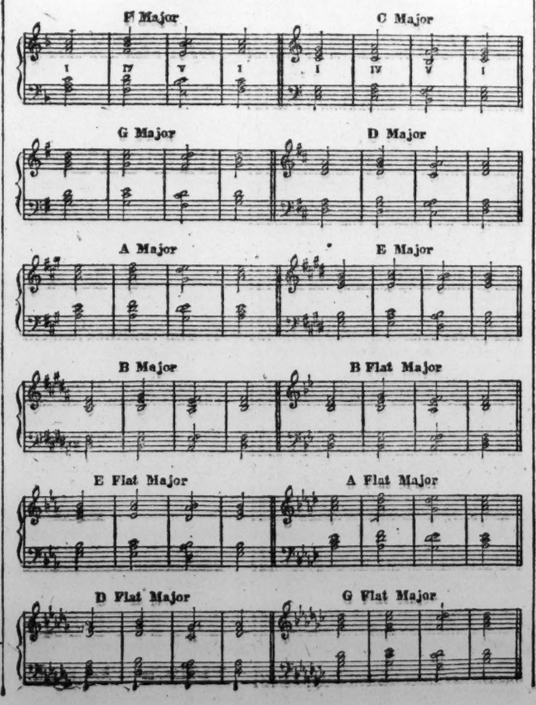

Transpositions

You should also practice your transpositions according to some such system. Play in two different keys each day and you will cover them all each week.

Test Questions

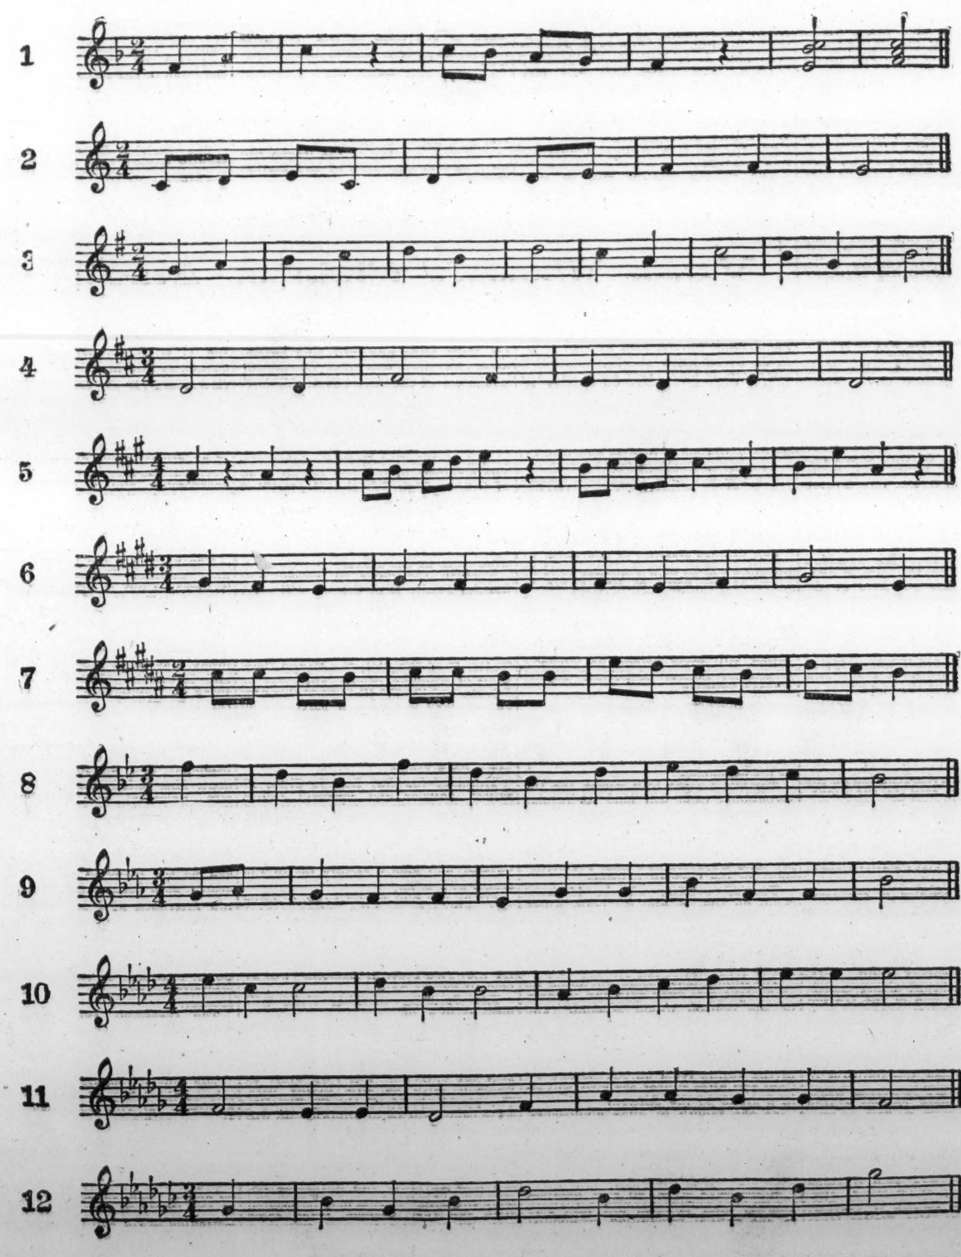

Select 50 test questions from the preceding lessons and try to answer them without referring to the printed answers. Then check your answers with the printed answers. Give yourself two points for each question answered correctly. The sum of these points will be your final grade for this term of lessons.

And now, as we close, let me hope that you will go on with your studies, for you have only just begun your adventures on the joyous Road to Music. The farther you travel into this Wonder-Land, the more beautiful you will find its Melodies and Harmonies, the more challenging its Rhythms.

So far, I trust, I have guided you safely and well. Now you must seek other guides. Try to find a teacher who will build upon your foundation a Temple of Music that will ever delight you—one that will grow more and more beautiful as you help to build it.

My task, for the present, is done. It has been a pleasure to serve you and I am sincerely sorry to leave you. All my good wishes and my continued interest go out to you. And, believe me always a true and loyal friend to the members of the Melody Way Club.

Activities of the Women's Clubs

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

WASHINGTON club women welcomed back this week after the results of primaries the two women candidates for the United States House of Representatives, who have been identified with local projects through their year of residence in Washington, Mrs. Medill McCormick, candidate for representative from Illinois, and Miss Agnes Hart Wilson, candidate for representative from Pennsylvania.

Mrs. McCormick was the guest of honor and speaker at a tea held at the home of the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. James J. Davis for the District of Columbia League of Republican Women.

As the time for the convening of the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in San Antonio, Tex., May 28 to June 7, draws near the District of Columbia members of the federated clubs and those of Maryland are concentrating their efforts on furthering the candidacy for president of Maryland's candidate, Mrs John F. Sippel, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Sippel has served as vice chairman of the house committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs As president of the Maryland State Federation and General Federation director her interests have often been identical with those of the District women and she has never failed to assist in campaigns and the legislative work of the District.

Mrs. Edward Franklin White, the other candidate for president, is also well known in Washington as she has served in important positions on the General Federation committees Mrs. White is now reporter of the Supreme and Appellate Court of Indiana and is a lawyer of note. She is the author of the uniform marriage and divorce bill for which the entire federation is working.

Mrs. Henry C. Taylor, of Iowa, and Mrs. William R. Alvord, of Michigan, are candidates for the office of recording secretary. Candidates for other offices are Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, of Massachusetts, first vice president; Mrs. Eugene B. Lawson, of Oklahoma, second vice president, and Mrs. H. C. Reynolds, of Kentucky, treasurer.

The program at the biennial will be in charge of Mrs. H. S. Godfrey, of Minnesota, and will include addresses on all phases of home life, home making and other subjects in which the women of the federation are interested.

The Ladies of the Senate, an organization formed in war days to permit Red Cross work on the part of the senators' wives and families in a group, has returned to some of its original aims in the surgical dressings work of some of its members at the District Chapter of the American Red Cross at 821 Sixteenth street northwest, each week.

Other volunteers are needed also for some emergency work in surgical dressings, and will be welcomed for this service until the end of June. Special requests from a number of the local hospitals for dressings have made room for more volunteers in this work.

The Woman's Club of Bethesda held its May business meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. L. L. Nicholson, on the Rockville pike. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Elisha Hanson, and the first vice president, Mrs. W. B. N. Brooks, the second vice president, Mrs. W. J. Montgomery, presided.

The former president, Mrs. E. W. Chafee, has been elected vice president of the Maryland State Federation. Reports of delegates and alternates to the State federation meeting at College Park were made by Mrs. W. M. Clark, Mrs. Henry Karr, Mrs. W. J. Peters, Mrs. George E. Pariseau and Mrs. Berlin Brann.

The account of the Montgomery County play-writing contest, sponsored by the club, received first honorable mention, and will be published in the first edition of "The Maryland Club Woman" in the fall. The club voted to sponsor a similar contest next year to be State-wide in its scope.

Mrs. L. Gibbon White reported on the plans made for the "house warming" and opening of the clubhouse by the construction and ways and means committee.

A committee appointed by the president is working on the selection of the clubhouse furnishings, which are to be in place in time for the opening on May 26. The members of the committee are: Mrs. E. P. Abbe, Mrs. R. S. Antrobus, Mrs. Terrill Brazleton, Mrs. Wallace Craigie, Mrs. Charles I. Corby, Mrs. Adolph Gude, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. Perry Thurston, Mrs. W. J. Montgomery, Mrs. L. L. Nicholson, Mrs. Campbell Oliphant, Mrs. James M. Rowe, Mrs. James True, Mrs. George Unmacht, Mrs. R. Bates Warren, Mrs. L. Gibbon White and Mrs. J. Frederick Imirie, chairman. Mrs. Campbell Oliphant, who is chairman of the American home department, is in charge of outfitting the kitchen. Mrs. Edward M. Willis, jr.; Mrs. Charles A. Hedekin and Mrs. John O'Shea were elected members.

The program chairman, Miss Mona Gill, arranged a musical hour. Aiden Potter sang a group of songs, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Mary Coffin Ford. Piano selections were given by Miss Helen McLoughlin, of Rockville. The hostesses at tea were Mrs. John A. Holmes, Miss Mona W. Gill, Miss Pauline Wile, Mrs. J. J. Miller, Mrs. Berlin Brann, Mrs. Edwin H. Etz, Mrs. Edward L. Stock, Mrs. Franklin C. Getzendanner, Mrs. John Wilbur Green, Mrs. George E. Hamilton and Mrs. Robert Hagner, chairman.

The civic section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., Mrs. R. Harvey Sargent, leader, was held at the home of Mrs. Whitman Cross, on East Kirke street. Mrs. Paul B. Dunbar, chairman of the committee on applied education, urged the members to keep in close touch with the new schools and to be ready to aid in any proposed betterment in the course of study. Mrs. Charles D. Curtiss, of the committee on resolutions and legislation, reported that three resolutions sponsored by the Montgomery County Federation have been indorsed by the club and that the club has also indorsed the Capper-Ketchum bill.

Mrs. Robert J. Service reported on the food and clothing sent to the Montgomery County General Hospital. Her committee also sent $162.92 to the Montgomery County Social Service League. Mrs. William B. Greeley reported $834 raised in Chevy Chase in the special drive for the Social Service League.

Mrs. Harold B. Stabler, of the committee on international relations, reported.

Mrs. Sargent introduced the speaker of the day, Mrs. Robert C. Howard, recently leader of the civics section of the Twentieth Century Club. Mrs. Howard gave an account of her experience as a juror in one of the District courts.

Luncheon was served in the garden.

The executive board held the last meeting of the year Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley. Mrs. Alexander Ashley and Mrs. William C. Dennis were assisting hostesses. Grandma's Piano

STEINWAY

"The Instrument of the Immortals"

Times have not changed very much since those dear old days. The value of the Piano as the basic musical instrument for the home is recognized everywhere, and the modern child's education is incomplete unless it knows something about playing.

The finest piano for the home of today is the Grand. In tone and responsiveness it is far superior to any other style and it costs very little more than a good upright.

MODERNISTIC FURNISHINGS ARE ON SHOW

By ADA RAINEY.

THIS week our attention is divided between the very modernistic exhibition of paintings and decorations at Moses & Sons and the paintings by an "old master," Murillo, of the "Immaculate Conception," recently loaned to the National Gallery. The gamut is of the extremes of art values. The two notes stand out effectively.

The exhibition of modernistic paintings at Moses & Sons is the most advanced assemblage of this type that has been brought to Washington, with the possible exception of the exhibition held recently at the Club St. Marks by the Washington Society of Independent Artists. Certainly this is the first opportunity that has come to us to see examples of the famous modernistic furnishings that have aroused so much comment and interest in Paris and New York. Much credit is due to Radford Moses for his initiative in arranging and designing most of the exhibits with the assistance of Miss Hazel E. Wheelock, who is an artist of much ability.

In Paris three years ago, when the exposition of "arts decoratif" was held, artists and laymen journeyed across the ocean to see the new models, which were not based upon any past ideas. The furniture, architecture and textiles, as well as jewelery, glass and ceramics, were all of absolutely original design.

The importance of this exposition has been seen in the influence it has had in New York, especially in the various types of advertising, window decoration and furniture. During the winter Lord & Taylor, of New York, imported from Paris an assemblage of furniture and various objects of the new art, which was on exhibition there for two months and attracted the attention of half a million people.

Moses & Sons has done something even more interesting and original. Instead of importing anything from Paris they have taken modernistic designs and made their own adaptation. In some instances they have designed and made the furniture, as well as upholstering it.

But the paintings call for mention first. Here we have an opportunity to see modernistic paintings in an environment that harmonizes with their lines and color. This is a great advantage. It shows them at an entirely different angle from that seen in an exhibition gallery, or singly with objects that are entirely out of key with their feeling. The exhibition has been obtained through the Dudensing Galleries of New York. Buk and Nura and Schulhoff and Trunk, whom we have already seen at the Yorke Gallery last week and at the Club St. Marks show are seen here in a new light. Trunk's prismatic paintings are vibrating with color and brilliance, especially is this marked in "Reflections," which is the largest of his paintings here. It has an intricate design which is full of charm and inspiration. "Calla Lilies" is another painting by this artist which has individuality and charm.

The naive paintings by Nura are in a class by themselves. They reflect the imagination of the fairy world of the child's mind. "We Know an Enchanted Island" is in this vein and delightfully refreshing, it is. She is the wife of Buk and has achieved a distinguished place for herself in American art of today There are four paintings by Vukovic, which are solid from the point of view of paintings, highly individualistic and strong. "Around the Bend" and "The Pond" are the most effective work of this painter, who is essentially self-taught and removed from the influences of the day and who has a very personal charm.

Mangravite, well known in Washington, where he lived and taught for some years, is represented by "Southern Italy." A "Head" by Osborne is classic in its form and simplicity. "Landscape," by Blanche, might be called an American primitive. He has an indefinable way of giving landscapes, which he delights to paint, a certain distinction.

There are some black and white work in wood block and lithographs which are good. But the sculpture calls attention to itself by reason of its unusual form and quality. Maltaszche, Evergood and Wheelock have all contributed small figures in stone and wood and amorath, which are essentially stimulating and expressive decoratively. This is especially noted in the "Moses," by Evergood, and the "Mask," by Maltaszche.

The decorative importance of the seven or eight rooms that have been treated in the new style is outstanding. Instead of taking the more extreme and bizarre of the new tendencies a sincere effort has been made to make them practical and useful. It has been truly said that as styles in architecture, dress, automobiles are constantly changing why should not the interiors of our houses keep up with the procession? Perhaps the colonial and antique models have been a bit overworked here lately. Certainly the craze for old furniture has gone to extremes when things that are really nothing but "junk" are hauled out of the garret and hay loft and made to do duty in the drawing room. The reaction from this somewhat musty style to the crispiness and brilliant surfaces of the modernistic rooms is a welcome relief. There is great variety, too. Modernistic has come to mean simplicity, straight lines, brilliant color, contrasted with the metalic surfaces.

This has been carried out in a most stimulating way in the rooms of the Moses exhibition. For instance, in the entrance room there is a mantel designed by Radford Moses which is made of upstanding copper guttering contrasted with strips of tin. Another mantel in the large living room is also made of banded lines of copper and tin laid in geometric designs. Disks of ground glass are worked into the over mantel designs and are very effective. Instead of the valance over the window draperies, there are the peculiarly strange tin flutings which are also used in the baseboards of the room.

There are varied and usual means employed to give brilliance and color to the rooms. Mirrors have been especially cut and employed without frames to give the much sought after straight lines. The walls are of solid tone. In several rooms flat gold and silver paper has been put on the walls with excellent effect. The lighting fixtures have been made of ground glass and copper in an unusual arrangement. The lamps on the tables and the standing lamps all have unique forms and delightful shades. The textiles are varied and well adapted to their several uses. There are, for instance, organdie curtains for the bedrooms and hangings with modernistic patterns for the living room and library.

The walls of the sun parlor are painted in a decorative design by Miss Wheelock on a blue background. This design is of peacocks and fauns, and is one of the best bits of decoration in the exhibition. But description is of little avail, for there has been nothing like this in Washington and it should be seen by every one interested in decoration and its possibilities. The whole scheme has been carried out with forethought and care as to details, and the ensemble is harmonious and is related to itself effectively.

The word given out as interpretative of the new note is as follows:

"Our present age, like all past ages, has its own ideals of beauty, and art creations are made with the intention of putting into material form this idea of beauty. There are certain tendencies which are very clearly defined today that make for modernistic art and that make up our ideal of beauty.

"Outward simplicity is the keynote of modern construction and design. Modern art seeks to emphasize the beauty of the material. If a thing is of wood, it should look like wood. If it is made of steel, it should look like steel. Things that tend toward imitation are out, or soon will be.

"It will not be long before American art will stand alone. It will have smart lines expressive of the speed and directness of our times, with its beauty and color of designs and at the same time its comfort and practicability. It will introduce in the modern American home the type of furniture that is characteristic of our present mode of living as is the motor car, the telephone and the radio.

Catharine Critcher Show.

Catharine Critcher has an exhibition of her paintings at the Women's University Club, which is the first one-man show that she has had in Washington. She is represented in the Santa Fe Museum, at Santa Fe, N. Mex., and has been associated with the Taos Society of Artists and is the only woman member of that group, which is in itself a distinction and an honor, as the painters who compose the society are making their mark in the art of today and are all strong, sincere painters.

That Miss Critcher is entitled to belong to such a group is shown by her present exhibition. Miss Critcher is also represented in the Corcoran Gallery of Art and in many other private collections, as well as museums.

"Love Bird," the portrait of a young girl in red holding a love bird which contrasts effectively against her dress, is a strong bit of painting, yet it is particularly sympathetic in giving the character of the girl and is decorative as well. This proves that Miss Critcher is versatile in her work, and she is not held by the Taos type of painting, which is concerned largely with Indians. Her Indian paintings, however, are splendid examples of straightforward, direct presentation, which is yet presented with the richness of background.

In the present show there are a number of single heads that are finely characterized and finely constructed. The illustration shown here of an "Indian Chief" is impressive. "Mountain Negro" is effectively characterized and is the result of her last summer's work. "Calla and Interior" is the latest work of this accomplished artist and is really the most satisfactory in the exhibition. It has a breadth of design and a strong contrast of light and dark which is well sustained. "Sun Lightning" and "Taos Indians" and "Juanita" are some of the other paintings that make the exhibition really effective and significant. Miss Critcher has a number of her paintings on exhibition in a traveling exhibition which is in the Southwest, but enough are shown here to make Miss Critcher a place as a representative painter of the best that is being done at present and one that sheds luster on the art of Washington.

Art School Show.

The exhibition of the Critcher School of Painting and Applied Art was recetly held in the school building, 1603 Connecticut avenue. The work was all by the students, most of them children and students of the school's of the city, who are specializing in art. The work is of a high grade. Especially is the work in portraiture to be commended. It is directed by Miss Critcher herself. The still life and work in advertising shows much originality, and the work in all lines was very creditable.

Arts and Crafts Work.

The Washington Society of Arts and Crafts is holding its annual exhibition at the Arts Club this week. Lillian Burke is the chairman of the industrial arts committee, and has arranged an excellent exhibition. It is smaller than last year, with fewer articles shown, but the standard is higher, on the whole, and the craftsmanship in practically every instance of high quality.

In the lower room there is a series of photographs. The first consists of some interiors designed by Genevieve Hendrichs. The second series are portrait photographs by Beverly Harris. Mr. Harris shows in these portraits a high standard of artistic perception and craftsmanship. The balancing of light and dark is well carried out.

In the upper room the most striking feature is the paneled wooden screen by Robert Le Fevre, who is really a genius at this sort of thing, and who employed a fine sense of design and color in this screen, which has a design of a tree of life. Below are placed a series of small figurines of charming imaginative quality, done in the humble medium of soap, by Helen Von Hartz.

In a case are some bowls and flower holders in pottery which for its exquisite color and quality calls to mind the old Sung potteries. Leona Nicholson, who has designed and modeled the potteries herself, is an out-of-town member from New Orleans. She has attained the rank of a master craftsman, which is a coveted title and is only conferred on those whose work is up to the high standard required by the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts. These potteries were very popular and a number were sold on the opening day, proving that really fine things are really appreciated and are what people want.

Silver work of fine design and excellent work and some copper and jewelry were done by Ralph Grimm, who is a former service man and has attained his skill, which is of a high standard, since his discharge from the war where he was severely wounded. Lillian Burke has some sconces and candlesticks of fine design in copper. The simplicity and charm of her designs are delightful.

Marian Lane's books, which she binds so skillfully, are synonymous with the best craft's work. A volume of Burns' poems has a thistle as a design on the cover which is very effective. A coat of arms in tapestry by Katharine Crawford is a unique way to employ tapestry. The lettering is close and careful work done with the utmost skill.

There are fine pieces of leather called Corley Craft, some excellent batiks by Frances Dawson, tie-dyed scarves by Mrs. Howard Nyman, a silver tray by Alberta Montgomery, weaving by Mrs. Kathleen Wheeler, Mrs. Whitman and Emma Sommer, who teaches weaving at Walter Reed, and many other fine and beautiful things which prove that there is an excellent standard among the member of the society. The society, which is on permanent exhibition at the Dunthorne Gallery, has sold $1,400 worth of craft work in two months, which is a goodly amount, as this is the first year the society has maintained a permanent exhibition room. It is rapidly obtaining recognition and appreciation.

The exhibition will be on view at the Arts Club until the end of this week, when it will give place to the summer exhibition of the work of the resident members, which will be shown until October 1.

Murillo's "Conception."

The large painting by Murillo just placed on exhibition at the National Gallery has an interesting story connected with it. It is loaned by De Witt Hutchings.

The "Immaculate Conception With a Mirror," by Murillo, was first owned by the Convent of Darefoot Carmelite Nuns and was there from 1676 to 1807, 129 years. In 1807 it was taken to Paris by Jean Baptiste Pierre Le Brun, husband of the artist, Madame Vigee De Brun. In 1811 it was sold through a London dealer named Harris to Sir Th[illegible] Baring, head of the house of [illegible]ankers. It remained in the [illegible] family for the following 108 years. In 1919 the Earl of Northbrook, present head of the house of Baring, sold this picture. It came again to Paris and in 1922 was purchased from the dealer who bought it at the Northbrook sale, by De Witt V. Hutchings.

When it came to America in September, 1922, it went to Archer Huntington, and was hung in the New York Hispanic Society's place. Next it was shown in the Metropolitan Museum of Art for a year. Later at the Chicago Art Institute and recently at the Brooklyn Institute of Art and Sciences. Just before coming to the National Gallery of Art, Washington, it was shown again at the Metropolitan Museum of Art at its Spanish exhibition which closed about the middle of April.

The "Immaculate Conception with the Mirror" is noted throughout all the literature on Murillo. Two Spanish writers described it while it was still in the convent at Madrid.

While it was at the Metropolitan Art Gallery Dr. John C. Van Dyke, the eminent art critic, and Prof. Frank J. Mather, head of the art school at Princeton, recognized as one of the greatest American authorities on the old masters, examined it, and both pronounced it a splendid example of Murillo at his best. More recently the Duke of Alva, director of the Prado Gallery, Madrid, viewed it and pronounced it finer than the Louvre "Conception" and, with the one from San Ildefonso in the Prado, as beautiful a "Conception" as Murillo ever executed. A personal letter to the present owner from August Mayer, of Munich, the greatest European authority on Murillo, states his appreciation of the high quality of the "Mirror." Dr. J. T. Bridge, curator of the Frick Gallery, New York, estimates it to be Murillo's "masterpiece."

For a painting 250 years old it is in a remarkably perfect condition, with only a few small cracks. Nowhere is paint flaked off, and there is no evidence of restoring. The color has neither faded nor darkened; in fact, it is a beautiful painting in beautiful condition.

It is not definitely known how long it may remain in the National Gallery of Art. The gallery is fortunate in obtaining it, even if only for a short time, as it is one of the important religious picture paintings of Murillo. It seems like a picture of this quality and beauty should become the property of some art gallery. There will be few chances to obtain such a picture by Murillo in times to come. Nearly all his "Immaculate Conceptions" are already owned by public galleries. In 1856 the Soult "Conception," in Louvre, was sold at auction for 625,000 francs, and was the highest auction price paid for a single painting until within the last twenty years.

WIFE BIG AID TO WALLACE, SAYS WRITER

AMERICAN AMBASSADORS TO FRANCE. By Beckles Wilson. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

Among the many valuable contributions to American history that have been lately issued from the press, this volume by Mr. Wilson will take a high place. The United States has always been well served by her diplomatic representatives to France. Some of them have been there at very trying times, during the regime of the first revolution, under the consulate and empire, at the revolution of 1848, the Prussia and French War, and last, while all the world was at war and for the most trying months following.

The French have never forgotten Elihu B. Washburne and what he did during the disintegration of the second empire. Nor will the United States ever forget the activities, the tact and diplomatic wisdom of Hugh C. Wallace, who took up the role of Ambassador to France just as the great war closed in victory for the allies. Of his services Mr. Wilson speaks in the highest terms. In his preface he thus speaks of Mr. Wallace:

"In the chapter dealing with the post-war embassy of Mr. Hugh Campbell Wallace, I have felt impelled to emphasize its importance, not yet fully realized by his countrymen. It was a period of dangerous and embarrassing reaction, which only a manifest sincerity, patience and an unfailing good humor could have preserved that confidence which had just sustained the rudest of shocks and successfully have bridged the chasm between two antagonistic administrative policies at home."

Mr. Wilson credits much of the success of Ambassador Wallace to the tact and wise prudence of Mrs. Wallace. She received from Americans and the illustrious statesmen at that time in Paris generous acknowledgment and ardent expressions of esteem. It must be remembered that while Mr. Wallace was our representative in France that government denounced the treaty of commerce that had stood for nearly a century, and that it required tact of the highest order to maintain amicable relations. It was a most trying position and one that called for high diplomacy. All this is brought out in the volume under consideration.

From the end papers by Clifford Pyle for "Love Letters of a Husband," which has just been published.

McADOO AND UNDERWOOD WRITE CONTRASTING VIEWS ON ENFORCING DRY LAW

Political works are the literary rage of the hour, and it is an interesting coincidence that two former candidates for the high office of President of the United States on the Democratic side of the fence have burst into print on some of their pet doctrines and theories.

In "Drifting Sands of Party Politics," by Oscar W. Underwood (the Century Co., New York), this prominent Democratic leader, who served for so many years in the House and Senate, has given us a real insight into congressional legislation and the way it is made—and unmade.

The other book, "The Challenge," was written by William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, and was published by the Century Co., of New York, also. Secretary McAdoo's book is confessedly a challenge to foes of prohibition and defiers of the eighteenth amendment. Secretary McAdoo has approached his difficult subject from a legal standpoint, and many of his arguments appear to be unanswerable from the point of view of the law, at least. Coming as it does on the eve of the presidential nominations and elections, it is bound to have a considerable influence on those who read it.

No one can doubt that Secretary McAdoo has given a timely utterance to thoughts that many are pondering at this time. He is one of the most influential "drys" in the country and was twice a leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

States' Rights Revived.

The old issue of States' rights is revived in Senator Underwood's well-written volume. He sees a danger in the growing tendency to centralization of Government at Washington, a fear which is shared by many others.

Senator Underwood has gone at his task in a scholarly way and he traces the movement for freedom among the middle classes in England under the Tudor and Stuart dynasties and shows how this movement was a prelude in the development of governmental principles in colonial America. Then the senator recites the history of early American legislation. The main purpose of the book is to analyze the legislation enacted by Congress from the Spanish-American War through the period of the World War, and this he does in an exceptionally able manner, writing, as he is, as a former participant in the making of the laws of which he is conversing.

The senator is firmly against paternalistic legislation of any sort and makes the plain statement: "The drifting sands of party politics, the desire to win the immediate battle, the apprehension lest the failure to yield to organized pressure may sacrifice a political future, or a score or more of less creditable motives, have oftentimes blinded the eyes of the public representatives to the great principles of free government that should ever be the guiding star to shape the course of their official conduct."

The maintenance of the integrity of the sovereign States he calls the first principle of our government.

Deaf to Cataract.

In a graphic manner the senator states his opinion of the national prohibition legislation. "That the American people have the softest hearts and the hardest heads," he points out, "is largely responsible for the adoption of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. The soft heart responded to the call to help suffering humanity and the hard head refused to hear the roar of the cataract ahead or to heed the signs that the river of enforcement was not navigable at that point."

He sets forth his creed for the Federal Government in this striking manner at the conclusion of his book: "We should divorce the Federal Government from any intimate association in the domestic affairs of the people; confine its active function to the national endeavor contemplated in the beginning; as far as possible abolish the numerous boards, commissions and bureaus that are now exercising powers of government. We should confine the power to exercise legislative discretion to the Congress of the United States and maintain the power to execute the laws in the hands of the President, where power and responsibility may be united in one person; allow only the courts of the land to pass judgment that affects the rights and liberties of the citizen. In other words, we should abolish the discretions that are now vested in a bureaucratic government and restore in its entire integrity the government of law we inherited from our fathers."

Attacks Wet Foes.

Secretary McAdoo trains his guns particularly against the enemies of the eighteenth amendment, bringing the power of logic as well as legal knowledge to bear on the vital topic. Even those who differ from the Secretary in his conclusions can not fail to admire the masterly way in which he assembles his arguments and attacks his opponents, giving and asking no quarter.

These addresses, for they were all delivered before representative groups of Americans, are part of a campaign Secretary McAdoo has been engaged in for some time on behalf of law enforcement and particularly of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. One of the finest speeches in the book is the one entitled "Obedience to Law is Liberty," which the Secretary made at the commencement exercises of Mercer University, Macon, Ga., in June, 1927. It was told simply because of the youth of most of his hearers, but there was no mistaking his meaning. He pointed out to the graduates that, now modern conditions had led to congestion of population the saloon had become a menace to the youth of the nation.

"The demands of industry," he continued, "have become such that the workman who develops the drink habit is unable to keep pace with his fellows, loses his position, and makes his family a charge upon the community." His concluding words are truly worthy of quotation.

Definition of Liberty.

"Obedience to law is liberty," exclaimed the Secretary. "This fine phrase constitutes the inscription over the main entrance to the courthouse in Worcester, Mass. It is a perfect definition of liberty; the only kind of liberty under which civilization has been able to advance; the only kind of liberty under which this great republic has been able to assume a commanding position among the powers of the earth. As you go out into the world and take up your responsibilities of citizenship keep this principle in your hearts and be guided by it in your daily lives. Upon the observance of this principle rests not alone the safety of the republic but the preservation of all that our heroes and statesmen have fought and sacrificed to secure."

It is interesting to note the intrinsic merit in the arguments of both of these men, diametrically opposed as they are in some degree from each other but both rightfully indicative of the proper interest Americans are taking in the vital political issues of the moment.

Latest Books Tersely Reviewed

EMBATTLED BORDERS. By E. Alexander Powell. (The Century Co., New York.)

Eastern Europe, where wars and rumors of war are bred, is a most complicated land and it is difficult to understand the many elements which make it important historically and politically.

In such a book as that written by Mr. Powell, a concise understandable exposition of the situation is set forth in a readable form. Mr. Powell writes as one with authority, for he has studied his subject at first hand and has had the advantage of consultation and conversation with the rulers and political leaders of the nations of which he writes.

These included such figures in the present day limelight as King Victor Emanuel of Italy, Premier Mussolini, Queen Marie of Roumania, President Hainisch of Austria and that virile personage, M. Vaino Tanner, prime minister of Finland.

SEEING RUSSIA. By E. M. Newman. (Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York.)

There is a certain fascination in the study of Russia, the unwieldly giant of nations, at the present time when her fate is of such an uncertain quantity with her people struggling under the thralldom of tyranny and ignorance. This is no new experience for Russia; in fact it has been her unhappy lot through history, but it has taken a world-arresting form. It is well for historians of today to study what is going on in the land of the "Bear who walks like a man," and Mr. Newman's book is a real revelation in this regard.

For years the author has been an unofficial observer in other lands and he has learned how "to see," the greatest gift which can come to a traveler who visits countries other than his own. He has written his book in a popular vein, but he does not ignore meticulous accuracy in so doing.

Not the least interesting feature of the book is found in the hundreds of illustrations in it, most of them Mr. Newman's personal work and notable because they are the first uncensored photographs to go out of Russia since the Soviet government was established.

COPPER MOON, by Edwin Bateman Morris. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

This is a simple story of average lives made attractive by its skilled treatment. Romance comes into the life of John Hyde, who had an antipathy to womankind, when he went to the country to recover his health. Love will find a way, however, and from Hyde's small cottage the little god tied a chain of enchantment to the mansion on the hill where dwelt Tevis Harlan, who had no particular liking for the opposite sex.

Naturally, these inhibitions only made the inevitable result come all the quicker and each realized the attractiveness of the other. An incidental romance was that of Uncle Cyrus, the maiden's rich uncle, and Hyde's mother, which gives additional interest to the volume.

HEREDITY AND CHILD CULTURE. By Henry Dwight Chapin. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

In this generation when the scientific study of childhood is bidding fair to cure many of the ills of tomorrow through prevention, such a book as that written by Dr. Chapin is of the utmost value. He goes thoroughly into his subject and treats it from all angles.

This is, of course, an amplified edition of a book which has gained many friends since it was first published.

Dr. Chapin not only throws new light on parenthood as an art and a science, and the development of the child, but sets forth the most up-to-date information concerning child-guidance clinics; the Modern School and its Functions; Nutrition, Legislation in behalf of Children, Child Labor and the Adoption of Children.

THE EMERALD TIGER. By Edgar Jepson. (Macy-Masius, New York.)

A weird story of Chinese superstition. Hannibal Tod, the principal character, was a salesman of a rejuvenator, but became a collector of jade. He is led into an adventure to secure a certain emerald tiger that had been at some time purloined from a Chinese temple. Around its possession hovered a thousand strange powers. It was also sought for by three other persons. Tod secured it and it was wheedled away from him, then an exciting search prevailed. The story is full of action and will hold the close attention of the reader after he once begins the book.

WYLIE BOOK STRIKES NEW FICTION NOTE

The amazing progress of Elinor Wylie as poet and novelist is watched with deep interest in this city, where she spent so much of her life and where her family still resides.

In "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard" (Alfred A. Knopf, New York), her latest novel, is fulfilled all the promise of her past in the world of literature. We had become accustomed to a new element in fiction writing in Mrs. Wylie's other works, "The Orphan Angel," "Jennifer Lorn," and "The Ventian Glass Nephew," but she spins a mystical tale on a very slender thread with great art and finish in "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard."

Fantasy, imagery and discriminating use of words to protray her thoughts are visible in the new novel. Irony is there, too, and a subtle kind of comedy which only the sophisticated in letters will be able to fully appreciate.

Mrs. Wylie has selected as hero the character of a poet, not patterned after any poet of the past or present, but created out of the crucible of her vivid fancy.

Some have compared the genius of this former Washington girl to that of Dickens. But that is somewhat of a mistake if the present novel is the basis on which the likeness has been traced. Her novels are of too gossamer a type, too romantic in one sense and not realistic enough to be of the true Dickens school. The characters Dickens drew with such faithful fidelity to feature, form and spirit do exist in humanity. "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard," have their being only in the fertile imagination of a poetic nature, such as that undeniably possessed by Mrs. Wylie.

She has the unique gift of sketching in a personality with a few deft strokes of her pen. For instance, this touch "He remembered the poached egg shrunk thin upon his plate, wrinkled like a winter puddle." Only a real craftsman could produce such a paragraph and there is other indication in the book of untiring industry and a meticulousness in the choice of words that is almost Poesque in kind.

The author has cast her book into the mold of the picturesque thirties of the nineteenth century. That she has made a close study of that period is apparent to even the most unobserving and she has the knack of placing you in those years by contemporary mention of what was going on in the world at the time her heroes were alive. She tells us incidentally of Mr. Tennyson's and Mr. Browning's new volumes of poems; that the historian Macaulay is writing to his sister from the smoking room of the house of commons and that Wordsworth was worried about the realm but delighted with his first grandchild. This happy method translates us bodily back to those years and we dwell with delight in her land of yesterday.

There are many Mr. Hazards in modern life, poet souls who dream great visions, but never realize them. Nowadays they are not so well equipped with the classics as was this poet of the thirties, but they have a wider knowledge of human nature, perhaps.

Mr. Hazard is busily occupied with writing little lyrics to Lady Clara, his hostess, and not until the practical Mr. Hodge breaks up his day dream with the cruel weapon of reality does his dream time end, if romance can ever be ended. Truly, this book is prose poetry and Mrs. Wylie has added much to her growing fame through writing it.

Book Notes

Harper & Bros., whose biennial prize novel competition has brought forth "The Able McLaughlins," "The Perennial Bachelor" and "The Grandmothers," announce their fourth competition, closing February 1, 1929.

The prize, formerly $2,000, has been changed to a $10,000 guarantee, to be paid as follows: "$2,000 as an outright prize, independent of royalties, payable on the announcement of the winner, and $8,000 as a minimum guarantee of royalties to be paid six months after publication."

The judges are Carl Van Doren, author of "The American Novel;" Ellen Glasgow, author of "Barren Ground," "Life and Gabriella," &c.; Jesse Lynch Williams, former president of the Authors League of America.

At the mention of Scotland Yard, the name of George Dilnot comes immediately to mind, for he has not only written "The History of Scotland Yard," but also a number of stories about the sacred institution, the latest of which is "Great Detectives and Their Methods" (Houghton Mifflin Co.). As a veteran journalist who has worked in close connection with Lord Northcliffe, he claims to be the first man given unfettered facilities to see every detail of the work of Scotland Yard. His life has centered largely about Fleet street, although he has ranged London east and west, in company with statesmen, soldiers, detectives, crooks and cranks. "I hate writing like poison," he says, but neither his friends nor his readers believe him.

Harvard will add to its English faculty next year the poet Robert Hillyer, who returns to his alma mater to take over the course in the writing of poetry, which was made famous by Dean LeBaron Russell Briggs. Mr. Hillyer's latest volume of poems, "The Seventh Hill," has just been issued by the Viking Press.

SOCIETY

many farewells, will be especially sad this year because it marks the close of Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton's term as superintendent of the Naval Academy.

No administration has exceeded Admiral Nulton's in popularity and already the many friends of Admiral and Mrs. Nulton are beginning to think with sorrow of the time when the superintendent, who was recently promoted to vice admiral, and Mrs. Nulton, must leave this city. Admiral Nulton's new assignment will take him to the West Coast and Mrs. Nulton, after passing the summer in Indianapolis with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dean D. Francis, will join him there in the autumn, when they will be at Long Beach, Calif.

Admiral Nulton will make the U. S. S. West Virginia his flagship. The Nultons will be in Long Beach for the winter season, and pass the summers during their West Coast assignment at Seattle, Wash. Upon Admiral Nulton's retirement from the Navy he and Mrs. Nulton will make their home near their children, Mrs. Francis, who is at Indianapolis, and Mrs. Laurance LeWright Browning, of Maysville, Ky.

Admiral and Mrs. Nulton and other officers on duty at the Naval Academy and their families who are personal friends of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Samuel S. Robison, have expressed pleasure at Admiral Robison's acceptance of the appointment as superintendent of the academy to succeed Nulton, who leaves June 20. Mrs. Robison in the daughter of Admiral Charles E. Clark, who made the historic trip around Cape Horn in the battleship Oregon, and a sister of Mrs. Hughes, wife of Admiral Charles F. Hughes, commander in chief of the United States fleet.

The social events of June week were announced in the official schedule, made public a few days ago. The round of functions will begin on May 30 and end on June 7, commencement day. June 5 will be a big day, as it is then that Admiral and Mrs. Nulton will give their annual garden party to the graduates, and on the same evening the second class will have its picturesque and unique "ring" dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. B. Larom have returned from their wedding trip and are passing some time with the bride's parents, Commander and Mrs. Theodore W. Johnson, of Acton place. Mr. and Mrs. Larom's wedding took place on April 21 in St. Anne's Church here.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Franklin F. Lane, of Philadelphia, who passed a few days here recently, are now in Washington, where they are guests of Mrs. Snowden Ashford.

Mrs. Morrow, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Clark E. Morrow, of Prince George street, has departed for Passaic, N. J., where she was called because of the death of her father.

Among the passengers sailing this week for Jacksonville is Mrs. John S. Strahorn, wife of Maj. Strahorn, of Southgate avenue. Mrs. Strahorn is en route to Fayetteville, Ark., where she will be the guest of her son, Dr. John S. Strahorn, jr., professor of law at the University of Arkansas. After a visit in Arkansas and New Orleans she will join Maj. Strahorn at Lexington, Va., for finals at Washington and Lee University, from which university their son, Charles A. Strahorn, will receive his decree of bachelor of arts on June 5.

Commander and Mrs. John B. Pollard entertained the Naval Bowling Club Monday evening at supper at their home in Wardour.

Miss Evelyn Matthews has returned to Washington after passing a few days here as the guest of Miss Nancy Gannon, daughter of the Commandant of Midshipmen and Mrs. Sinclair Gannon.

Mrs. Joseph R. Wilmer and Miss Anne Wilmer have returned from Florida and are now occupying their home on South River.

Mrs. William Wallace Anderson, of Lexington, Ky., who passed last week-end here with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vernon Fowler, of Hanover street, and is now passing a week at the Mayflower, in Washington, is returning to be here for a fortnight. Mrs. Anderson's son Midshipman Richard Anderson, is in the "plebe" class at the Naval Academy.

After passing the winter in Cocoanut Grove, Fla., Prof. and Mrs. Arthur Newton Brown have returned to this city and are at the Peggy Stewart Inn for the remainder of the spring. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. L. Dorsey Gassaway were guests of honor at a tea given on Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Enoch Barton Garey, wife of the president of St. John's College, at her home in Franklin street.

Commander and Mrs. John Bowers entertained over last week-end, including Mrs. Graham, wife of Col. Malcolm Graham, of the Army, a cousin of Mrs. Bowers; Commander and Mrs. David H. Stuart, Commander and Mrs. George C. Simmons and Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar, of Washington, D. C.

Lieut. and Mrs. W. Scott Trapnell and Lieut and Mrs Charles Bell, of Edgewood Arsenal, are week-end guests of Lieut. and Mrs. Clifford M. Alvord.

Lieut. and Mrs. Perley E. Pendleton entertained over last week-end Miss Isabel Ingram, of Philadelphia, and Lieut. Frank Dettmann, of the Navy, of New York.

The Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, Washington, was the week-end guest last week of Chaplain Sydney K. Evans, of the Naval Academy, at his quarters on Porter road.

Mrs. Graham Moss and daughter, Margaret Lee, are passing the week-end with Maj. and Mrs. Ralph Jones at Fort Leonard Wood.

Mrs. Edgar Basil, of Murray Hill, has departed for New York, where she will be the guest of Lieut. and Mrs. Donald Giles.

On May 19, the midshipmen of the graduating class will be guests at the last of the series of officers' hops for this season. As usual, this dance will be held in Mahan Hall.

Mrs. Doyen, widow of Gen. Charles A. Doyen, U. S. M. C., entertained on Friday at Seven Acres, the home of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Valiant, of Wardour, at a luncheon for eight.

New York

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Gay parties and formal functions ruled social New York's town interest this week, while water sports and horse shows dominated country activities.

Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell is among prominent women interested in water sports who pilot their own motor boats in cruises and races. Mrs. Cromwell affects the new sports kerchief, bound tightly around her head, instead of a hat for her aquatic activities, and wears a short dark blue coat, similar in cut to a sailor's jacket.

A hand-illuminated leather-bound volume of tributes from America's greatest men will be presented to Ignace Paderewski at a testimonial dinner to be given in honor next week. Society leaders will join hands with musicians, diplomats and financiers in appreciation of the pianist-statesman's service to Poland and mankind. Mr. and Mrs John D. Rockefeller, jr., will be among the guests.

Elephant tusks and tiger skins were the chief topic of conversation at a reception and tea at which Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt were guests in Roosevelt House. Explorers, naturalists and big game hunters attended the affair, given by the Women's Roosevelt Memorial Association

Orchids of pink, lavender and the new golden hue occupy a foremost place in the interest of New York society members exhibiting their prize hothouse specimens at the national orchid exhibition at Madison Square Garden.

Stage Presentations of Interest

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

WITH the National Theater Players entering their third week, and announcement that Poli's this summer is to be the home of a comic opera company, led by the dean of American comedians, Mr. DeWolf Hopper, the theater in this parish keeps warm at any rate.

Over at the Belasco, where Mr. L. Stoddard Taylor plays host to visiting thespians, the latest work of John Galsworthy, "Escape," engages attention. Leslie Howard, in the leading role of this play, is making his first serious overture as a player of import. Hitherto his talents have had to do with lighter pieces of theater. In a play by Galsworthy, one of the most distinguished men of letters writing now for the theater, always excepting Sir James Barrie, any young actor may be privileged for feeling important. Galsworthy, over and above all else, is a literary man first and a playwright afterwards; but, happily, his plays measure with his literary efforts—which means that playwriting, after all, need not suffer from the touch of a litterateur.

• • • •

CLAYTON HAMILTON, veteran theatergoer and critic, makes the statement that quite frequently in history playwrights have become men of letters. He cites the case of Sophocles, Shakespeare and Moliere; but adds: "Not often has the process been reversed. Rarely has a man of letters become a playwright." For proof, Mr. Hamilton has this: Nearly all of the great English poets of the nineteenth century tried to write plays—Scott, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Shelley, Keats, Browning, Mrs. Browning, Arnold, Swinburne, Tennyson; and there is not a good playwright in the list.

It would seem that these fellows failed, primarily, because they never became men of the theater. Browning was the outstanding example. He was one really great man of letters who failed before the footlights. Yet his poems have every embodiment of drama. From his "Ring and the Book" was made the piece seen here last week at the Belasco—"Caponsacchi." Walter Hampden, who starred in that play, had an interesting story to tell of its evolution. A Washington woman, Miss Rose Palmer, first saw the possibilities. Her scenario was then handed on to Mr. Hampden's brother-in-law, Arthur Goodrich, and the full-fledged play turned out in something like six months. Another year's rehearsal off and on, and the play reaped a harvest. Two American authors, with material cut and dried by Browning, succeeded where the Englishman failed. He had tried and tried, with similar material, to please the theatergoers of his time, but he fell short in a knowledge of actual theater.

Galsworthy, now, knows his theater public; knows the psychology of theater audiences. All told, he has written 25 plays, long and short. According to Ray Henderson, representative of Winthrop Ames, who produces "Escape," seventeen of the Galsworthy plays have been produced in this country.

• • • •

THE first of the John Galsworthy plays to be enacted on this side of the Atlantic was "The Silver Box," presented by Charles Frohman in the Empire Theater, New York City, March 18, 1907, with Ethel Barrymore as Mrs. Jones. The play had a short existence, probably because the appearance of Miss Barrymore as a charwoman was too much for too much. The fair Ethel is said to have done a magnificent out of acting in this opus.

Next came "Strife," produced by Winthrop Ames in the New Theater on November 17, 1909, with a cast that included Louis A. Calvert, A. E. Anson, Albert Bruning, Thais Lawton and Beverley Sitgreaves This play afterwards went on tour. When Mr. Ames opened his Little Theater in New York, March 11, 1912, a Galsworthy play, "The Pigeon," occupied the stage. Frank Reicher, Russ Whytal and Pamela Gaythorne were in the cast.

Galsworthy came over for this occasion, attended the invitation dress rehearsal, said a stiff "thank you" to the audience, and then fled from the theater. On the night of the first public performance of "The Pigeon" the author walked about Central Park and refused to come near the Little Theater. This, however, was not because Ames, following Galsworthy's speech of "thank you" the night previous, had said: "If you don't like this play, I'll give you another."

On April 3, 1916, John D. Williams produced "Justice" in the Chandler Theater, New York City, with John Barrymore, Cathleen Nesbitt and O. P. Heggie in the cast. The occasion was more or less historic in that it definitely marked the turning point in the career of Barrymore, who previously had been disporting himself in light comedy and even musical comedy and was as yet an unsuspected Hamlet.

"The Little Man" was acted by O. P. Heggie in Maxine Elliott's Theater, New York City, on February 12, 1917, and on March 19 of the same year "The Fugitive" was produced by Oliver Morosco in the Thirty-ninth Street Theater, with Emily Stevens and Conway Tearle in the chief roles. Nineteen-seventeen was a good year for Galsworthy in America, in so far as production goes, though not as to box office receipts, for on July 2, Henry Miller presented "A Bit o' Love" in the Columbia Theater, San Francisco, with O. P. Heggie in the leading part.

The Jewett Players in the Copley Theater, Boston, were the next to come to the Galsworthy cause. In October, 1920, they put on "The Mob" for the first time in America. On the 20th of that month, in the Bijou Theater, New York, W. A. Brady presented "The Skin Game," with Josephine Victor, Herbert Lomas and Marsh Allen. Except for the repertory performance of "Strife," "The Skin Game" was the first Galsworthy opus to have anything like an extensive tour of the country.

Charles Dillingham brought over an English company to act "Loyalties" in the Gaiety Theater, New York, on September 27, 1922. In the cast were Charles Quartermaine, Diana Bourbon, Lawrence Hanray and Henry Morrell. "Loyalties" became a New York success, later was toured, and though the road was not so interested as New York had been, "Loyalties" more or less established Galsworthy in the mind of the general public as a person not necessarily and wholly a despised "high brow." The play was received well in Washington.

The season of 1922-23 saw "The Sun" acted in the Triangle Theater, New York, and "A Family Man" by the Jewett Players in the Copley Theater, Boston. The latter company also brought out "The Eldest Son" that season.

The Theater Guild of New York turned to Galsworthy in October, 1923, and produced his "Windows" in the Garrick Theater, with Frieda Inescort in the cast. Incidentally, she has a part in "Escape." But it remained for "Old English," in many respects the least Galsworthian of all the plays, to make the author an actual box office personage. With George Arliss in the title role, "Old English" was produced by Winthrop Ames in the Shubert Theater, New Haven, Conn., on December 18, 1927, and was acted for three years in America. The cast included Arliss, Irby Marshal, Cecile Dixon, Molly Johnson, Ivan F Simpson and Henry Morrell. In 1925, the Lennox Hill Players in New York produced "The Foundations."

On October 26, 1927, Winthrop Ames produced "Escape," the latest Galsworthy drama, in the Booth Theater, New York City, with a cast including Leslie Howard, Frieda Inescort, Lawrence Hanray, Austin Trevor, Henrietta Goodwin, Alan Trotter, Ruth Vivian, Lois Heatherly, Viva Tattersall, Cyrene Smith, Geraldine Kay, St. Clair Bayfield, Edgar B. Kent, J. P. Wilson, F. Cecil Butler and others. There is an interesting parallel in this production to that of "Justice." Whereas the latter introduced John Barrymore as a serious actor, following his career as a light comedian, so "Escape" gave Leslie Howard his first important serious role.

There still remain eight dramatic works by Galsworthy which have not been professionally acted in America, three of these being short pieces of the type of "The Little Man."

BIG SUCCESS REVIVED BY NAT PLAYERS

"Westward, Ho!" watchword of the Forty-niners, has found its revival in another exodus to the West. This time, though, the crusaders are not of the venturesome type that schoonered over uncharted country in covered wagons, but of a younger stripe, ambitious and full of dreams, and Hollywood is their objective. Thousands of them yearly go West to "break" into the movies and only a small percentage of them manage to become even lowly "extras."

At the National for the new week, the summer players will present that gripping narrative of the studio, "Merton of the Movies," which brought Glenn Hunter into stardom and which was as successful on the screen as it was on the stage. It is a gorgeous burlesque of the film industry and it also is an unerringly shrewd description of the heartaches, jealousies and successes of the "folks in pictures."

Merton Gill is a stage-struck youth in a small town. Nightly he prays to God to make him a good actor. Eventually his nest-egg reaches the stage where it can be hatched into a journey to Hollywood and there Merton finds himself unwanted, abused, in everybody's way and with the pitying friendliness of only one individual. Though regarded as a "boob" of the purest extraction, ortunate coincidences extricate him from the level of the mob and the very people who jeered him are rather in shamefaced awe of him when success accidentally caresses him.

There are four acts using six sets, making of "Merton" a rather pretentious production for stock purposes.

"ABIE" BACK AGAIN ON THE AVENUE

Anne Nichols' Irish-Hebrew comedy, "Abie's Irish Rose," comes to Poli's Theater for its last and farewell week's engagement tonight, May 13, with bargain matinees on Thursday and Saturday. The famous play will be presented by the original New York company, following the long run of six years at the Republic Theater on West Forty-second street.

"Love knows no obstacles" is really the thesis of the play. The adage says that love laughs at locksmiths, but more modernly, perhaps, love also laughs at creeds. What greater contrast in tradition, in heredity, in training and in environment could there be than that between an Irishman and a Jew? The very coupling of names of that character at once suggests antagonism, and for the onlooker—laughter. So Anne Nichols, in writing her comedy, selected a basic idea, with vast possibilities for fun and fancy.

Solomon Levy, a garment manufacturer and a Hebrew after the strictest of this nation, has a lovable young son, Abraham. The lad causes his father some anxiety from time to time because the girls he fancies are not Jewish, and the old man wants to see his son married, that he may have grandchildren about his knee before he is called to his fathers. Abie, however, doesn't ask his dad what sort of a girl he will wed. Instead, he goes off suddenly and marries Rosemary Murphy, daughter of a Patrick Murphy, a rabid son of Ireland, the marriage being solemnized by a Methodist minister in Jersey City.

Abie brings his bride home to his father, without announcing the marriage, introducing her as Miss Rosie Murphiski. As such, the father suggests an immediate marriage, believing Rosie to be the ideal wife for Abie. The marriage is solemnized by Rabbi Samuels. At the conclusion of the ceremony appears the girl's father, Patrick Murphy, accompanied by Father Whalen, of California. Things happen fast and furious thereafter and the marriage is declared null and void because the bride was wed under an assumed name. Then the pair announce the first marriage. While the irate fathers are quarreling a third marriage is performed, this time by Father Whalen, of California. The final curtain shows a happy ending, with the young couple receiving the parental blessing of both fathers.

HOTSY-TOTSY AT MADRILLON

Now that the winter season of activities has come to a close and Washingtonians are beginning to seek the coolness of uncongested corners, Restaurant Madrillon will continue to be in the lead with the fulfillment of its patrons desires.

In off the hot streets of the dimly lighted tiled Spanish Village is something to look forward to with no small amount of pleasant anticipation. While during the winter months the Moorish room took its toll of popularity with its sand-duned desert and palm trees—the Spanish Village and the Myan room will serve their purposes during the summer.

The playing fountain in the center of the village, the tiny casas that line the sides of the main street—the old well in the corner—all make for a delightful haven from the hot, humid streets of the city. The walls are tiled as well as the floor, both of which make for the coolness that means new life in the middle of the day.

The tables and benches, which have as yet been hidden to patrons of the Madrillon, have been uncovered and will prove a happy surprise to those who appreciate beauty and workmanship of the old world. These tables and benches are hand made of wrought iron being topped by imported hand-designed tiles beautiful in style and color.

This exotic atmosphere will be augmented by the famous Madrillon Band, led by Johnny O'Donnell. A new vogue of dance music lately has sprung into being. These for the most part consist of the old popular melodies that are sad and plaintive in tune. Some of these have had new orchestrations and are now bringing added royalties to their authors.

So far a new program of these old favorites has been in order and has won the popularity it so deserves.

The spring and summer regime of the Restaurant Madrillon is one well worth seeing and enjoying.

HOPPER COMIC OPERA HERE THIS MONTH

The recent announcement that DeWolfe Hopper would return to Washington this spring with his comic opera company for a series of revivals of popular favorites has caused a fever of anticipation among the many theatergoers who were charmed with a similar series he presented here in the summer of 1924.

Opening at Poli's Monday evening, May 21, Mr. Hopper will inaugurate his season with the presentation of the Gilbert and Sullivan masterpiece, "The Mikado," in which he has his favorite role that of Ko-Ko the Lord High Executioner.

"The Chocolate Soldier," one of the most popular musical successes of all time, will be the second attraction of the season, to be followed by "Pinafore," "Robin Hood," "The Prince of Pilsen" and "The Merry Widow."

It is stated that Mr. Hopper has engaged a company of artists that is in every way as notable as that which met with such popular favor when he was last here. The prima donna is Lillian Glaser, who has reached considerable prominence in the East and has for several years been a popular favorite in musical productions in California. Ethel Clarke, who was a member of the company here during its former visit, will be seen in the soubrette roles. Another member of the former cast who will return is Herbert Waterous, famous basso of the Bostonians and of the Metropolitan Opera Company. An augmented orchestra has been engaged to interpret the tuneful melodies of the popular operas.

When he last presented "The Mikado" in Washington, Mr. Hopper gave this favorite of light operas a most successful revival. Supported by a company of musical ability he gave the piece a sparkle and verve seldom found away from Broadway.

For the benefit of those desiring to subscribe for seats for each opera, the management of Poli's has opened a subscription list. Those wishing to do so may make reservations of desired seats for the entire engagement, thus having the same seats for each opera.

With Mrs. Pat.

Like George Arliss, Edgar B. Kent, who appears in "Escape" in the Belasco Theater, made his first appearance in America with Mrs Patrick Campbell. This, however, was later when Kent acted some of the roles Arliss had played with Mrs Campbell in 1901

MACKIN CLUB IN REPEATER

The Mackin Club Players, having added another triumph to their list by their presentation of Barry Connor's three-act comedy, "The Patsy," are called back to the stage. The play will be repeated Wednesday night.

Set on the attractive stage of St Paul's Auditorium, V and Fifteenth streets, "The Patsy" registered well. Miss Hazel Conaghan made a very dainty and appealing Patsy. Miss Grace Sprucebank gave a very excellent presentation of the elder sister, Grace Harrington. Miss Bessie Mills superbly carried off the part of the social climber, Mrs. Harrington, and Miss Edith Patterson acted the part of the sophisticated Sadie Buchanan exceedingly well.

Edward Dillon played a very fine Tony Anderson; Luke Fegan did some excellent work with the part of Mr. Harrington; Billy Caldwell, the accepted sweetheart of Grace Harrington, was finely played by John E. Phelan. Charles Knott, as the jovial Francis Patrick O'Flaherty, supplied a few hearty laughs.

The play is presented for the benefit of the Parish School.

AMERICAN U. STUDENTS IN SHAKESPEARE

The selected cast of students of American University's Dramatic Club is busy in rehearsals for "Twelfth Night," the Shakespearean comedy to be produced next Friday night at the auditorium of the campus.

Under direction of Will Hutchins, professor of art, who has wide experience himself on the professional stage, ararngements have been substantially completed, with exception of finishing touches, and possibly a trip to some nearby Maryland city for preliminary presentation.

Orsino, Duke of Illyria, is played by Roland Parrish; Sir Toby Belch, by Roland Rice; Malvolio, by J. Courtney Hayward, while the feminine leads are taken by Miss Lucille Sparks as Olivia and Laura Barrett as Viola.

Other members of the cast include: Milton Crist, as Sebastian; Samuel Billborough, as Antonio; Harold McClay, as a sea captain; Orrel Belle Claflin and Irene Dezendorf, gentlemen attending Orsino; George Sixbey, Sir Andrew Aguecheek; clowns, David Morgan and William Warner; priest, James Johnson; officer, Louis Young; Maria, attending Olivia, played by Sara Martz; gentlemen attending the duke, Florence Leighty, Elizabeth Joyce, Geraldine Westwood, Roberta Brown, Delsie Appel; ladies attending Olivia, Betty Jacoby, Esther McVay, Laura Everett, Rosalie Dimette, Helen Tucker, Helen Hope; sailors, Marion Cross, Hugh Speer, Edgar Manherz; officers, Clarence Knapp, A. E. Brooks.

Assisting Prof. Hutchins in presenting the play is the following staff: Stage manager, Willis Delaplain; master of properties, Louis Young; mistress of wardrobe, Kathryn Heath; electrician, Edgar Manherz; prompter, Florence Fellows; chief musician, Mary Chadwick; makeup, Helen Hope.

LE PARADIS ROOF OPENS THIS MONTH

The Le Paradis roof is just like a Roman candle these days—all set to go off in a regular flare of brilliance, thus making a Roman holiday that will not be marked by the presence of any dictatorial Mussolini.

Present plans call for the opening of the roof shortly after the middle of May. This triple-gala occasion will be high lighted by all manner of delightful features. Director Harry Albert, of the Le Paradis Band; Manager Robert Kehl and Amusement Manager Max Lowe have all put their heads together in the concoction of a program that will appropriately mark another birthday for Washington's favorite roof resort.

The new costume of the roof is all duly completed and features not only a complete redecoration, but the addition of large quantities of new modernistic furnishings and the installation of charming garden effects in the lavish use of flowering plants and vines with an effective background of evergreens.

In the meantime, the Le Paradis downstairs unit is going on at a great rate in preparation for winding up its season on a high note. The special high light of the week is "Theatrical Night" on Thursday, when leading stage folks are the guests of honor. The nationally known Le Paradis Band is dispensing its most palpitant dance music under the able direction of Harry Albert.

The Club Chantecler is more popular than ever with society people as its season draws to a close. Bert Bernath is doing the honors as special entertainer in a very individual sort of way. He specializes in the singing of favored Broadway in Italian, French and Spanish, making his own translations.

CHESAPEAKE BEACH GETS DRESSED UP

The over-the-water dancing pavilion at Chesapeake Beach will see a new group of musicians during the coming season, which opens Saturday, May 26. They are known as the Mi-Jo Ramblers under leadership of Raymond Kibbey.

Kibbey, an accomplished banjo player, known to all the younger dancing set as just plain "Ray," has had varied experience with Myer Davis, Bernstein, and other local orchestras. He is a partner of Joe Bonbrest, regularly featured banjo player at the Earle Theater.

Burt Gibson, who played all winter at the Club St. Marks and who also has performed for Bernstein at the Villa Roma, and at the Better 'Ole, will bang the drums. Charlie Tucker, well known to Better 'Ole patrons, will toot the first saxophone. Fred Thompson, who has played at the Mayflower for three years, will wrestle with the second "sax." Mat. Pero, recently with the Villa Roma Band at Hampton, Va., will tickle the piano.

Ray and Burt have good voices and will burst forth into song whenever the spirit moves them. Burt is the chief entertainer of the crew and will put in a lot of monkey stuff.

The lads expect to appear in black and white striped blazers that promise to be a knockout.

CELEBRATED COMEDY BY HIGH SCHOOL

"Captain Applejack," by Walter Hackett, has been chosen by The Masks, a dramatic club composed of Central High School alumni, and will be presented in the auditorium of the school on May 24.

The performance is for the purpose of aiding the fund for the medal in memory of Elizabeth R. Walton, dramatic coach of Central, which is awarded annually to the student who shows most improvement in first year dramatic work.

The cast is headed by Yvonne Levy, who has just returned from professional stage work under David Belasco, where she appeared in "The Dove." Robert Miller, who plays Capt. Applejack, will be remembered for his splendid work in The Masks production of last year "Green Stockings." Others in the cast include Dorothea Lewis, Betty Clark, Janet Coon, William Russell, Robert Praetorious, Frederic Haskin, jr., Harry Clayton and J. T. Heare.

Dorothea Lewis, Robert Miller and Frederic Haskin, jr., starred in "The Valient," which won the one-act play tournament this year.

Miss Sibyl Baker, head of Community Center, in Washington, will direct the production again this year.

Flying and Acting.

Stanley Ridges, leading man of the National Players, envisioned a happy answer to his problem of acquiring enough "flying hours" at Bolling Field to have his British air pilot's license transferred to the American registry. Director Brooke's fetish for morning and afternoon rehearsals, however, has credited Mr. Ridges with but a paltry half hour aloft and he's been here for three weeks.

A Favorite Here.

Herbert Waterous, perhaps best known as the basso with the famous Bostonians, but who was also a basso for many years with the Metropolitan Opera Company, will appear with DeWolfe Hopper in the series of light opera revivals to begin at Poli's May 21. Mr. Waterous was one of the most popular members of the cast in the former series of Hopper revivals given here four years ago.

TWO STAR BANDS AT THE LAKE

Dancing to the music of two star Meyer Davis orchestras will be the featured attraction throughout the summer at beautiful Chevy Chase Lake, which opened for the season several days ago.

Syncopation of the spiffiest, planned especially to appeal to the younger class of dance enthusiasts, will be supplied by the famous Swanee Syncopators and the Davis lake band, led by Ben Levine. The syncopators are stationed on the lower pavilion, while the Levine-directed orchestra will hold forth on the upper pavilion on top of the hill.

The Swanee Syncopators have been augmented with several additional musicians for the summer months. The make-up of this really big orchestra suggests a brass band with its combination of trombone and trumpet effects with the indispensable saxaphones and banjo of modern jazz. Director Al Kamons will continue in charge throughout the summer.

The snappy orchestra on the upper pavilion will present sequences of high powered novelties in addition to its scheduled dance music programs. Leader Levine combines an almost uncanny sense of rhythm with the gift of comedy, and his vaudeville specialties presented between dances are of the "knock-'em-dead" variety.

Manager J. W. Wood is mapping out a series of novelty entertainment features for the lake which will be staged within the next few weeks. This special entertainment will include not only the best of Washington's performers but also some of the novelties booked for Meyer Davis' huge Willow Grove Park in Philadelphia.

Likes to Play "Ko-Ko."

DeWolfe Hopper, who brings his comic opera company to Poli's May 21 for a series of popular revivals, has his favorite role in "The Mikado," the first piece to be presented. As "Ko-Ko" the Lord High Executioner, he reaches the heights of his remarkable histrionic ability.

STAGE FOLK ARE "WARY"

"There is no question but that stage people are superstitious," says Alfred White, who appears as Solomon Levy in Anne Nichols' great success, "Abie's Irish Rose," now playing at Poli's Theater. "I suppose the nature of the business makes them so, the element of chance of success and failure entering into the profession to such an extent.

"Many times such superstitions are amusing. Some exceptionally good actors and actresses are looked upon as Jonahs by theatrical managers. Sometimes there is no foundation for the reputation they possess, but it is generally due to the fact that they have been connected with failures. Once an actor or actress becomes tainted with the hoodoo or Jonah superstition, it invariably becomes impossible for the player to obtain an engagement.

"Some superstations are hard to trace, however. When a new show opens—probably out of town—people with passes will always be found waiting to get in the moment the doors are opened. This is one thing that is not tolerated in the amusement world. Were such a thing to happen, the piece would be foredoomed to financial failure.

"Cats about a theater are good luck. If a producer should meet a black cat hanging around the stage door on opening night, he need have no fear as to the outcome of his new play. This, however, did not happen when Abie's Irish Rose was presented in New York some six years ago. Almost every theater harbors a pet cat, and it is always a matter of superstition with stage folks not to interfere with them in any way, even when they walk on the stage during a performance."

GALSWORTHY PLAY HERE AT BELASCO

The presentation of a play by John Galsworthy always is an event in the theater, for Galsworthy shares with Bernard Shaw the front rank of English dramatists. Consequently, Winthrop Ames' production of Galsworthy's latest play, "Escape," following its seasons in London and in New York is attracting widespread attention. With Leslie Howard in the leading role, "Escape" will be seen in the Belasco Theater the week of Monday, May 14. No one will be seated during the prologue.

Matt Denant is the central figure in "Escape." A captain in the late war, he comes to the defense of the Girl About Town, who is arrested in Hyde Park, London. Denant argues with the officer. A fight ensues, during which the policeman is knocked down. In falling, he strikes his head against the park railing and is killed. For this accidental murder, Denant is sent to prison for five years. Chafing under his misfortunes, he determines to escape. This he does on a foggy night, but is traced, hounded and finally driven to shelter in a village church. During his flight he meets all kinds and classes of people, and Galsworthy, in his subtle manner, brings out the human relationship that sympathizes with or opposes any one who has fought the law. It is an absorbing, exciting drama.

There are ten scenes in "Escape," which requires an elaborate stage production. Winthrop Ames has provided this. Playgoers will recall his many notable productions, the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, Galsworthy's "Old English," in which George Arliss starred for three years, and "The Merchant of Venice," in which George Arliss now is appearing. Galsworthy has had 18 of his 25 plays produced in America. "Strife," "Justice," "Loyalties" and "The Skin Game" are among the most successful of these.

Leslie Howard is seen in the leading role of "Escape." This young actor has acted many characters in light comedy, such as "The Green Hat," with Katherine Cornell, "Her Cardboard Lover" with Jeanne Eagels and his own farce, "Murray Hill," but "Escape" definitely places him among the finest serious actors in the English-speaking theater. Frieda Inescort, last year in the all-star revival of "Trelawny of 'The Wells'" is leading woman.

The cast includes these players who impressed New York: Lawrence Hanray, Austin Trevor, Alan Trotter, Edgar B. Kent, St. Clair Bayfield, F. Cecil Butler, Henrietta Goodwin, Ruth Vivian, Lois Heatherley, Viva Tattersall, Cyrene Smith and Geraldine Kay.

Yiddish Dramatic Recital.

Baruch Lumet, featured member of Maurice Schwartz's Yiddish Art Theater Players of New York City, will give a Yiddish Dramatic Recital at the Jewish Community Center this evening at 8:15 o'clock.

Mr. Lumet is an artist of the highest rank. He is the first one to create a new phase in Jewish dramatic work. In his program on Sunday evening he will give recitations and dramatic sketches from the works of I. Peretz, Sholom Aleichim and Anthony Chekov, featuring "The Mashoogener Batlan," "The Golden Chain," and "The Song of Songs."

NEW THRILLS GALORE AT GLEN ECHO

Glen Echo Park was officially opened for the season yesterday at 1 p. m. The great crowd found much to whet its appetite for fun. The new airplane swing did a "land office business." This is one of the most spectacular amusement devices ever brought to Washington; in fact, there are few in the country. This structure, 82 feet in height, accommodates six planes, and each plane holds six persons. From opening time until closing, the droning of the motors could be heard, as passengers by the hundreds enjoyed this new thrill.

Another amusing device, making a first appearance this year, is the "Ringling Sisters' Cat Circus." This feature appealed to the small boy especially, who found opportunity to take a pot-shot at tabby as she prowled over the back fence. Despite the popularity of the aero swing as a thriller, it was noticed that the dip, the coaster and the derby racer, all thrillers, were well patronized. These devices, by the way, have undergone great improvement since last year.

In the ballroom, David McWilliams made his bow to the public, and the numbers rendered by his orchestra received a great reception; the dancers giving the impression that all cares, at least for the time being, were entirely forgotten. Many familiar faces were seen in Mr. McWilliams' orchestra, men who have become very popular with Glen Echo patrons. There were also a few newcomers, men who have been selected because of some outstanding talent—some unusual ability with an instrument that gave the dancers added pleasure.

All in all the opening of Glen Echo Park yesterday was something to be remembered. Everything from the street car service to the smallest detail of arrangement gave the impression of efficiency for which the park is noted.

L. B. Schloss, managing director of Glen Echo Park, is also a director of the National Association of Amusement Parks. These parks must operate on the most ethical basis at all times, and it is interesting to note the creed of Glen Echo:

1. Provide clean, safe, wholesome outdoor recreation.

2. Fill the hearts of children with joy while spending their hours of play in the sunshine and fresh air.

3. Treat patrons as guests, and by courteous manner make of them friends who will look upon this amusement center with pride and

4. Send all home feeling that the time spent in outdoor enjoyment was well spent.

Widely Circulated.

"Merton of the Movies," current for the week at the National, has been one of the most widely circulated pieces of fiction in modern writing. Written originally by Harry Leon Wilson as a serial for the Saturday Evening Post, it was then published in book form, then dramatized for the stage, then published as a play and finally was adapted for the films with Glenn Hunter in his original role.

Front and Back Stage News and Views

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL.

IN writing of "Him" last week I must have undergone a terrific brain-storm, for I completely neglected to mention the name of Erin O'Brien-Moore, a woman who is unable to make the disconnected sentences of this strangest of ultramodern plays seem almost real. She is extraordinarily lovely to look at and has a voice which has a way of asking you to weep on account of the pathos in it. At moments "Him," which usually stayed pretty close to the ground, came near soaring to the heights of real poetry when Erin O'Brien-Moore spoke.

* * * *

Owing very largely to the perfection of David Belasco's production, "The Bachelor Father," a comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter, is guaranteed to charm. Done with a heavy hand, it would more often than not go over the border into vulgarity, but with June Walker, C. Aubrey Smith and Geoffrey Kerr responsible for the leads and Mr. Belasco himself for the direction, while you are frequently surprised to say the least, accept it all in the manner of fun.

I remember earlier in the season objecting to the comedy, "The Command to Love," for the brazen way in which various suggestions of a questionable nature were flung at you and mentioned, if I remember rightly, and difficulties that Americans seem to have in making palatable that dish so delicately garnished by Parisians known broadly as "French farce." "The Bachelor Father," while purely Anglo-American, has just the right amount of salt and pepper, to say nothing of the dash of garlic, to make it a delightful recipe for minds a little tired of winter.

The play itself has charm and originality. The first scene is the living room in Rooksfold House, Sir Basil Winterton's home in Surrey, England. Sir Basil, who has come to the years of discretion, is checking up his experience of his youth and early manhood. He was a veritable Don Juan with an eye for change and the pictures that he recalls of the various women who in pageant file served as his mistresses are remarkable for their variety. While he now feels it unwise to continue with his amours he has by no means got to the place of losing interest in experiences. So he summons to his side or John Ashley, a young lawyer of his acquaintance. He bids this Ashley to carry out his instructions, be the expenses involved ever so heavy, which are that his three children, born under various auspices, "his brood," as he would say, be gathered together from the far corners of the earth and brought at one time to his stately manor in Surrey.

One is a son, Jeffrey, who resides with his mother in a little house in Manchester; and to a corner of a room in this house the scene changes. The mother is by the window having her afternoon tea, a pretty woman with the sunlight falling gracefully across her shoulders; her son is a young musician. They have talked freely together about his parentage and while they have received a yearly allowance from Sir Basil neither of them has made any efforts to encroach upon him further. Well, the lawyer arrives; the proposition is put forth and accepted. In about three weeks Jeffrey will go to his father's house.

The next scene is a balcony of Bianca Credaro's house in the most beautifully romantic city in the world, Florence. It is night—Italy's night. On the street below one hears the voices of singers, people of the street singing for Bianca Credaro, for Bianca Credaro's praise. For she was a one-time famous prima donna and the Italian people have not wholly forgotten, and since she is still beautiful, they nightly serenade her. She sits in her balcony, beautiful, dark, Italian, and she thanks them with the magnanimity of a woman used to tribute. She is dreaming tonight, I think. Then, within the doors of the balcony come the notes of a young soprano and an aria of Puccini floats through them and out into the night air—a fresh, clear voice.

Signora Bianca is not satisfied with the phrasing of a certain line of this "Butterfly," and she interrupts the song, calling "Maria," a little sharply. The doors to the balcony open and a young girl, the daughter of our opera singer, appears. There is a nice scene where the mother instructs the daughter and finally tells her that she does not sing it her way because she has not found love. Love for a man, for an Englishman, gave her the power and the feeling which made her great, and the older woman departs into the house leaving the girl upon the balcony wanting for herself the love of a man, an Englishman.

It is a critical moment for the lawyer, Ashley, to arrive, and her face lights up when he promises her that, with her mother's consent, she will be taken to England, where, so the story runs, there are many Englishmen.

Again the scene changes and we are before the front door and steps of Tony Flagg's lodging house, New York. Now, Tony's mother was the one woman of all that Sir Basil intimately knew who would receive no sustenance from the man who gave her her daughter. Consequently she was unable to live as grandly as the others; consequently Tony resembles the shop-girls who are her companions. But we take to Tony immediately—is it because of the aristocratic blood of her father, or because her mother was a fine, brave woman, or merely because Mr. Belasco was fortunate enough to get June Walker to play the part? Tony's ambition is to become an airplane pilot, and when Ashley arrives to lay a similar proposition before her she accepts without question because her mother is now dead, her obligations are none and she is promised an airplane of her own.

Well, the day arrives when the "brood" is brought for inspection to the bachelor father. But the children are not the only ones inspected, for they have been left alone a moment and in that moment Tony has shown her ability to lead and has made the others promise that if any of them decide that they like not their father the three will quit Rooksfold House as of one man. So the unsuspecting father is up on inspection also.

He meets his children and at first there are innumerable clashes. Unwittingly he insults Tony's mother and the three retire to the garden to put their heads together to decide whether to "let it go" or not. They decide to give him a two weeks' trial and the man who finds th tables reversed can do no more than accept to the fate the young ones bring him.

The next act is ten days later and all are friends. It is not hard to see that Tony is Sir Basil's favorite. But jealousy is unbeknown to any and Maria and Geoffrey have found an unusual and rather disquieting championship for each other. All are happy until one day a cable arrives to Maria offering her a part with an important opera company in Italy. She has the artist's temperament in her blood and she must return—at once she must return. This is sad for the bachelor father but he realizes that he has no hold on her and needs must let her go.

Then an even more bothering message arrives—a letter from Geoffrey's mother which contains the surprising information that Sir Basil is actually not the father of her son. In vain storms Sir Basil for he has become fond of the boy whom as he thought inherited his musical talent from himself and he tells him that this need make no difference for he will adopt him anyway. But the boy says "no," that it has made a difference elsewhere; for now Maria, whom he had thought was his half-sister is no relation at all and, sure of the girl's love, he departs with speed to overtake her.

Tony is left. We suspect what Sir Basil does not, that Tony and the Lawyer Ashley love one another. But that is not the immediate chance of depriving Sir Basil of his only remaining child. Nearby on this very afternoon there is to be an exhibition of stunts by air pilots from all over the world. Tony has become a pilot and she has decided to compete. Sir Basil forbids her to go, tells her of the dangers she is undergoing. But Tony knows not of dangers, and after a scene in which she declares that Sir Basil has no hold over her whatsoever, that he has no right to try to hold her, she departs.

Ashley was not there when Tony left for the aeroplane competition, and when he comes in he hears that Tony is already in the air. The two men hang upon the telephone waiting for news as to the outcome. She is in the air, they hear, and doing marvelous feats.

But bad news follows immdiately. Tony's aeroplane has collided with another and both have crshed. Tony is dead. A telegram is brought in to Sir Basil. It was sent by Tony just before she took off, a sweet telegram, saying that she loved him and that he should have no fear—now Tony is dead.

But remember, my friends, this is a play made for minds that are a little tired of winter, and, though the ladies will take out their handkerchiefs, even they know that Tony will return safe and sound. And, sure enough, so it happened, for Tony is brought back, "hit on the bean" but none the worse for wear. And the bachelor father and the man who loves her take her in their arms, kiss her and forgive her as the curtain slowly descends.

LEAP YEAR REVELS FOR COMMUNITY

The thirteenth annual musical show of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, combined with the first annual show of the Junior Hadassah, will be presented next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 15 and 16, at the Jewish Community Center.

The joint production, called the "Leap Year Revels," is the most elaborate musical show ever produced at the Center. Bernie Fischgrund is director and Kitty Shapiro and Aaron Rosenthal are coaching the cast of 40 young men and women in the dances.

Emil Jolson, younger brother of the famous Al Jolson, will make his initial stage appearance in this production. He is possessed of a fine tenor voice, which has been heard several times over the radio.

Others who will have important parts in the Revels are the comedy team of Wolf and Garner, who have appeared on the professional stage; Bella Wolf, Frances Plotnick, Elaine Dessoff, Nettie Sober, Ann Rovner, Sidney Kaltz, Eleanore Patlen and Maurice Hayman.

Irene Aaron, Elaine Behrend and Meyer Stolar painted scenery for the Revels. These young people also created the sets for "The Dybbuk," "Hello Summer Revue" and "Fete Parisienne," previous theatrical productions at the Center.

BARUCH LUMET, who will give a Yiddish dramatic recital this evening at the Jewish Community Center.

ROSA LOW, young American lyric soprano, singing at the Washington Auditorium May 20, in concert which is being given by the International Exchange Bank.

A Shakespearean.

Austin Trevor, appearing in Galsworthy's "Escape" in the Belasco Theater, has played many Shakespearean roles. His debut was made with Forbes-Robertson in "Hamlet" and then he acted with the Stratford-on-Avon company and at "Old Vic" in London, where Shakespeare is played at less than motion picture prices.

BIG CHANGE IN BUSINESS OF THEATER

Variety, regarded by show folk as the official gazette of their interesting profession, sounded summer's official harbinger in last week's issue by detailing the opening of more than a dozen new stock companies the week previously.

The substantial revival of public interest in repertoire companies the last five years is inciting no end of comment in show circles. The principal reason, of course, is the inactivity of the road season during the summer, and there will always be the multitudes who can not thrive on a steady diet of movies. What then? Stock is the answer, and stock that differs from its predecessor of a dozen years ago as a Ziegfeld production differs from a burlesque circuit opus.

Gone are the days of the flat, garishly painted sets, with canvas doors opening, sometimes and other times not, onto a vista of the theater's rear brick wall. Gone are the days when stock had a cheap reputation and people expected cheap productions.

With us now is the really majestic era of stock, when plays are produced with lavish and painstaking hands, when settings are duplicated to the last item with the originals, when people who frequent the best Broadway casts in the winter are to be found scattered throughout the country in summer stock. The improvidence of the old-time actor, who would work a brief winter season and idle the summer away, is no longer evident. People of such repute as Lenore Ulric, Glenn Hunter, Chrystal Herne, Mrs. Leslie Carter and Pauline Lord seldom waste a summer, and stocks is the thing that keeps their exchequers alive and active.

Ten years ago a stock producer would have been called foolish if he spent on scenery what the National management spent for the opening piece, "The Baby Cyclone." Two of the three sets were massive and actual architectural gems.

"Small takings but consistent takings are what we ask in return for the quality of the productions we are giving," explains S. E. Cochran, business manager of the National troupe.

LILLIAN GLASER, prima donna in the DeWolfe Hopper Comic Opera Company, opening May 21 at Poli's in a series of light opera revivals.

Film Rights Costly.

Paramount paid $250,000 for the film rights to "Merton of the Movies," which the National Players will offer for the new week. Glenn Hunter played his original stage role in the film version opposite Viola Dana, who was "The Montagu Girl," benefactress of the credulous Merton Gill.

A. NICHOLS HAS THEORY FOR SUCCESS

"Often I have been asked for the great secret of successful playwriting," says Anne Nichols, the author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," the original New York company of which opens a final Washington engagement of one week at Poli's Theater on Sunday night, with matinees on Thursday and Saturday. "My reply is invariably 'humanity.' That is the keynote.

"Nothing is so fatal to a play's success as lack of conviction. In order to be convincing it must be real. Straining after artificialities, trying to achieve 'something different,' frequently defeats its own object. There may be a degree of superficial cleverness which exercises a temporary fascination. It won't last.

"Please do not imagine because I have been fortunate enough to write a successful play I am prone to dogmatize. In terming humanity the only sure basis of success, I am simply giving my own experience. Humanity is the foundation of 'Abie's Irish Rose.' All of the characters in the play are drawn from life. The actual persons portrayed are living in America today. They frequently come to the theater to see themselves in stage guise, and I am glad to know they find nothing offensive therein—just good entertainment.

"The central characters, 'Abie' and 'Rose,' were the main figures in a real life romance. Abie was a corporal with the American Army in France. While over there he met Rose, who went across like Elsie Janis and many other professionals to entertain the troops. Rose was a very fine singer and but for her war-time activities would at the time have been making great progress on the professional stage. Fate, however, ordained otherwise. They met over there, this handsome Jewish boy and the beautiful Irish singer. Cupid did the rest. They are now happily married and Abie often takes his Rose to see 'Abie's Irish Rose.'"

RAFAELO DIAZ, tenor Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be heard in concert May 20, at the Washington Auditorium, under the auspices of the International Exchange Bank.

Plays Three Roles.

Lawrence Hanray, who acts three distinct roles in John Galsworthy's "Escape" at the Belasco, was director of the Liverpool Repertory Theater in England, succeeding Basil Deane to this position. As he staged several Galsworthy plays there, he came to know the famous author well and was sent by him to America to appear in "Escape."

RUTH VIVIAN PLAYED AS CHILD HERE

Ruth Vivian, who appears with Leslie Howard in Winthrow Ames' production of John Galsworthy's "Escape" in the Shubert-Belasco Theater the week of Monday, May 14, has had quite a career in Washington, and always under the eye of whatever President might be resident in the White House at the moment.

As a child, Miss Vivian made her stage debut in England, as a frog in a pantomime, popping up from under a toadstool. She remembers all that very well indeed and also the fact that once she was Little Willie to some weeping mother in "East Lynne." She can not ever forget Little Willie, because her stage mother cried so well and so fluently that Ruth's beautiful golden curls always came out of the scene anything but what they were when she began it.

Ben Greet discovered her and in his company in England and in America she played 21 roles in Shakespeare and a fairly impressive list of characters in the Sheridan and Goldsmith comedies and other standard plays.

Miss Vivian's first appearance before a President of the United States was when she acted in the White House for President Roosevelt in "The Wonder Tales." President Taft was her next presidential spectator, for he went to see every play acted by the Ben Greet Stock company in the Belasco Theater, with which she appeared in "A Pair of Spectacles," "The School for Scandal," "A Professor's Love Story," "The Tempest," "As You Like It," "The Palace of Truth" and "Caste," which, being more or less classical, were mingled with an equal number of plays of the current stage.

President Wilson attended the first Washington performance of Charles Hopkins' production of a dramatization of R. L. Stevenson's "Treasure Island," in which Miss Vivian was Jim.

As yet, the actress has not appeared before President Coolidge.

Collaborators.

The authors of such witty pieces as "Dulcy," "To the Ladies" and "Beggar on Horseback" are the same who collaborated on the stage version of "Merton of the Movies." They are Marc Connelly and George Kaufman, the latter drama editor of the New York Times.

Coming Attractions

The open secret of George Kelly's success as a playwright lies in his amiable talent for harpooning certain stock types of American folk. In "The Torchbearers" he satirized the Little Theater movement with especial stress on the feminine "busybody" who trample on art for the sake of being identified with "a movement." In "The Showoff" he took the mouthy individual who is long on phrase making and short on action. In "Craig's Wife," which the National Players will present for the week beginning May 21, he has taken that irritating type of housewife whose very immaculateness is a form of insanity not unknown to many a husband.

Mrs. Craig is a woman who believes that security, rather than love, is the true reason for her marriage. Her home is her security and she proceeds, roughshod, to make it so. The servants are made to use the back stairs to save the front. Her husband is not permitted to smoke in the parlor. She shuns visitors, for "the neighbors are not going to make a thoroughfare of my house!" Her fingers are forever groping for the fugitive speck of dust. She is forever straightening, readjusting, correcting, and the pleasure of a quiet evening at home with the man she married is unknown to her. A not pretty picture, but one which Mr. Kelly's sly humor has softened to the farcical point.

Actress, Sea Flier, Foolish, Says Father

Berlin, May 12 (A.P.).—Lily Dillenz, Viennese actress, who is planning to fly from Germany to America, is described by her painter father, Hollitzer, in a telephone call from Vienna to a friend here as "such a foolish girl."

"There are enough ships that go to America, so why use an airplane?" he asked.

High Royalties.

The National Players will likely do a crowded business this new week in "Merton of the Movies," but the profits will diminish. This is due to the high royalty for the play, to an increased cast of 16 people, to the requirement of six different sets and to the need of a great many technical properties.

IN THE REALM OF MUSIC

By ELISABETH E. POE.

WASHINGTON might well profit by the experience of St. Louis, which has found municipal opera not only satisfactory from a musical point of view but from the financial side as well. The new season of the people's opera is now being announced there, and it is an enterprise in which the entire city participates. On the other hand, the prices are not held prohibitive of even the most modest purses, and the young people of that city have the advantage of an education in opera each summer at little individual cost.

The big point to be noted in the St. Louis situation is that it is truly a civic enterprise, and not left in the hands of the few. The committees in charge are representative of the life of the city. Without such wholehearted support here it is doubtful that local opera companies can ever more than merely struggle along, without gaining a real foothold. The question is, after all, "Does this city want Made in Washington opera?" If so, is it willing to pay for it?

Meantime the material out of which grand opera should be fashioned, young singers and musicians, is being turned out of our local studios and schools of music. Taken altogether, the instructors here are careful and thorough in their work with our musical young people and their efforts should be commended and assisted in every way possible.

At its May meeting, at Calvary Baptist Church, on Monday evening, the American Guild of Organists, District of Columbia Chapter, elected: Dean, Rolla G. G. Onyun; subdean, J. Edgar Robinson; secretary, Mrs. Mabel R. Frost; treasurer, Mrs. George E. Warfield; registrar, Mrs. John M. Sylvester; executive committee, Lewis C. Atwater, Otto T. Simon and George H. Wells; auditors, Miss Edith B. Athey and Miss Mary M. Wilkins, A. A. G. O.

There were about 50 members present.

Thomas Moss, organist and director of music at Calvary Church, played a short organ recital on the new Moller organ recently installed. The B Minor Suite of Ernest Douglas was the principal number on his program, following which the members inspected the organ console.

Mme. Olga Samaroff, noted pianist and writer on musical subjects, who was recently elected third vice president of the National League of American Pen Women at the biennial convention of the organization at the Willard Hotel, in this city, in April, has accepted as director of the "music department" of the league.

The twilight music hour at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets, today at 4:30 will be held in the fourth floor assembly room. The program will be given by Mrs. Mary Tighe, pianist; Olive V Roland, violinist; Mrs. S. B. Daugherty, sprano; Leona K. Bixler, soprano, and Bernice Wagner, accompanist. Miss Alma Day will be the hostess and will be assisted by Miss M. O. Buckingham, of the staff.

The officers of the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs, will be elected Wednesday, at 7:30 p. m., in the studio of Beatrice S. Goodwin, 1406 H street northwest.

Two clubs have federated, the Lovette Choral Club, Amy Whitford Lovette, director, and the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Choir, Herbert F. Aldridge, director.

The Chaminade Glee Club, Esther Links, director, and Gertrude Walter, accompanist, assisted by J. E. S. Kinsella, bass; Sam Wardell, violinist, and Karl Holer, composer-accompanist, presented a concert in Manassas, Va., last week.

Tuesday evening the club, assisted by Theresa Hubner, contralto, will sing at Florence Crittendon Home. The girls at the home are preparing a group of songs to sing for the club.

On Friday evening, May 25, the club, assisted by Helen Belt, violinist, and Karl Holer, accompanist, will give a concert at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Seldom has a musical production in Washington aroused so much interest as the forthcoming production of Gounod's best-known oratorio, "The Redemption," to be given at the Auditorium on Monday night, May 28, by the National Capital Oratorio Association.

Albert W. Harned, director, has assembled a highly trained chorus of 250 voices, all Washington singers, and an orchestra of 65 pieces. Rehearsals are being held twice a week, and the production bids fair to be an outstanding musical event in the Capital.

In the Washington production, the Rev. George F. Dudley, barytone, will sing the part of Jesus; Jessie Masters, contralto, that of Mary; Eugene Dahl, tenor, and John Marvel, bass, the two narrators. Florence Sindell has been selected as the first soprano, Edythe Marmion Brossius, harpist, and Malton Joyce, organist.

Edith B. Athey will give the organ recital of the American Guild of Organists, District of Columbia Chapter, tomorrow, at 8:15 p. m. at the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Athey will be assisted by members from the Hamline Church Quartet, John H. Marville, bass, directing. This recital is open to the public. A collection will be taken.

A concert will be given by the A. Cappella Chorus of the First Congregational Choir, under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl, at the First Congregational Church, on Tuesday, at 8:20 p. m.

The board of directors of the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind announce the annual spring benefit for the institute at the Willard tomorrow night. The concert will be given by Miss C. L. Grady, Miss S. I. Duffy and J. F. Germuiller, pianists; F. S. Hufty, violinist, and P. W. Swann, reader, who are sightless. The guest artists will be Miss Amy Wilcox, soprano, and Fritz Mueller, violoncellist.

Herman Fakler, barytone, will sing "In My Father's House Are Many Mansions" (MacDermid) this morning at 9:45 for the National Presbyterian Sunday School, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, at Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. Fakler will go to Chicago this week, where he will sing for the annual dinner held in connection with the convention of the Millers National Federation at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

On Tuesday morning Miss Sade Styron will give her lecture recital, "From Harpsichord Days," before a group of major music students and other musical groups in the music room at the Eastern High School.

She will play selections of Byrd, Bull, Daquin, Couperin, Ramean, Handel and Mozart.

Dr. H. R. Roberts, dean of the voice department of the Washington College of Music, will present Joseph Barbecot, barytone, in his teachers' diploma recital in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. Wednesday evening, assisted by Mrs. Tamara Dmitrieff, pianist, a graduate under Mr. Weldon Carter and member of the teaching staff of the college. The program will be: "Caro mio ben" (G. Giordani), "A Lucette" (G. Pierne), "Hear Me! Ye Winds and Waves!" (Handel), prelude (Bach), Sonata, op. 31, No. 2, first movement (Beethoven); "Berceuse" (from "Chansons douces") (Rhene-Baton), "Arioso" (from "Benvenuto") (Eugene Diaz), Etude, op. 25, No. 2 (Chopin), Valse, B flat major (Chopin), "The Lark" (Balakirew), "Friend o' Mine" (W. Sanderson), "Le the" (Charles Koechlin), serenade (Toselli), recompense (Frank H. Grey); "A Tol" (Bemberg), Cathrine Benson, accompanist.

The first outdoor concert by the United States Navy Band, Lieut. Charles Benter, director, will be played at Chevy Chase Circle Tuesday night. The public is also invited to the concerts at the Navy Yard each Wednesday and Saturday night. The Saturday night concerts are broadcast over WRC and chain of stations.

The program of the second annual concert of Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar and Ukulele Clubs, under the direction of Sophocles T. Papas, assisted by Edna Moreland and Elvina Neal Rowe, sopranos, will be given in the Raleigh ballroom on Tuesday. The program will be as follows:

Fieldston March (Kitchener), "La Spagnola" (Di Chiara), Columbia Mandolin and Guitar Club; guitar solos, Sonatina Op. 71, No. 3 (Giuliani), andantino sostenuto scherzo con moto, Mr. Sophocles T. Papas; soprano solos, "Good Morning, Brother Sunshine" (Lehmann), "There Are Fairies at the Bottom of Our Garden" (Lehmann), Miss Edna Moreland, piano accompaniment by Mary Mathews Taylor; Hawaiian medley (Arr. Papas), Columbia Hawaiian Guitar and Ukulele Club; soprano solos, three songs for children (Monica Cambral), (a) "My Ships," (b) "The Baby Bear," (c) "Moon Fairies;" "Old Lotus Blossoms" (Genet), Elvina Neal Rowe, piano accompaniment by Mary Mathews Taylor; Hawaiian Guitar Trio, Swanee Echoes (Arr. Papas), Mrs. Hilda Allen, Miss Margaret Moore, Miss Elia Henning; American Marine march (Morris), Columbia waltz (Papas), "My Blue Heaven" (Arr. Papas), Columbia Banjo Club.

A vesper musicale will be given at the Luther Place Memorial Church today at 4 p. m. The program will be as follows: Prelude, "Ave Maria" (Schubert); choir, "Beneath the Shadow of the Great Protection" (Dickinson); cello, "Lamento" (Gabrial-Mario), Mr. Walton; Psalm 150 (page 186 hymnal), read responsively; tenor solo, "Open to Me the Gates" (Knapp), Dr. C. P. Frailey, guest soloist; choir, "Inflammatus" (from Stabat Uctor) (Rosini); cello, "Berceuse" (Schumann); prayer by Dr. Diffenderfer; duet, "Watchman, What of the Night" (Sargent), Dr. Frailey and Mr. Humphrey; offerings; choir, "How Lovely Are the Messengers" (Mendelssohn); postlude "On the Way to Jerusalem" (from Olivet to Calvary), (Maunder). MOST TIMELY MAY RELEASE

"Golf Widows," a comedy of America's favorite sport, is Columbia's first May release, coming at the very beginning of the season when interest in the game is at its highest. Erle C. Kenton directed the new production with an all-comedy cast headed by Vera Reynolds, Harrison Ford and Sally Rand, and including Vernon Dent, Will Stanton, John Patrick and Kathleen Kay.

Tia Juana's gambling palaces and its famous races, an unusual airplane sequence which presents for the first time the new Ford-Stout twelve-passenger plane, intimate glimpses of Hollywood's show places, and a thrilling race between a plane and an automobile, are some of the highlights of "Golf Widows."

OLD FRIENDS ON SAME LOT

With the selection of Erle C. Kenton as director, and Huntly Gordon and Gaston Glass as the two masculine leads, shooting will start immediately on Columbia's "Name the Woman."

This thrilling mystery drama adapted from the story "Bridge," introduces Anita Stewart as a Columbia star. Neither Mr. Kenton nor Mr. Glass are newcomers to the company's lot. Mr. Kenton, who is under long term contract to Columbia, has already directed "The Sporting Age" and "Golf Widows." Mr. Glass was the leading man in Columbia's "The Wife's Relations."

The Giant at Last Awakens And Begins to Look About

By NELSON B. BELL

IT IS gradually becoming apparent that the first serious casualty to be caused by the continuance of the "presentation" and stage revue policy in the motion picture theaters of our key cities will be in the field of comedy. The one and two reel laughmakers seem to be definitely on the way out.

This is not so much a random guess as the definite conclusion reached after recent serious and lengthy conversations with those in a position to know. Within the fortnight, and I so announced in other columns of this journal, executives of the Christie Comedy Company made it plain that they would make only a sufficient number of short-reel comedies during the ensuing year to meet a demand which must be accurately indicated to them in advance. Mack Sennett has abandoned the studio with which his name and the fame of his world celebrated bathing beauties have been attached since the inception of the cinema as a potent factor in American entertainment, and one by one others of the masters of mirth are dropping by the wayside.

This might have happened had the form of entertainment in the so-called picture houses never been altered, for it has long been patent to all thoughtful observers that the branch of the stupendous business of picture making dedicated to the frivolities has not at all kept pace with the development in the picturization of the more substantial forms of drama.

Comedy, particularly of the shorter dimensions, has limped along as best it could, much after the manner of the earliest specimens of this form of flicker art. The establishment of the elaborated program currently so popular in all of the larger centers of population as a permanent type of entertainment to be regularly expected in our gorgeous temples, mosques, palaces and cathedrals of the motion picture has served merely to seal the doom and hasten the demise of the once so eagerly awaited "funny."

There is no place on the program for it under the present scheme of things. Where the two-reeler formerly was accustomed to hold its place on the printed roster of events we now have the agile adagio dancers or the Sixteen Sprightly Spiller Girls, led by Sal Magundi, the premiere danseuse direct from the Splinter Garden, who executes the tricky tap dance on the tips of her toes, assisted by Baldy Sauers and his Gas House Blues Blowers, Joe Gilch, master of ceremonies—if that is what you think they are!

THE situation is not one over which I find it possible to lash myself into a frenzy of remorse. It has seemed to me for a good many years that the two-reel comedy has been interesting only as an example of how horrible the movies were in their infancy. Not one out of fifty has been amusing to an adult mentality keyed above the mud-pie days of babyhood. My one qualification to that statement will be that I refer to such efforts at laughability as have been made since Harold Lloyd, Buster Keaton and Harry Langdon graduated to feature-length productions.

The spectacle of a grown man wearing a flat derby over his ears, trousers too tight under the arms and violin cases for shoes, engaged in the dreary pastime of spilling gooey dishes down the backs of large ladies in evening gowns, or causing frogs to leap into the soup plate of the dignified professor, thus inundating him in gallons more of whatever substitute for soup the "comedians" have been in the habit of using than any soup plate ever possibly could contain, has never thrown me into such gales of mirth that I have had to leave the theater and seek medical aid.

Neither has the throwing of furniture, most of which breaks upon the heads of the principal figures in the action; nor the falling from high places upon an asphalt pavement where a moment before had been a load of hay; nor the stepping upon an island of safety only to discover it the side of a barrel floating in a cesspool; nor the mistaking of a polecat for a neighborhood pet.

Dull witted as I am, there has never seemed to me to be the basis of sound humor, either, in the denuding of a traffic policeman on a busy downtown intersection, or causing similar disaster to befall bashful and pulchritudinous young women unescorted in large crowds.

There are others of the usual devices of the short-reel comedies which I might enumerate among those which do not throw me into convulsions of merriment, but, after all, it seems a futile and a thankless recitation.

These sorry exhibits, I am reliably informed, are for the most part built upon fixed formulae as invariable as the stars. It would not surprise me to learn that in the Hollywood studios devoted to this sort of thing there are card indexes of comedy plots well thumbed and dog-eared from having been employed so many times in rotation.

There is the girl-and-boy plot. Girl kept away from boy. Boy harassed by all manner of obstacles. Triumphs in end. Clinch.

Also there is the personal discomfiture plot. Man must accomplish given task by given hour. Every move he makes is productive of some one or all of the calamities hereinbefore outlined. At last success. Watch shows one second to go before expiration of allotted time.

And so on, ad lib.

HOWEVER, it is not alone in the sphere of the short comedy that a decided reversal of form may be expected. The ban on comedy will be extended in large measure to the field of the full-length feature, and the comedy teams of which so much has been made during the last several seasons will be few and far between—and so will their pictures—during the next twelve months, and probably indefinitely thereafter.

The reason for this was eloquently expressed by Otto H. Kahn in his address before the delegates to the recent Paramount sales convention in this city—if one more reference to that event may be pardoned—when he said that a grave responsibility rests upon those to whose care the conduct of the motion picture industry has been intrusted, in that the movies no longer are struggling for very existence with scant credit and ominous doubts as to the future. Firmly established as one of the greatest agencies of cultural advancement, amply and substantially financed, Mr. Kahn pointed out, the motion picture now must justify itself esthetically. It must prove itself an art as well as a business; must partake of the dualism of hard sense and idealism that is America.

The producers have caught this view—no doubt had apprehended it before it was concretely expressed in public utterance. And so the tawdrier exudations of the cinema must go by the board.

The urge now is to make the screen expressive of the finer things of life and not a clearing house for the cheapness, vulgarity and suggestiveness that may so easily be mistaken for a source of hilarious enjoyment. This is a reformation that is being fostered from the inside and not being thrust upon the industry from without. It is the most salutary symptom that has manifested itself that a Gargantuan industry is awakening to its own power and worth.

Close scrutiny of the programs proposed by the foremost of our film makers for the year ahead discloses a fine promise of excellent screen entertainment with the lowest proportion of questionable subject matter ever noted by this aged eye. Sensationalism, sex—in the vicious sense—salacity and all of the baser appeals are happily conspicuous by their absence from the published schedules.

IT is only the part of justice on behalf of the exhibitors who supply the cinematographic needs of the National Capital to say that it has fallen within my personal knowledge that every one of them has weeded through the comedy lists to furnish his patrons the most attractive product obtainable. I know that many times comedies have been included in screen bills against the wishes of those responsible for the compilation of those bills, because nothing else was to be had to consume the allotted time on the house schedule of performances.

As a matter of fact, in the past I myself have participated in these quests for satisfactory comedy material to place upon a downtown, first-run screen and have been one of several to view private screenings of as many as ten or a dozen two-reelers in an endeavor to discover one that would suit not only the taste of the public but the management's sense of equitable dealing with its patrons.

But you can't make a silk purse out of that particular portion of the pork's anatomy and there is no use trying. The necessity of the effort, it seems, soon will not exist, for a very obvious reason.

They are going to cut the ears off!

EIGHT TO BE RELEASED BY FBO IN JUNE

Three features and five short subjects will be released by FBO during June.

On June 10, "Dog Justice," starring Ranger, the wonder dog, will be shown. In the cast are Edward Hearne, Nita Martan, James Welsh, Al J. Smith and John Northole. The picture was directed by Jerome Storm from an original story by Ethel Hill.

"Loves of Ricardo," a George Beban production, with Mr. Beban in the leading role, will be distributed on June 17. This picture played the Rivoli Theater in New York for several weeks, and in many first runs throughout the country.

"The Texas Tornado," starring Tom Tyler, will be shown on June 24. In support of Tyler are Frankie Darro, Nora Lane, Jack Antony, Frank Whiston, Tyler's horse, "Flash," and "Beans," the dog. The production was directed by Frank Howard Clark from his own story.

The five short subject releases for June include:

"Mickey in Love," a two-reel Mickey McGuire comedy, a Larry Darmour production, will be shown on June 4. The McGuire comedies are based on the famous cartoon strips by Fontaine Fox.

On June 11, "Almost a Gentleman," a two-reel Karnival Komedy, with Al Cooke in the leading role, will be ready for exhibitors.

Another June 11 release will be "Heavy Infants," a two-reel Standard fat man comedy, with the three famous fat men, "Fat" Karr, "Tiny" Ross, and "Fatty" Alexander in the leading roles. The Standard comedies, like the Karnivals, are also Larry Darmour productions.

Two newsiaffs, travesties on the news events of the day, will be distributed on June 11 and 25.

Now That's Settled!

Is the nautch a naughty dance? Or is the nautch rhythmic movement of the body, artistically done, and therefore classed as an art? The answer, according to Gilda Gray, who does the dance in "The Devil Dancer," now at Loew's Palace, is that it is an a. and not a wanton wriggle, as some who have not seen it may be inclined to believe.

New One for Lon.

"Willow Walk," Sinclair Lewis' novel of dual identity and regeneration, has been purchased for the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will serve as a starring vehicle for Lon Chaney.

FIRST "TALKING MOVIE" SHOWS NEW YORK OF 90'S

TENDERLOIN! What a flood of memories the name brings up to the mind of the old New Yorker! And as he looks back and visualizes the Times Square district as it was 40 years ago he is puzzled to know how the place was ever allowed to exist.

But then that was another age. That was a period when there were many men who loudly asserted that certain forms of vice had to exist. The poor man's gambling place might be called a "hell," but the rich man's haven of chance was called his "club."

Goodness knows there was vice enough in the old Tenderloin and, while it did not contain all of it rampant in New York City in the early nineties, it contained the greater portion of it.

One of the strange conditions that existed for many years in New York was due to police graft. It was said that every gambling house, every dance hall and every "honkatonk" at one time had to pay tribute to the police in order to be allowed to operate. At this particular time most of the gilded palaces of sin in the growing city were located between Twenty-third and Forty-second streets west of Fifth avenue. Many of the places were just off Broadway and not a few just off Sixth avenue.

Over on Sixth avenue was the old Haymarket, the most notorious dance hall that ever existed in the city. Zealous reformers again and again tried to close its doors, but there was a "pull" somewhere, and their efforts were in vain.

It was in this precinct that Capt. Williams became famous. He had been transferred from one of the precincts lower downtown. A friend in the department, calling on Williams, remarked with a smile that he had it pretty soft. Williams smiled and answered: "Yes, I have the Tenderloin."

The expression got out and was instantly adopted as the name of the night life section of the big city. In the course of time it got to be the name applied to giddy night life sections of all big cities.

In the passing of the Tenderloin as old New Yorkers knew it no tears were shed. In wiping it out, the march of progress and the growth of the city did more than all the reformers, blocked as they were by graft and political power.

"Tenderloin" is also the title of the screen feature at the Metropolitan Theater this week and pictures this section of New York as it really was in the old days.

SI USTED LA GUSTA ES SU CASA, SENOR

Dolores Del Rio last week gave her Hollywood friends their first glimpse of a real Mexican home.

Ever since the star decided to build a home in the film capital, speculation has been rife as to the nature of the completed domicile. Miss Del Rio announced that it would be an exact reproduction of her home in Mexico City.

The doors of the new home were thrown open for the first time when the star invited some 100 famous stars and executives to attend a buffet supper and dance and inspect the house and its grounds, which are surrounded by a high adobe wall.

The house is entirely Mexican in architecture and furnishings, all of the furniture having been sent to Hollywood from Mexico. Old altar cloths and priest's robes form the major wall decorations and Mexican tile work is used exclusively on the floors and walls. The Del Rio home is the only Mexican home in Hollywood. It is entirely different from the Spanish homes. Miss Del Rio emphatically points this out.

Among the guests who attended the initial house warming were Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno, Johnnie Hines, Bessie Love, Charles Farrell, Virginia Valli, Mrs. Ona Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schildkraut, Roland Drew, Greta Nissen, Victor Varconi, Billie Dove, Irvin Willat, Ralph Forbes, Julanne Johnston, Agnes Ayres, John W. Considine, jr., Carmen Pantages, Rita Carewe, Edwin Carewe, Lilyan Tashman, Edmund Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lewis, Molly O'Day, Carlos Amor, Joseph M. Schenck, Vivian Duncan, Bebe Daniels, Lloyd Pantages, Norma Talmadge, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn and many others well known in film circles.

A Good Policy.

Reginald Denny, star of "That's My Daddy," now showing at the Rialto, is one of screenland's most valuable stars, either alive or dead. His pictures gross in the millions and he is worth $500,000 dead, for Universal has taken out a life insurance policy for that amount to protect its investment in his pictures.

Met His Boss.

Paul Bern, assistant to Irving Thalberg at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, arrived in New York last week, and will return to the coast with Mr. Thalberg, who, with his wife, Norma Shearer, arrived back from a European vacation May 9 on the Majestic.

LITTLE—"Lucrecia Borgia." Return engagement by demand.

This Week's Screen Plays

METROPOLITAN—Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel, in "Tenderloin," with Vitaphone.

"Tenderloin," the underworld "talking movie" drama made by the Vitaphone method, in which dialogue is carried on by characters as the picture is shown on the screen, will be the feature for this week at Crandall's Metropolitan.

Dolores Costello is the featured player in "Tenderloin." This young star's admirers have seen her in many roles, some romantic, some rippling with comedy, others gay with youth and buoyancy, and still others dramatic. In "Tenderloin," which is frankly melodrama, she has a role in which she runs the gamut of emotions.

The story unfolded in "Tenderloin" concerns a coterie of high-class crooks. They are not pikers or cheap skates in the world of gangdom. They go after big stakes with the knowledge that if they are apprehended they will get long prison terms. Innocently and with open eyes the heroine falls into the clutches of this gang through the big, handsome, seemingly honest boy, who is a master workman in safe blowing.

Among the well-known screen favorites who give life to the story are Conrad Nagel, who is cast opposite Miss Costello in the lead role; Mitchell Lewis, Dan Wolheim, John Miljan, Pat Hartigan, and Georgie Stone.

The short reel Vitaphone subjects which will complete the program include a new comedy, "The Bookworm," which features Harry Conley, the droll comedian who has been seen here many times at Keith's and the Earle Theaters, and the Harrington Sisters, in harmony songs.

PALACE—Gilda Gray, in "The Devil Dancer."

Gilda Gray, in "The Devil Dancer," is the screen attraction at Loew's Palace this week.

The picture was adapted from the scenario by Harry Harvey, authority on the Orient, and was directed by Fred Niblo. Clive Brook has the leading male role, and in support of Miss Gray are Anna May Wong, Michael Vavitch and many other actors of note.

The star is seen as the successor to the sacred dancer, killed with her lover by being buried alive for the sin of unfaithfulness. The superstitious natives look with awe at this white woman among them, the orphan of a murdered missionary, left at the temple many years before.

With the death of the previous dancer as a menace, the love affair and elopement of Stephen, Clive Brook, and Takla, Miss Gray, take their place in a procession of events which include humorous and pathetic incidents of Tibetan manners, in conflict with British-Indian society, the kidnaping of Takla by Hassim, an itinerant showman; the dancing of Takla in a Nautch house and the pursuit of Stephen and the avenging minions of the grand Llama. The climax is reached in a bitter fight between the contending factions.

On the stage, one of the country's foremost producers, R. H. Burnside, presents "Kat Kabaret," with a cast including Kerenoff and Maree, the Patterson Twins, Roy Walman, Bert Nagel and "Omar," the Hearst Brothers and the Albertina Rasch Girls, and featuring Wesley Eddy and his Palace Syncopators.

The bill is augmented by the Palace Orchestra, conducted by Harry Borjes. M-G-M newsreel and short subjects.

FOX—Irene Rich in "The Silver Slave."

Ireno Franklin, just returned from a world tour, will be the stellar stage attraction at the Fox Theater this week. This artiste needs no introduction to Washington audiences. Miss Franklin won a host of new admirers throughout her tour, and during her Fox appearance will present a cycle of new songs. Jerry Jarnagin, who writes the music for Miss Franklin's character studies, will be at the piano.

Other stage features will include an S. J. Stebbins creation, "In the Spotlight," described as a novelty. The artists participating include Ross and Gilbert, Bertie and Norway and Robert Merton.

Still another interlude will be a stage picture climax, with Josef Turin, Lawrence Downey and the ballet corps, to a special arrangement of Victor Herbert's beloved melodies.

For its first Washington appearance with a stage interpretative setting, Mr. Stebbins is also announcing that the grand orchestra, Leon Brusiloff, conducting, will render Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," with Richard Singer, internationally known pianist, as the solo artist. Here will be utilized Helen and Burt Harger, Flavio Theodore, and the Fox ballet as supporting artists.

The screen feature offers Irene Rich in what is reported to be one of the best "mother" roles of the modern type that this actress has yet portrayed. In "The Silver Slave" Miss Rich, in an endeavor to save her daughter from the mad jazz age, steals that daughter's sweetheart. An excellent supporting cast is promised.

RIALTO—Reginald Denny in "That's My Daddy."

In "That's My Daddy," which is the feature at the Rialto this week, it is said that Reginald Denny registers one of his greatest starring successes But another thing that makes "That's My Daddy" noteworthy is the presence in the cast of little Jane La Verne, a Denny discovery. It is predicted that she will prove the greatest screen sensation since Jackie Coogan in "The Kid."

Briefly, the story is about Jimmy Norton, a young man of wealth, trapped into an engagement with a daughter of a once wealthy family, who wants his money. Jimmy dashes across town in his car and is stopped by a motorcycle cop. He lies to the officer, telling him that he is hurrying to the Children's Hospital, where his daughter is seriously injured. The officer goes along. Here a child, Pudge, has been brought that morning after running away from her foster mother. She thinks Jimmy is her father, whom she never saw. Jimmy, to carry out his bluff, takes the little girl home and fathers her.

Meantime, Jimmy has fallen in love with the nurse, in whose charge he had placed Pudge. When the wedding of Jimmy to Sylvia van Tassel is about to take place, Pudge runs in and calls Jimmy "Daddy." The Van Tassels call off the marriage. Jimmy weds the nurse and the picture ends with a delightful climax for all concerned.

The supporting cast includes Barbara Kent, Lillian Rich, Tom O'Brien, Mathilde Brundage, Wilson Benge, Armand Kaliz, Charles Coleman and Art Currier.

Rox Rommell, conducting the Rialto Orchestra, plays a new arrangement of "Echoes From the Metropolitan Opera House."

International Newsreel and other short films are added.

EARLE—Bebe Daniels in "The Fifty-Fifty Girl."

"The Fifty-Fifty Girl" is the title of Bebe Daniels' latest starring vehicle for Paramount, which is this week's screen feature at the Earle Theater. The laugh-provoking situations are natural, and the new picture is a fitting companion piece to Miss Daniels' "Feel My Pulse."

The stage offering for the week is a new Stanley Co. of America presentation, "Venetian Nights," which features Jack Pepper as master of ceremonies and a great many Broadway stars, including Berinoff and Eulalie the Three Whirlwinds, Georges Dufranne, Kitty McLaughlin, Edwaro Albano, Grace Yaeger and the Serova Dancers. The Earle Stage Band supplies the music for the stage offering.

In "The Fifty-Fifty Girl" Miss Daniels plays the part of a stubborn girl who maintains that women are superior to men in every situation. A young man who seriously disagrees with her allows her to test her theories on him and in the dark passageways of an old gold mine, pursued by a horde of yelling laborers, she finally meets a he. Waterloo and concedes his mastery.

In support of Miss Daniels are seen James Hall, William Austin and many others of note.

A new Sennett comedy, "The Bicycle Flirt," starring Billy Bevan; a short scenic News events and musical accompaniment complete the bill.

COLUMBIA—Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Intimate glimpses of life behind the scenes form a part of a vivid and gripping drama in Lon Chaney's latest screen vehicle, "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," which continues for a second week at Loew's Columbia.

The new Herbert Brenon production is based on the celebrated stage play in which Lionel Atwill played the clown. The picture is one of the most pretentious productions in years. Chaney, as the clown, making his great sacrifice for the happiness of the woman he loves, has a role which runs the gamut of human emotions.

Simonetta, played by Loretta Young, is a foundling adopted by Tito and Simon, two wandering players. Tito is played by Lon Chaney. Luigi Ravelli desires Simonetta, who has grown to beautiful womanhood. Luigi, a noble man, wins her promise to marry him.

Tito's affection has changed from paternal love to the passion of a lover but he gives her up to Luigi, without revealing this fact. She discovers it, however, and tries to convince him that she loves him. When she leaves she believes he has accepted her sacrifice. But Tito realizes the truth and at rehearsal that night deliberately falls to his death.

Augmenting the picture is the Columbia Orchestra under the direction of Claude Barroughs, short subjects and the M-G-M Newsreel.

Embarrassing Moments.

Irene Franklin and Jerry Jarnagin now at the Fox Theater, recently had to make the jump from Pittsburgh to St. Louis, which occasioned, greatly to the horror of the manager, their having to go on second Saturday night. Their act over, they had just twelve minutes to make the train. In stage clothes and all their make-up they arrived at the station to find the train was half an hour late and themselves doomed to sit in the Pittsburgh station for that length of time.

The painted faces of the artists and the spangled dress of Miss Franklin soon attracted a crowd. The curious started to ask questions. One wanted to know what they were advertising, another asked about samples. All of which Irene describes as the most trying experience of her many seasons as an American entertainer.

Gold Rush Days.

A historic old mine came back to life as one of the interesting features of "The Fifty-Fifty Girl" Bebe Daniels' latest starring vehicle for Paramount which is now showing at the Earle Theater.

The climax of the production is staged in the tunnels of the mine and the famous Yellow Aster Mine at Randsburg, Calif., was selected by Director Clarence Badger for this novel and rapid-fire action.

Years ago the Yellow Aster was one of the richest gold producers in California history and the memories of those years still remain. Almost deserted when Badger thought of it as a location, the mine was given the life of other years after crews from the Paramount studios in Hollywood and engineers had been called upon to rejuvenate it.

Hail Columbia!

Columbia Pictures has added Olive Borden to its roster of prominent stars which now includes such names as Jack Holt, Lya de Putti, Betty Compson, Hobart Bosworth, Lois Wilson, Bert Lytell, Margaret Livingston and Dorothy Revier.

Miss Borden, who has worked exclusively for Fox during the past few years, will start work immediately on one of the four remaining productions on Columbia's current season program.

Her portrayal in this Columbia production, will mark her first appearance in an independent feature.

Conversation Only.

There is not a single explanatory or editorial title in Leatrice Joy's latest picture, "Man-Made Women," which Paul Stein directed. There are, however, a few spoken titles and Edwin Justin Mayer, whose brilliant play, "The Firebrand," was distinguished by its scintillant dialogue has been engaged to write them.

Began at Two.

Blanche LeClair, who is only 19 now but started her screen career 17 years ago as a child extra, has been added to the ranks of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's stock players.

Dolores Costello in "Tenderloin" —Metropolitan.

Gilda Gray in "The Devil Dancer" —Palace.

Loretta Young in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh"—Columbia.

MR. GOLDWYN IMPORTS ONE MORE BEAUTY

Lilli Damiti, Germany's leading screen star and most popular of the young European motion picture players, has definitely decided to accept Samuel Goldwyn's offer for an American career. Her decision to come to America was contained in a cable received last week by Mr. Goldwyn. Mlle. Damiti sailed on the Berengaria Saturday, May 5, and will arrive in New York six days later. After a day or two in New York she will leave for Hollywood, where she is to make her first American picture opposite Ronald Colman.

Mr. Goldwyn met Mlle. Damiti in Berlin during his recent European trip in quest of new screen talent. She has appeared in pictures for about three years, the last eighteen months in leading roles. Beginning her professional career in the ballet of the Paris Opera four years ago, she was discovered by officials of the German Feiner Co., who took her to Berlin for motion pictures. Mlle. Damiti is 22 years of age, the lightest of blondes, with deep dark brown eyes.

Mlle. Damiti succeeds Vilma Banky in leading feminine roles opposite Mr. Colman, "Two Lovers," now current at the Embassy, is the last picture in which the famous costars will appear jointly.

Mr. Goldwyn, in defending his choice of Mlle. Damiti as his future star, said: "In Europe, there is less evidence of a woman's struggle to dominate man, to outshine him in a business and political way, than there is in America.

"The women of Europe, as a whole, still continue in the footsteps of their sisters of the past, seeking their highest destiny through the home; and a woman of that type makes a stronger appeal on the screen than one whose thoughts are immersed in business or politics.

"The appeal of the motion picture is to the heart, not to the head, and that is where the woman who still requires man's protection outranks the one who fights man on his own ground in the office and in the professional arenas. Conditions in Europe give us these women of the heart; conditions in America usually do not."

Singer Plays.

Richard Singer, appearing at the Fox Theater, was especially brought to Washington to perform the intricate piano passages of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," which the orchestra is presenting this week. This is the second visit of Mr. Singer at the Fox, his previous appearance being when he did a character study of one of the old masters. Mr. Singer is well known through his piano recordings and his concert appearances.

A NIOBE WHO DEVELOPED A FUN COMPLEX

If any woman ever had two entirely distinct natures, Irene Rich is the woman. Even as a little girl she dreamed of a career, but an eventless childhood in Buffalo, and then in Idaho, where her father had a gold mine, made it just a lovely thing to think about—something that would probably never happen.

Her father was planning a more domestic life for his daughter. It wasn't until ten years ago that she decided definitely to try to get into pictures, but by that time every one said she couldn't do it because she had not started at the formative age of 16 or 17. She was already in her twenties and she had two children.

First Miss Rich played second leads with Dunstin Farnum and Earle Williams—and then was signed for seven comedies with Will Rogers. By that time her mother and children were comfortably settled in Hollywood and Miss Rich was embarked on a career—even if it was not at all as she had imagined it would be.

After years of trials and disappointment Warner Bros. asked her to do a part in "Brass." As a result of her success in the picture, she was signed on a long-term contract, and Irene began to weep her way through pictures. One day a Warner Bros.' director saw her in "Rosita," noted her grace and charm, and wondered why she could not shed her depression and become a glittering interesting woman with a shady past. He saw in her a sophistication, a delicious provocative look, at times even a look of devilment, which could be used advantageously on the screen.

Since that time she has been the vivacious, resourceful woman of the world, whether appearing in "The Honeymoon Express," "My Official Wife," "Don't Tell the Wife," "The Climbers," "Dearie," "The Desired Woman" or "The Silver Slave;" the daring comedy-drama of modern life in which she is now starring at the Fox Theater. She no longer sits by the baby's crib and sheds bitter tears while the dear husband is out with a curly-headed blonde. Her days of weeping are over.

Dude Gunman.

Having read a newspaper account of a dude gunman wearing plus fours, Dan Wolheim insisted on adopting the garb for his role in Warner Bros.' talking film drama, "Tenderloin," in which Dolores Costello is starring, and which is now showing at the Metropolitan Theater.

Director Curtis refused to believe the baggy pants were consistent with the criminal mode or mood, but Wolheim flashed the newspaper story on him and won the argument.

Close Ups—Pre-views—Retakes and Rushes

AN AMERICAN BORN STAR MASTERS NATIVE TONGUE

EMIL JANNINGS now has given his first interview in the English language. After 42 years, a native-born American has mastered his mother tongue. Jannings was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., but it was not until he came to Hollywood in December, 1926, that he began a study of English. His first words are words of enthusiasm for his latest picture, the Ernest Lubitsch production "The Patriot."

He tells you, in his newly-found English, that it is a character into which he has been able to throw himself, body and soul; a story perfect in its conception and execution; with a director who is inspired.

"Lubitsch—a master!" he exclaims. "A man understands Jannings; a man Jannings understands. We have known each other for many years from far back in the days in Berlin when we were both struggling for our very existence. Later on he persuaded me to work in front of the camera for $2 a day.

"I didn't want to do it. I hated pictures; thought they were cheap and shoddy, the work of ignorant minds. But I went into them just the same. Why? Because I was hungry.

"To me there was no future in pictures. The theater was my one and only love in those days and I devoted myself to it with all my heart. The stage is a hard mistress. But nothing that is worth while can be obtained without a struggle. It seemed terrible and even unnecessary at the time, but I know that it was the finest training I could have had."

The first motion picture in which Jannings worked was called "When Four Do the Same." He received $2 a day, and was hired principally because of his rugged physique. He did "sensations"—the equivalent of a stunt-man's work in this country.

"The work was terrible," he remembers. "I hated it. I was disgusted with myself for doing it. On the stage I could never successfully play a part unless I felt that part with all my soul. This very feeling holds true today and that is why I can not play a motion picture role that I do not sincerely feel."

Although he wasn't named in the cast, Jannings attracted widespread interest in the role of Louis XV in "Passion," which introduced Poli Negri to America. He followed this as Henry VIII in "Deception," which won him universal acclaim, and then appeared in a series of feature productions, including "The Love of Pharoah," "Peter the Great," "The Tragedy of Love," "Faust," "The Last Laugh," and "Variety." While making these pictures, Jannings received the highest salary ever paid to a cinema star in Germany—$1,000 a week.

"My favorite role? I have no favorite," he declares. "I only ask—am I playing a man? A great many stories have been offered me in which I would be playing a man who was something only more or less human. I will not play a man who is too good or too bad to live. To be exact, I will not play any fellow who is all good or all bad. There aren't any such people.

"I despise heroes. I don't believe in villains. I believe only in men—under varying circumstances."

PATTERSON TWINS, two of the kittens in R. H. Burnside's "Kat Kabaret," the current stage revue at Loew's Palace.

THE FINEST TROUPER ON WEST COAST

Just 4 years old, and with roles in more than 40 motion pictures to his credit.

Little Jackie Combs, who is playing the most important part in his short but brilliant career in Norma Talmadge's new picture, "The Woman Disputed," recently was honored as the "best trouper in Hollywood," when Miss Talmadge and members of her cast staged a birthday party for the child actor.

The pet of the company, from Miss Talmadge and Director Henry King down to the humblest property man, Jackie remains a real boy. He was personally selected by Norma from a score of candidates who took tests for the important role in "The Woman Disputed," a story of love and war scenarized by C. Gardner Sullivan from Dannison Clift's stage success.

Young Combs shares screen credit with Gilbert Roland, Arnold Kent, Gustav von Seyfferitz, Olga Baklanova, Michael Vavitch, Marian Templeton, Boris de Fas, Howard Davies, Joseph Mari and other well-known members of Miss Talmadge's supporting cast.

On the day that Jackie celebrated his fourth natal day, Miss Talmadge personally brought him a big basket of good things that little boys like to eat. And she and Jackie sat at the head of the table at the birthday luncheon on the set.

MAX HARR, one of the "Three Whirlwinds" that breeze through "Venetian Nights," the Earle's stage offering for the week.

GILDA GRAY APPEARS IN FIERY ROLE

Flickering lights, lazy curls of incense, figures looming out of darkness, grotesque, shining gods of Tibet—and before them, gyrating faster and faster in the strange rhythms of a dance of fear, Gilda Gray whirls in "The Devil Dancer," now playing at Loew's Palace.

Curiosity caused Gilda Gray, ensconced as she is in the lap of civilization to turn to far away Tibet and its "forbidden city," Lhasa. She had heard tales of this city to which few white men had gained access and escaped with their lives. She had learned of its systems of monasteries, or lamaseries, where monks called lamas worship the gods of darkness, where devil dancers—young girls dedicated to these strange gods—danced before them in frenzied rhythm. About these Gilda Gray conceived an idea for a scenario and a dance of tense pagan fervor.

Harry Hervey, the Oriental authority, aided her. During one of his trips to India he had met a devil dancer, Takla, who had fled from Lhasa, fearing persecution on account of her love for a young monk in the monastery. About this girl's experiences he wove a scenario, making every effort to create a picture true in atmosphere and detail. He aided Gilda to steep herself in the culture, legends and traditions of Lhasa, a city where the grand lama rules his Tibetan Vatican of high gilded roofs and red walls, and where votive offerings are given to the gods of darkness in ceremonies of lavish heathenism.

In the Delhi sequence, Gilda gives all the color of the famous Bunnia bazaars to a nautch dance, which is considered the most difficult one in India. Though it is only performed by girls of this myatic race who are trained from early youth in its rhythms, Gilda Gray is said to have mastered it like a true nautch girl. Her headdress was brought to her from the Orient by Mr. Hervey. The remainder of her costume was brought over from the bazaars of India.

CRACK STARS APPEAR WELL IN PICTURES

Ten years ago the athletic boys would have sneered openly at make-up boxes and grease paint. Today they feel rather neglected if they are not listed with the various Hollywood casting offices and they take every means possible of getting their licks at the close-up banditry when the chance provides.

From all fields of sport they come; there are no favorites. The second raters and runner-ups are now just as persistent in their attempts to "crash the gate" as they were to sneer some years ago.

It is strange, in many cases, how some of them do get in. In the case of Charley Paddock, he made a right handsome leading man, in addition to his capabilities as a runner. Dempsey looks good to the feminine element of an audience, particularly after the reissue on his nose. Grange is likewise pretty hefty on the looks.

One of the most interesting cases is that of George Kotsonaros, the most recent addition to the ranks of the picture stars and who is now appearing at the Earle Theater in support of Bebe Daniels in the Paramount star's latest comedy, "The Fifty-Fifty Girl."

Kotsonaros is a wrestler of no mean ability and, after some years of competition all over the country, landed in Los Angeles for a series of bouts under the veteran promoter, Lou Daro.

It so happened that a film director was in a ringside seat on one occasion and, when it came George's time to perform, just one look sold the director.

The wrestler signed a film contract in his dressing room after the bout that night and since that time has been busy as an actor.

Two Stars.

Gwen Lee and Conrad Nagel have the leads in one of the three sequences in "Diamond Handcuffs," which is being directed by John McCarthy.

Flashbacks and Fadeouts

Garrett Graham will title "Roulette," Richard Barthelmess' latest starring vehicle from the Fannie Hurst story.

Hotel Astor's famous Peacock Alley will appear in all its glory in "The Butter and Egg Man," which Jack Mulhall is making for First National.

Michael Vavitch, distinguished Russian actor, has been signed by First National to play King Ferdinand, in Corinne Griffith's "The Divine Lady."

John Irwin, who played Sailor West in the Broadway presentation of "The Barker," will portray the same role in the screen version which stars Milton Sills.

Louise Fazenda will play a small-town spinster in Mary Astor's next picture. It is the story of an American girl who wins a title, only to return to her boyhood sweetheart.

An entire English railway train has been built for First National's "The Whip," featuring Dorothy Mackaill. This is the old Drury Lane melodrama with some of the thrilling sequences taking place on the train.

Four directors of the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Corporation were reelected at the recent annual meeting of the board. Their terms run for four years. The directors are Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Casimir I. Stralen and William H. English.

Winnie Jones, 17-year-old daughter of Philetus Jones, Mormon leader in Rockville, Utah, will appear in important bits in the new Paramount Western picture, "The Vanishing Pioneer," which just completed important sequences on a location trip to the town. Jack Holt is featured in the production, and the story is by Zane Grey. Miss Jones has studied dramatic art and played in amateur productions.

The electrical hook-up for an outdoor mob scene—involving the use of 1,000 extra actors—in "The Racket" is called the most complicated ever attempted in the movies. The picture now is being filmed by Caddo Productions, with Thomas Meighan as the star. Members of the American Society of Cinema Engineers in recent annual convention in Los Angeles visited the studio to inspect the electrical equipment.

K. C. Robinson has been assigned to write the titles on First National's "The Hawk's Nest," which Milton Sills has just completed.

Fred Kohler, who has played villain to George Bancroft's hero in a number of recent pictures, has recovered from a short illness and is back at work in the Hollywood studios.

Paramount has assigned Paul Lukas to a heavy role with Bebe Daniels in "Hot News," a forthcoming production based on the adventures of newsreel photographers. Neil Hamilton will be Miss Daniels' lead.

Paramount Pictures has just made the important announcement that the motion picture, "Dawn," showing the execution of Edith Cavell, will not be shown in any theater which the company owns or controls.

Bebe Daniels' next Paramount picture will be "The News Reel Girl," it has just been announced. The picture will be from an original story by Harlan Thompson and Monte Brice, and Florence Ryerson will prepare the continuity. Clarence Badger will direct, and Neil Hamilton will be the leading man.

IRENE FRANKLIN, famous singing comedienne, just back from abroad, who features the stage bill at the Fox this week.

GIRL COMIC TO BE STAR ON HER OWN

Marjorie Beebe, inimitable comedienne, is to be starred in a series of feature length comedies, according to her recently signed contract with Fox Films.

Alluding to this clever girl as the "feminine Charlie Chaplin of the screen" is not considered unduly extravagant.

Her pathway to comedy fame has been watched carefully and there is an element of relief in the congratulations extended Marjorie by her fellow players for she has a provocative habit of "stealing" nearly every picture in which she has been cast.

Now she comes into her own and no star has ever started with such hopes, on the part of Fox executives, that she will live up to everything predicted for her.

Her initial starring vehicle is "A Farmer's Daughter" from an original story by Harry Brand, Frederica Sager and Hank Johnson.

Arthur Rosson has been assigned the directorial berth. The comedy gets under way within the next few days.

Blue Back.

Monte Blue, who spent five months on the Island of Tahiti enacting the male lead in M-G-M's "White Shadows in the South Seas," but has subsequently obtained a good shave, arrived in New York last week, and plans to be in the East for at least a fortnight.

Not Jeanne Eagels!

Jetta Goudal has been signed to play the role of Simone in "Her Cardboard Lover," in which Robert Z. Leonard will direct Marion Davies.

ALL IS COLOR, LIFE AND WORK, IT SEEMS, ON COAST

LONG lines of extra players swarmed the gates at First National's Burbank studios last week, where several pictures calling for huge sets are in production. Activity continues unabated there, with new productions starting as fast as the spring pictures are completed.

The finishing touches are being given to Colleen Moore's latest film, "Happiness Ahead," with John McCormick, the producer, supervising the editing and titling.

A fascinating and brilliant setting is being employed for Corinne Griffith's stellar vehicle, "The Divine Lady." It represents the Duchess of Argyle's salon, where nearly 500 extras are working.

Milton Sills' "The Barker," directed by George Fitzmaurice, is utilizing an entire carnival for colorful scenes in this picturization of the stage play of carnival life.

"The Whip" is nearing completion with English gentlemen riding to hounds in picturesque settings throughout Southern California. Dorothy Mackaill is featured in the screen version of the old Drury Lane melodrama.

Jack Mulhall is making some dramatic scenes for "The Butter and Egg Man," adapted from the famous stage play. Greta Nissen plays opposite him.

Charlie Murray and a big crowd of extras are working on scenes for "The Head Man," from Harry Leon Wilson's "The Boss of Little Arcady." It is a story of small-town politics.

Harry Langdon has been staging parades and other scenes for his new untitled comedy. Doris Dawson is his leading woman.

Billie Dove is about to start "The Night Watch," and Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes are ready to begin work on "Heart to Heart," the story of a small-town girl.

With elaborate settings, hundreds of extras in colorful costumes and gay music on the sidelines, the Burbank studios is now one of the most fascinating spots on the Pacific Coast.

MR. BRENON PENS ESSAY ON METHODS

Contrasts are the surest means of telling a story on the screen. This is the rule of Herbert Brenon, famous director of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," in which Lon Chaney is starring for the second week at Loew's Columbia, and known for such successes as "Beau Geste," "Sorrel and Son," "Peter Pan," and many others.

Some directors "say it with action," and some with crowds and massive settings. But Brenon applies simple rules of human psychology—and evolves contrasts.

"Almost every idea in the human mind," says Brenon, "is based upon comparison. In the prehistoric days when man's mentality first began to form he began to differentiate between objects and ideas by comparing one with the other. He found one enemy was strong by comparing him to another who was weak. And so on until today almost every human conclusion is based on comparison of one element with another.

"On the screen this is most important. We can not describe a character in words, but we can show him, and audiences will compare him with some other character known to them. Of course, this might lead to varied ideas, as each individual would compare the character to another person, and human views differ.

"The surest way, then, to show the nature of a character is to supply another, playing alongside the central one for the audience to compare him with. To bring out good points in a character, have one with bad points appearing with him, so that the inevitable comparison will enable the audience to judge him clearly. Thus we evolve a rule of contrasts.

"In 'Laugh, Clown, Laugh,' for instance, we show Chaney's huge love for the girl Simonetta by having Bernard Siegal playing alongside him and not liking the girl. This lends point to Chaney's love by comparison. Then, too, we show the girl's innocence by playing her alongside Cissy Fitzgerald in the role of an old, experienced actress. Thus the comparison of the audience is guided into channels that lead to the conclusions we want for the sake of our story values."

Quite a Cast.

Mae Busch has been signed for Lon Chaney's "While the City Sleeps," which Jack Conway is directing. Screen fans will recall Miss Busch's characterization in Chaney's "The Unholy Three." The supporting cast includes Anita Page, Polly Moran, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Richard Carle, Eddie Kane and Carroll Nye.

WEE PRODIGY HAS BIG BIT IN NEW PLAY

Jane La Verne, the beautiful blond who plays a prominent supporting role in Reginald Denny's "That's My Daddy," the feature at the Rialto this week, can scarcely write or read.

It's not that she's illiterate, for she is extremely bright for her age, which is four. She has just been going to school since September and is taking her three Rs very seriously for she wants to grow up and be a big movie star.

Little Jane was discovered by Denny when she was visiting her father, who is in charge of the tin-shop at Universal Studio. He needed a cute little child for his picture and he was so attracted to her that he knew she was the little girl for his production.

As a result of Denny's confidence, Universal placed her under a five-year contract and she will appear in many forthcoming productions.

Jane is a native California daughter, having been born in Redlands. She lived in Pasadena for a time before her father joined Universal, when the family moved to Hollywood.

Fred Newmeyer, the director of "That's My Daddy," asserts that Jane is a natural actress and predicts a sensational success for the Denny protege.

Believe It or Not.

Addition of 1500 new accounts to make a current total of more than 10,000 theaters playing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product was announced at the company's two regional conventions last week, in Pittsburgh and Kansas City, where production plans for the new year's schedule of forty-four pictures were discussed.

FRIENDS IN TRIBUTE TO OLD MASTER

Friends and former associations of D. W. Griffith from the most distant sections of the country were on hand Tuesday, May 8, when a huge testimonial was tendered Griffith on the occasion of his twentieth anniversary as a motion picture director.

Griffith began his directorial career with the old Biograph studio on West Fourteenth street, New York City. His first group of pictures, scarcely more than half a reel in length, was known as the "Dolly Series." Since that time Griffith has contributed some of the most artistic productions the screen has known, notable among them being "The Birth of a Nation," "Broken Blossoms," "Way Down East," "Intolerence" and "America."

Among the events planned for the week were a screening of Griffith's most recent picture, "The Drums of Love."

Eric Von Stroheim, Donald Crisp, William Beaudine and other directors who began their careers under Griffith's tutelage, assisted an actor's committee at the tribute performance.

"ARK" FILM PLANNED ON VAST SCALE

A number of new names were added this week by Warner Bros. to the cast of their forthcoming road show, "Noah's Ark," which they are making "to top any picture ever made."

Nigel de Bruller will play the part of the high priest and William V. Mong has been selected for the role of the innkeeper. Armand Kaliz and Malcolm Waite have also been chosen to portray other character parts.

Gustave von Seyffertitz has withdrawn from the line-up of featured players because of illness, and a successor for his place in the cast will soon be announced.

Dolores Costello is the star of "Noah's Ark," and other popular actors and actresses now at work in it under the direction of Michael Curtiz include George O'Brien, Louise Fazenda, Paul McAllister, Noah Beery, Myrna Loy, Leila Hyams, Audrey Ferris, Helene Costello, Anders Randolf and Dave Mir.

NEW LAW IS SEEN AS FORCING WIRED RADIO ONTO CITIES

Will Hasten Application of the System, Says Maj., Gen. Squier.

INSTALLATION IS READY NOW, ASSERTS INVENTOR

Now in Use on Telephone Lines in Freeport, Ill., He Declares.

By LYNNE M. LAMM.

The new radio law will hasten, if not force, the application of wired radio in cities and urban districts, according to Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. A., retired, former chief of the Signal Corps of the Army and inventor of wired radio, discussing his invention and its relation to the reallocation broadcasting plan of the Federal Radio Commission.

As an illustration, he pointed out the fact that the congested districts, such as New York and Chicago, will require special treatment by the commission and they will have to go after them at once. He believes that the new law, when carried into effect, will mean the taking away of power and the closing down of some stations.

"Wired radio," said Gen. Squier, "is already developed and ready to be installed on power lines. It is now in use on telephone lines in Freeport, Ill."

Would Vanquish Howls.

Gen. Squier pointed out that there are some 18,000,000 homes in the United States that are equipped with either power or telephone lines, or both, and therefore these two-wire networks are available for wired radio. He contends that the only reason that this system has not been used before is a commercial rather than a technical one. It is a practical system, he says, and on the other hand there is the fear among manufacturers that the installation of wired radio would injure the present sale of radio sets, and therefore wired radio is being held up.

Wired radio is "simplicity itself" when installed, Gen. Squier contends, and it will lift performance up to a new plane. He says that when it is finally and properly developed that we will look back on 1928 and wonder why we were so well satisfied with the static, fading, and howls, day and night, winter and summer. He contends that there is nothing now with which to compare radio and we are so glad to receive anything that we are not looking for improved reception.

Long distance telephone conversations, Gen. Squier pointed out, are now conducted by wired radio, through the carrier arc or the carrier current. As a matter of fact, he says, when any one puts in a long-distance call the chief operator assigns him a frequency for a period of three minutes, just as the Radio Commission assigns a frequency to a broadcasting station.

No Tuning Required.

Dwelling further upon the simplicity of the receiving apparatus for wired radio, Gen. Squier explained that it is small and compact and consists of three tubes, one a detector tube and two audio amplification tubes. No tuning is required and there are no ground, antenna, or batteries necessary. There is only one dial which handles the volume and there are three buttons, so that any one of three programs can be heard. There is also an additional attachment which can be obtained and plugged into the set by which any space radio communication can be heard, so that a complete service is obtained both for space and wired radio.

It is understood that General Squier is working on further developments of wired radio, and taking into consideration television with regard to his patent. He is also contemplating, it is understood, a high speed machine for sending telegraphy over power lines. In this way newspapers could get continuous service over lines, day and night.

At Freeport, Ill., where this system is being worked out commercially, the subscribers to the service, now paying $4 per month, can get either space radio or local. They tune in on a central control and according to the General do not have "to fish around in the air" for their enertainment. Neither do they encounter static or fading.

Those engaged in wired radio have made application to the Radio Commission to construct a transmitting station in New York City by which they intend to send three simultaneous programs to different cities, where they will be broadcast by wired radio from substations of the various lighting utility companies of the country over their lines to the homes of the people.

Radio Cross Talk

One of the radio commissioners said recently that 90 per cent of the stations of this country were heterodyned. Heterodyning may be described as the interference created by ether waves set in motion by broadcasting apparatus, resulting in howls, whistles, screeches, and other outlandish noises in receiving sets.—Representative Edwin L. Davis (Democrat), of Tennessee.

There is the idea that people go away in summer and do not use radio sets. Few people go away for more than two weeks at a time, many go away for only a week, many more do not take vacations or take them in the winter. There are plenty of radio listeners in the summer.—Alfred E. Woller, managing director, National Electrical Manufacturers Association.

We have in the so-called chain programs the very best talent that can be secured. There is not another country in the world but where the listening constituency have to pay a license for owning an instrument, whereas all the programs in this country are free; and we do not have to pay a tax on the receivers, as they do in foreign countries.—Representative Frank Crowther (Republican), of New York.

One reason of this dissatisfaction and discord in radio is the fact that a large number of stations at present are hooked up in a chain and they carry over a different wave length the same program, so that in the entire chain of stations any one who does not desire to hear the chain program has no place on the dial left to switch in.—Representative Milton A. Romjue (Democrat), of Missouri.

Radio is the greatest aid ever conceived in keeping people interested in remote sections of the country.—Representative Clay Stone Briggs (Democrat), of Texas.

OFF THE ANTENNA

By ROBERT D. HEINL.

LISTENING to the "All America" radio team from New York last week tempts us to pick one of our own. It would be about as follows:

Public speakers—First, President Coolidge, who, in our opinion, has been able to project his personality over the air almost better than any other speaker. Second, Gov. Al Smith, who sounds as friendly and natural to the radio audience as if they were with him on the lower East Side of New York. We wish, however, he wouldn't pronounce it "raddio." Third, Vice President Dawes, the world's most explosive speaker—on the air or anywhere else.

* * * *

Clergymen—Bishop James E. Freeman, of the Washington Cathedral, whose voice seems to have been made for the radio, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise. After-dinner speaker—Charles M. Schwab, despite the fact that he once said talking over the air prevents him from telling some of his best stories. Humorists—Robert C. Benchley and Irvin S. Cobb. Grand opera company—National Grand Opera Company. Unquestionably the Chicago Civic Opera Company has greater stars, but this, we believe, is overbalanced by the acoustic advantages of a studio presentation by the National Grand Opera Company. The Chicago presentation still lacks much mechanically.

Stage stars—Laurette Taylor and Francis Wilson. We would have Miss Taylor repeat the reading from "Out There," which we think was one of the finest dramatic bits of the winter. Francis Wilson, of course, would again have to gvie us something from "Erminie."

* * * *

Impersonators—E. W. Burrill in "He Knew Lincoln," and "Chic" Sale. Operatic stars—Schumann-Heink and Emilio de Gogorza. Popular tenor—William Robyn ("Wee Willie"). Popular soprano—Caroline Andrews. Classical orchestra—New York Symphony, with Walter Damrosch. Popular orchestra—Anything led by Nathaniel Shilkret. Band—United States Marine Band. Black-face comedians—Moran and Mack, "The Two Black Crows," and "Sam 'n' Henry," now appearing over Station WMAQ at Chicago under new names which at the moment we are not able to recall.

Announcers—Of course for such a presentation as this there would have to be a strong staff of announcers, and so for our gala performance we would have Graham McNamee, Milton Cross, George C. Furness and John B. Daniel.

* * * *

Speaking of announcers, when we dozed off the other night with the radio turned on and awoke to hear Allen McQuhae doing the announcing and Graham McNamee the singing we went back to sleep again, thinking it was all a part of a dream.

A friend of ours who was awake tells us that not only did McQuhae make a good announcer, but that McNamee has a barytone voice of unusual quality.

This appropriately enough brings us to a discussion of "The Slumber Hour," the string sextet from WJZ in New York, which Washington heard last week for the first time and which will be on the air most every night at 10 o'clock through WRC from now on. It is, to our mind, one of the most restful features of the season.

To see if we were overenthusiastic about this hour, we turned to a critical musician for her opinion. She said: "The 'Slumber Hour' is exceptionally well done. I don't know when I have heard a group of musicians play with such balance and richness. Their tones are remarkably sweet and even. They play beautifully."

Whether or not listeners agree with us, we commend the "Slumber Hour" to their attention in the hope that more opinions may be forthcoming.

Apropos the reference to the famous bandmaster last Sunday, another Sousa story comes to mind. During the World War his Great Lakes Band appeared at a big benefit given in the New York Hippodrome one Sunday night. It was an all-star affair, with Mary Garden, Fred Stone and numerous others on the bill.

The house was packed, and standing in the rear watching the performance were Everett Sanders, then a congressman, and Sousa, who was waiting his turn to go on. As the orchestra in the pit struck up a piece with a tremendous fanfare, Sousa turned to Sanders and said:

"Isn't that a heck of a thing for them to be playing with us in the war as an ally of France?"

The remark was apparently a little over Everett's head until Sousa explained that the piece was Tschaikowsky's overture, "1812," the theme of which was Napoleon's retreat from Moscow.

A noticeable thing is the way Judge Ira E. Robinson is beginning to take over the reins at the Federal Radio Commission, thus showing that he intends being the chairman in fact as well as in name. Judge Robinson for a time leaned on his colleagues, but is evidently going in "on his own."

The judge's presence is being felt more and more and the wise visitors from out of town who go to their various commissioners on radio matters, and who ordinarily would let their cases rest there, now do not overlook the opportunity of making the acquaintance of and paying their respects to the judge before leaving.

Where in the beginning an impression got around that Judge Robinson was austere and aloof, this appears to be wearing off with a better acquaintance of the man. While it is true he is the most reserved in speech of any man on the commission, this seems to be the natural result of his newness to radio and to his judicial frame of mind and disinclination to discuss subjects upon which he has not yet reached a decision.

* * * *

Every time Charles Berrien, of the New York Herald-Tribune, refers to the gentlemen of the commission he calls them the "Federal Rodeo Commotion."

* * * *

An amusing sidelight on the reallocation situation is that some of the senators and representatives who were strongest for the equal division of wave-lengths and power clause, which may mean the biggest shake-up in the history of the radio, are said to be not now so enthusiastic about the matter.

Having heard that their constituents may be disturbed, it is understood they are privately advising the commissioners to "go slow." A certain senator, active in the bill's passage, but now up for reelection, is reported to be particularly concerned that any action taken before the national conventions and fall elections have been held might embarrass him politically.

GERMANY'S RADIO EXPORTS ARE LARGE

Value Put at 33,426,000 Marks in Nine Months; War Payment.

Radio exports of Germany for the first nine months of last year reached a total value of 33,426,000 marks, according to Thomas Butts, American trade commissioner at Berlin. That figure includes deliveries under the heading, "reparations in kind," which Germany is making to Belgium, France, Italy, Jugoslavia, Roumania and Japan, as part payment of its war indemnity, fixed by the treaty of Versailles. Reparations deliveries of radio equipment to those countries amounted to 3,285,000 marks in 1927.

"Although it is not safe to assume that the German industry would have sold this additional radio equipment were it not for the incentive to both the buyer and seller, as exists through 'reparations in kind' deliveries," Commissioner Butts reports, "yet a considerable part of it would have been sold anyway under normal circumstances. On that basis exports of radio apparatus in 1927 amount to 8.3 per cent of the total exports of electrical equipment for the year."

Caldwell Making Study.

It is understood that Federal Radio Commissioner O. H. Caldwell is making a special study of synchronization of stations broadcasting on the same wave length.

1932 International Conference.

The International Radiotelegraph Conference, the last sessions of which were held in Washington in November, will next meet in Madrid in 1932.

GETTYSBURG SPEECH WILL BE BROADCAST

Coolidge Address, May 30, Makes Changes Necessary in Stations There.

Arrangements are now being made for broadcasting the speech of President Coolidge at the Gettysburg battlefield May 30. It has been the custom for many years for the President to speak at Arlington Cemetery on Memorial Day. Here, of course, all broadcasting facilities are installed.

However, when it was announced that Mr. Coolidge was considering the possibility of accepting the Gettysburg invitation, the radio officials began to look into the facilities for picking up the address from there.

The President's acceptance subsequently gave them something to work upon, but as yet the White House has not been advised as to what stations may carry the speech.

2,000 Radio Patents Awaiting Decisions

So prolific are the radio inventions that some 2,000 patents are awaiting the attention of the United States patent office examiners.

The "oldest" was filed September 23 of last year, or almost eight months ago. While such an accumulation seems to be a large number to the casual observer, the situation in the radio division is no worse than in about twenty other divisions where the patents awaiting attention average about the same number. At this writing the patent office reports 102,142 patent applications awaiting action in addition to 2,523 trade marks that have been applied for.

HERE'S THE AUTOMATIC RECEIVER

Press a button to tune in your favorite stations with the latest device—the automatically tuned radio set operated by E. F. McDonald, Jr., of the Zenith Radio Corporation, Chicago. For instance, if WRC is wanted the operator would press button No. 1; if KDKA, button No. 2; WJZ, button No. 3, and so on.

12,000,000 SETS IN U. S. ENTERTAIN 40,000,000

ALL KINDS ARE INCLUDED

Nearly 12,000,000 radio sets are in use in the United States. They serve an audience of no less than 40,000,000 persons. These figures are based on a nationwide survey just completed by Radio Retailing. The survey was made in compliance with a request of the Federal Radio Commission. The figures compiled under the direction of M. Clements, manager of Radio Retailing, show that seven and a half million standard receiving sets with loud speaker volume are now in use in the United States.

"Of course this does not include crystal of one-tube receivers of obsolete type," explained Mr. Clements. "If all of these crystal units and single tube affairs which are still in wide use on farms and in rural sections are to be counted, the number of receiving sets in actual service today can be conservatively placed at between eleven and twelve millions. This indicates a total radio audience of at least 40,000,000 people.

"Few persons even in the radio industry realize the large number of these small crystal outfits which have been put into circulation, particularly as premiums. One group of banking institutions has distributed 200,000 of these little sets, combined with customers' savings banks. Other large quantities have been sold direct to customers by chain stores and mail-order houses. Such sets usually whet their owners desires to purchase loud-speaker outfits, sooner or later.

"Among standard receivers at the present time alternating-current sets in cities constitute 90 per cent of all set sales. One large manufacturer has disposed of approximately 200,000 alternating current sets since December, and a second makes is following close behind him with nearly the same output during the past six months. These sets sell at an average price of $150 to $200, complete."

RADIO IS MOST POPULAR IN VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA

Has 78 Sets for Every 1,000 Persons; U. S. Has 76 in Same Ratio.

MANY THEORIES ARE GIVEN

The claim is made that there is no place in the world where radio is more widely used than in Victoria, Australia.

"The proportion of listeners to the population in parts of the United States is perhaps higher than in Victoria," advices from that part of the world tell us, "but the average of Victoria's listeners per thousand of the population exceeds that of U. S. A.

"It is not an unusual sight in many of the suburbs of Melbourne to see a wireless aerial to every house in every street. This applies particularly to the industrial suburbs.

"The number of licenses per thousand of the population in the principal countries is: Victoria, Australia, 78; United States, 76; Sweden, 53.6; Great Britain, 53; Denmark, 44.8; Austria, 43; Germany, 28.1; Australia, 24.2; Norway, 22.1; Switzerland, 15.9; Czechoslovakia, 15.2; Finland, 8; Belgium, 5.

"Many theories have been advanced for the reason of the popularity of wireless in Victoria. Psychological and physiographical reasons have been urged by some, while others say that it is due more to our home-loving instincts."

Nation-Wide Chain To Radio Address

WRHF and WTFF will be included in a Nation-wide network of chain broadcasting from coast to coast today from 2 to 3 p. m., when they will pick up and broadcast the address to be given by Judge J. F. Rutherford, president of the International Bible Students Association, from the Grand Theater at Albany, N. Y. His subject will be "The Truth." WGY, at Schenectady, will be the key station. It may be remembered that Judge Rutherford gave an address last year from Toronto, Canada, over the largest network up to that time.

THE RADIO EDITOR'S MAIL

Opposes Movie Advertising.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: For greatly improved programs: WRC: Cut out all talks. Cut out announcers' talk except to name numbers and artists and station. Cut out the movie advertising every evening. Cut out 80 per cent of the jazz now being given.

C. L. C.

Cut Comedy Announcing.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: A little jazz and very little of that. Cut the comedy in announcing and put that time in music.

Asks for WLWL.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: In looking over your radio programs in The Post I do not see WLWL, the Paulist Fathers' station in New York. I wish you would have the correct program of this station in The Post.

G. J. C.

May 4, 1928.

Because of limited space it has not been possible to carry all the distant stations, but an effort is made to include those which Capital listeners are most interested in and which are apt to be the easiest to tune in. Although WLWL is a 5,000 watt station and we have not had much luck getting it, nevertheless we will be glad to include it in the list whenever it is possible to do so.—RADIO EDITOR.

Hospital Had Three Sets.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: I wondered how it would feel to be in the hospital without a radio. I had planned to have a set connected after a few days but when I woke up after the operation and heard music for a while I thought it was from the Pearly Gates.

Later, however, I found that it was from across the hall, where the father in charge of the hospital is a thirty-second degree fan. He has three complete sets and a phonograph. So we had wonderful music all the time.

Against Cough Drop Numbers.

To the Radio Editor of The Post—Sir: Thought of replacing present radio with the best on market. But not until the trash given in the name of music is eliminated. Jazz is an insult to all. Never should be given air time or space; cough drop numbers, too. Real music, inspiring hymns, instructive lectures, talks, educational and otherwise. Enjoy all worthwhile.

Radio at the Conventions.

As far as possibilities of broadcasting national conventions were concerned those of the last presidential year were merely curtain-raisers. With development and aid of short waves the forthcoming conventions at Kansas City and Houston very likely will be heard clear around the world.

ON THE AIR THIS WEEK

TODAY a special Mother's Day service will be broadcast at 9:30 a. m. from the First Baptist Sunday School, held in the auditorium of the church. At 11 o'clock the services from the same church may be heard through WRC, Dr. S. J. Porter preaching.

At 2 o'clock, through WRC, Dr. Daniel Poling will be heard in an address before the National Youth Conference, in which he will emphasize the reverence due "The Name of Woman." Dr. S. Parkes Cadman's talk on "The Friendship of English Speaking Nations" will be on the air at 3 o'clock, and may be picked up through WRC. As usual, the 4 o'clock services from the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral will be broadcast through WRC, Bishop James E. Freeman preaching.

Both WRHF and WTEF will broadcast the speech by Judge J. F. Rutherford from Albany, N. Y., at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Stetson parade will reproduce the summer cruise of the midshipmen from the Naval Academy at Annapolis during its broadcast at 5 o'clock today, which may be heard through WRC. England will be the country visited during Cook's radio tour at 5:30, which may be picked up through WJZ.

Hans Barth will be heard through WRC in a piano-harpsichord program at 6:05 this evening. A special Mother's Day program will be broadcast at 6:30 o'clock through WRC, at which time Anna Jarvis, founder of the International Mother's Day Association, will make an address.

"Ruth and Naomi" will be the biblical drama presented this evening at 8:45 from WRC.

Denis M. Rooke, who was scheduled to talk on March 28, will be on the air tomorrow night at 6:30 and will discuss "England to India by Light Airplane."

The fact that Aaron Burr, contrary to the accepted public opinion, was never convicted for treason will be brought out during the "Great Moments in History," broadcast at 7, to be heard through WRC tomorrow evening. The Province of Ontario is the section to which the A. & P. Gypsies dedicate their program at 7:30 this week.

A program of Mexican music will be broadcast at 8:30 Monday night through WRC, with George Cehanovsky, barytone of the Metropolitan, and Dolores Cassinelli, concert soprano, as soloists.

Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock Representative William R. Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee, and Representative William A. Oldfield, of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, will outline the predominating issues of the congressional campaign in the Voter's Service Talks.

At 7:30 Tuesday night the Selberling Singers will present a program of request numbers through Station WRC. "In the South," a portrayal of darky days "down home," with the Hall Johnson negro singers, will be on the air at 8 o'clock the same evening as the Eveready offering.

The National Grand Opera Ensemble will broadcast at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, a tabloid version of Bellini's "La Somnambula," with Genia Zielinska, soprano, singing the role of Amina.

The U. S. Marine Band will broadcast a concert through Station WRC at 6 o'clock Thursday evening. Compositions of Franz Schubert will be featured in the Ampico Hour to be heard through WJZ at 7:30 o'clock.

Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, will be toastmaster at a dinner to be given by Percy S. Straus in honor of the French and German Ambassadors and the Austrian and Swedish Ministers on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Ritz-Carlton, the proceedings of which are to be broadcast through WEAF. The subject of the evening's discussion will be "International Aspects of Modern Art in Industrial Design," and the speakers will be Straus, Paul Claudel, Ambassador of the French republic; Baron Friederich Wilhelm von Prittwitz, Ambassador of Germany; Edgar Prochnik, Minister of Austria; Dr. Bruno Paul, one of the founders of the modern art movement in Germany, and Harvey Wiley Corbett, American architect.

During the Palmolive Hour to be broadcast at 9 Friday night, Olive Palmer will sing Eckhart's "Swiss Echo," and she and Paul Oliver will sing as a duet "Give Me One Hour."

Mrs. Harry S. New, wife of the Postmaster General, will speak at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning on "How Uncle Sam Protects the American Dinner Table."

At 7 o'clock Saturday evening through WRC the U. S. Navy Band will broadcast among other selections the overture to "Euryanthe." A selection from "Iolanthe" will be included in the Slumber Music program at 10 o'clock.

Message of President First to Reach Greenly

It was learned at the time of the visit of the German Irish fliers to Washington that though everybody was trying to reach them at Greenly the wireless message from President Calvin Coolidge was really the first they received.

Also that the reply to the President's message was the first to be sent by the fliers to the waiting world. At the moment President Coolidge was putting the finishing touches on his message, Rear Admiral Charles F. Hughes happened to be at the White House and was asked by the Secretary to the President, Everett Sanders, if the Navy wireless service could reach the fliers at Greenly.

Admiral Hughes is said to have replied that he believed the Navy could get it through if any one could. Whereupon he took the Presidential message back with him to the Navy Department and it was sent forthwith.

U. S. BROADCASTERS NERVOUSLY WAITING FOR REALLOCATION

Many Visit the Capital to Get a Line on the Board's Pending Policy.

CALLERS ARE NOT GIVEN INFORMATION WANTED

Fight to Postpone Drastic Revamping Predicted Among Members of Congress.

On the anxious seat as they probably never have been since the development of the art, broadcasters nervously await the outcome of the Federal Radio Commission's deliberations on the reallocation plan in conformity with the radio act. Singly and collectively they have been "gumshoeing" into the Capital, ostensibly on other business, but really to try to get a line on what course of action the commission is likely to recommend in the way of general policy, but more to the point what is apt to "happen" to their own station.

Visitors Overburden Board.

They depart little the wiser, for while the commission has undoubtedly arrived at some conclusion with regard to general policies, they have given little or no thought to individual stations and probably will not be up to this for sometime.

While the commissioners have been endeavoring to see all these callers, their presence, excepting when they have offered constructive suggestions for the improvement of the broadcasting situation as a whole, has not been particularly helpful and individual commissioners are beginning to show signs of the strain of trying to receive the numerous visitors on the one hand and yet on the other to conserve enough time to properly consider the knotty problem in hand.

Congress Not So Eager.

There is again persistently afloat the rumor that if the commission is to recommend drastic revamping of the broadcasting system that it will be urged by those whose political fortunes are at stake to "stall along" until after Congress adjourns a month or so hence for the political conventions before doing so. This is purely a political observation, the theory being that if a wholesale changing of wave-lenght, time division power cutting, and dropping off of stations were ordered, this might cause an explosion among the broadcasters, the reaction of which would be felt in Congress with the logical result of senators and representatives personally rushing up to the radio commission with their grievances.

It is further argued that if the changes are allowed to drift along until after Congress and the conventions adjourn, senators and representatives will be back home and so busily occupied with their campaigns that they won't be concerning themselves much about radio or anything else excepting their reelections.

Young Girls Backing Club Candidate

Detroit, Mich., May 12 (A.P.).—The first candidate for office in the General Federatoin of Women's Clubs to have the active support of a group of young girls is Mrs. W. R. Alvord, of Detroit, nominee for recording secretary.

The campaign group is made up of the officers of the eight large junior clubs of the federation in the Detroit area. The girls are carrying on active preconvention work for their favorite and will carry their activities to San Antonio May 28 to the biennial convention of the general federation.

Schoolhouse Is Taken To Alaska by Teacher

Seattle, Wash., May 12 (A.P.).—When Edwin Hunnicut sailed from Alaska recently abroad the United States Bureau of Education Power Schooner Boxer, he carried with him not only his school books, but also his schoolhouse.

Hunnicut, a carpenter as well as teacher, is bound for Egegik, in the Bristol Bay District, where a new Government station is being established. The building is in knockdown form and besides accommodating 28 students, will be Hunnicut's home.

Cuban Bill Would Tax Each Cigar Machine

Havana, May 12 (A.P.).—A bill seeking to impose an annual tax of $100,000 on each cigarmaking machine operated in Cuba has been introduced in the house of representatives. Its purpose is to protect the Cuban hand workers. The measure proposes long prison sentences for infractions of its provisions.

Control of Zinc Market Voted.

Brussels, May 12 (A.P.).—Control of the zinc market by restriction of production should necessity arise was unanimously favored by the international meeting of zinc producers in a resolution here. The American producers participated in the voting.

Short Waves

Bulbs used in the manufacture of radio tubes are to be assessed a duty of 30 per cent when imported into the United States, according to a decision made by customs officials in Washington.

A proposed city ordinance in St. Louis would make illegal the operation of radio loud speakers and phonographs in public streets.

Despite bandit disturbances new broadcasting stations have been contracted for in Managua and other cities in Nicaragua.

MASONIC NOTES.

Trinity Lodge, No. 41, will attend services this morning at 11 o'clock at Christ Church, Thirty-first and O streets, of which the Rev. E. Pinckney Wroth, chaplain of the lodge, is the rector.

Senior Deacon Haskell will preside during the conferring of the E. A. degree in East Gate Lodge, No. 34, Wednesday evening.

Theodore Roosevelt Lodge, No. 44, will have the F. C. degree Wednesday evening with the Messrs. Wolcott and Webb heading the official line during the work.

The master of Myron M. Parker Lodge has announced that the entered apprentice degree will be conferred next Tuesday evening. The special communication last Thursday, when both the first and second degrees were presented, was unusually interesting and very well attended.

The master of La Fayette Lodge, No. 19, H. C. Brunner, announces that the degree of fellowcraft will be conferred at the regular communication on Thursday evening, with Senior Deacon J. Robert Lee heading the official line. Announcement is also made that the special communication scheduled for May 31 has been called off.

Master Stanley announces that Singleton Lodge will have an open meeting at the communication next Thursday evening. The lodge will be addressed by a prominent Masonic speaker. The master Mason degree which was originally schduled for this communication will be conferred by the past masters at a special communication May 25.

The stated communication of Justice Lodge, No. 46, next Friday, has been called off in order that the lodge may visit Poolesville Lodge, No. 214, of Poolesville, Md., on that evening. The Poolsville Lodge will confer the master Mason degree in the early evening and upon the arrival of the members of Justice Lodge will confer their famous tarheel degree. This degree which is prevalent in various Masonic districts in Maryland, and especially throughout Montgomery County, is expected to prove very entertaining. After completion of the work refreshments will be provided. The caravan will leave the temple at Thirteenth street and New York avenue promptly at 7 o'clock.

ROYAL ARCH.

La Fayette Chapter, No. 5, will confer the mark master's degree Tuesday evening, with the scribe, F. Willson Camp, in the east. Refreshments will be served.

The attention of the craft is called to the visit of Druid Chapter, No. 28, of Baltimore, on June 5, when they will exemplify the opening of a Royal Arch chapter according to the Maryland ritual and will also confer the most excellent master's degree according to their amplified ritual.

High Priest William D. Wilson, of Hiram Chapter, No. 10, announces the past master and most excellent master degrees for the convocation of the chapter tomorrow evening. There will be radio entertainment and refreshments after the regular business meeting. All members of the craft are invited.

Mount Horeb Chapter held an open meeting Tuesday evening, when a goodly number greeted Past Grand High Priest William W. Jermane, who entertained with an address in which he compared conditions as they exist today as compared with those following the Civil War. Companion Weber entertained with a series of records of the works of Richard Wagner. Among those present were Past High Priests Fielder I. Hunter, Richard M. Towson, F. F. Kimmell, John A. Taubenschmidt and Albert C. Shafer. High Priest P. Raymond Boesch announced the mark master degree, which will be conferred by the scribe, John Schommer, as the work for the convocation on May 22.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

The seventh annual birthday party of Brightwood Commandery, No. 6, will be held Tuesday evening in the banquet hall of Brightwood Masonic Temple. This party is the outstanding social event of the commandery and the affair this year promises to surpass all others, it is announced. Dinner will be served promptly at 7 o'clock and will be followed by an entertainment featuring several well-known local radio artists. After the entertainment there will be dancing. The committee on arrangements is composed of Generalissimo A. A. Ludwig, chairman; Past Commanders Arthur C. Shaw and Fred C. Blood, William Smith, Samuel B. Reeder and Walter E. Lewis.

THE GROTTO.

Monarch Arthur M. Poynton announces that the next monthly goodfellowship night of Kallipolis Grotto will be held at grotto headquarters on Tuesday evening. The entertainment will be in charge of Past Monarch Henry J. Gompers and members of the drill corps. All prophets are invited and are privileged to bring a Master Mason friend.

A preconvention ceremonial, short form, will be held on May 31. This will be the last opportunity for the initiation of candidates prior to the annual convention to be held in Richmond, Va., June 5, 6 and 7.

TALL CEDARS OF LEBANON.

Capitol Forest, No. 104, has instructed its delegates at the twenty-sixth annual session of the supreme forest, which is being held next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Atlantic City, N. J., to vote for District Representative George H. Hensler, of Baltimore Forest, No. 45, Baltimore, for junior deputy supreme tall cedar.

On the evening of April 28 a number of officers of Capitol Forest visited Cambridge, Md., and assisted in the institution of a new forest, Chesapeake Forest, No. 115, of that city. Those elected as the first officers of the "baby forest" were as follows: W. Julian James, grand tall cedar; Philip B. Matthews, senior deputy grand tall cedar; Milton L. Hubbard, junior deputy grand tall cedar; Edwin M. Henry, scribe, and George W. Phillips, treasurer.

ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

The matron of Mount Pleasant Chapter, No. 34, announces that the services at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home this afternoon will be held under the auspices of that chapter and will be conducted by the Rev. Kyle Boothe, of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church. A large attendance is requested.

At the last meeting of Mount Pleasant Chapter its fourth birthday was celebrated in a fitting manner, the outstanding event being the gypsy operetta put on by members of the chapter. Next Friday evening degree work will be the principal feature of the meeting of the chapter and following the work there will be a program in charge of Harry Pitts.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT.

Saturday—Canton Washington, No. 1, special drill.

The annual session of the sovereign grand lodge will be held in Montreal, Canada, next September. The grand master of the District has asked the appointment of representatives from the subordinate and Rebekah lodges, who will meet with Grand Secretary Harry L. Andersen, whom he has appointed chairman of the committee in charge, in the near future.

At a well-attended and enthusiastic meeting of Mount Pleasant Lodge, No. 29, it was decided to devote the first Tuesday evening in June to memorial exercises for those members who have passed away during the last year.

The office of the grand secretary has received word from the deputy grand sire, the Hon. Frank W. Martin, of Boise, Idaho, that he expects to be in this city in June, at which time he desires to have a conference with all the officers of the grand lodge, the grand encampment and the Rebekah Assembly.

Officers and other members of Federal City Lodge No. 20 on Thursday evening will pay a fraternal visit to Towson Lodge, of Towson, Md., and confer the first degree on a class of candidates for the latter lodge. The buses will leave the I. O. O. F. Temple at 6 o'clock. A special degree staff under the direction of Past Grand Edward L. Weber, assisted by Past Grand William H. McConnell, will confer the degree. The grand master and several of the other grand lodge officers are expected to accompany Federal City Lodge on this visit, which promises to be an unusually interesting one.

On Wednesday evening, May 23, the officers and other members of Columbia Lodge, No. 10, will leave the temple in buses at 6 o'clock for Frederick, Md., where they will pay a fraternal visit to Frederick City Lodge, where the crack first degree staff of the local lodge will confer the first degree on a large class of candidates. Degree Director Past Grand Samuel G. Taylor is in charge of the team.

The grand master has appointed Grand Marshal Walter S. Norway chairman of the committee in charge of the memorial services, which, Mr. Norway announces, will be held on Sunday evening, June 10, at the Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church, John Marshall place and C street, at 8 o'clock. The Rev. J. Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, is the pastor of the church. A request for the appointment of representatives from the various subordinate and Rebekah bodies for the committee has been made. This committee will meet in the near future at the call of Grand Marshal Norway.

Roscoe Jenkins, grand patriarch, accompanied by the other officers of the grand encampment of the District of Columbia, will pay to Magenenu Encampment, No. 4, their annual visitation on Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. This is the "home" encampment of the grand patriarch and Grand Outside Sentinel Murrison.

Columbian Encampment, No. 1, met Wednesday evening and conferred the patriarchal degree on a class of candidates.

Mt. Nebo Encampment, No. 6, will entertain the grand patriarch at its meeting Tuesday evening. Thomas C. Mettler, W. C. W. Burgess and Fred R. Leaman, committee on arrangements, promise a surprise.

Fred D. Stuart Encampment, No. 7, received several applications at the last meeting and will confer the patriarchal degree on a class at its next meeting.

THE REBEKAHS

LODGES.

Tomorrow—Esther, degree rehearsal.
Tuesday—Fidelity, Friendship.
Thursday—Dorcas, entertainment; Mount Pleasant.
Friday—Miriam.

There will be a short business session of Esther Lodge tomorrow evening, followed by a degree rehearsal. The degree director, Miss Elma Geiger, requests all members of the staff to be present.

Noble Grand Miss Ruth Thorn, of Friendship Lodge, announces a business meeting of the lodge for Tuesday evening.

The Past Noble Grands Club will visit Clarendon Rebekah Lodge tomorrow evening. The members will meet at the Georgetown bridge at 7:30 o'clock. The president, Mrs. Nettie R. Mettler, requests the attendance of the members.

The last of the spring visitations was held on Monday evening at Naomi Lodge. The president of the Rebekah Assembly, Mrs. M. Margaret Royston, and her corps of officers were accompanied by the grand master, J. Burton Kincer, and Grand Lodge officers. The lodge presented Mrs. Royston with a silver tea set, Mr. Kincer with studs and cuff links and Miss Emma T. Strobel, treasurer of the assembly, with a bag. Roses were also presented the assembly and Grand Lodge officers. An entertainment followed the meeting, after which refreshments were served.

A large number of Rebekahs attended the sixth anniversary of Schuyler Colfax Lodge on Tuesday evening. A short business session was followed by a program. The salute to the flag was given by Master Charles Leannarda, who also recited "Friendship's Road." James Jones sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. H. W. Test; readings were given by Miss Johnson and old-time music by the North State Fiddlers, led by Hercel Reese. The large birthday cake was placed in the center of the room. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Rosa B. Homan, noble grand of Dorcas Lodge, requests the members of her lodge and the I. O. O. F. members to attend divine services at the Waugh M. E. Church, Third and A streets northeast, this evening at 8 o'clock. The sermon will be delivered by the minister, the Rev. Dr. Hoffman. Mrs. Homan also announces a short business meeting of Dorcas Lodge on Thursday evening, followed by an entertainment. All Rebekahs are invited. Nettie Gray has charge of the program.

The Rebekahs were entertained at the New Willard last Tuesday evening at a reception and dance given in honor of the grand master, J. Burton Kincer.

A minstrel show will be given at Brightwood Lodge on May 22. The noble grand, Mrs. Anita Haight, presented an altar cloth to the lodge at the meeting last Tuesday evening.

The Home Circle will hold a cooked food sale at the Arcade Market next Saturday.

WOODMEN OF THE WORLD

CALENDAR.

Monday—Fraser Camp.
Wednesday—Oak Camp.
Thursday—Minstrel show.
Friday—Boosters Club.

Elm Camp's uniform rank company has secured the services of a well-known minstrel troupe to present a first-class show next Thursday evening at the Eastern High School Auditorium. Capt. Wade has his committees working to make this a gala event for Woodcraft and all local sovereigns and their friends are invited.

The prize-winning companies at the encampment this summer will be sent to a national encampment in 1929. The local regiment is preparing four units to enter the competitive drills. Companies A, B and C are now uniformed and equipped for campaigning.

Past President J. E. Dickey of the Boosters Club is to be presented with a past officer's jewel at the boosters' convention next Friday evening. The following camps are expected to send full delegations to this session: Alpha, Old Glory, Mount Vernon, Fraser, Oak, Elm, Maple, Hickory, Silver Spring and Forestville.

Four candidates were initiated into the mysteries of Woodcraft at Elm Camp last week and received the protection degree.

State Manager L. C. Jones presided at a special meeting of local deputies on Thursday evening at the temple. He announced the inauguration of a mail course of instruction by the home office at Omaha.

JR. O. U. A. M.

J. Morgan Read Council, No. 1, held its regular meeting with Councilor W. Floyd Spurlin presiding and all officers present. One application for membership was presented, one former member reinstated and two new members, recently initiated by the degree and drill teams of Anacostia Council, were received into full membership. Acting Marshal August L. Dahler presented State Councilor Oscar T. Harlow and his associate State officers, who were received by Councilor Spurlin. The address of welcome was delivered by Chaplain Edward B. Pitts. Councilor Spurlin introduced Junior Past State Councilor John D. Simpson, who, in an appropriate address, lauded the State councilor for his faithfulness to the order and concluded by presenting State Councilor Harlow with a billfold on behalf of J. Morgan Read Council, his "home" council. State Secretary John Prender presented a bouquet of red carnations to the State councilor to be given to Mrs. Harlow on behalf of J. Morgan Read Council.

Announcement was made by the state secretary that for the first time the prizes offered to the council having the largest number in aggregate attendance and in percentage attendance during the series of State visitations had been won by the same council, and congratulated the members of J. Morgan Read Council upon winning both. National Outside Sentinel J. A. Smithson made an interesting address on events of benefit to the order, and concluded his remarks by presenting a billfold to Past Councilor Charles F. Muller, deputy to Anacostia Council, on behalf of that council. Deputy State Councilor Muller, in accepting the gift, praised the members of Anacostia Council for their cooperation and loyal support of him. Others who spoke were National Representative F. W. Ebhardt, of Virginia; Deputy National Councilor John H. Trimyer, of the District of Columbia; the deputy to J. Morgan Read Council, A. L. Dahler, State Inside Sentinel William P. Earnest, jr., and State Treasurer Thomas F. Jones. Vice Councilor Perry A. Martin, chairman of the good of the order committee, assisted by Past Councilors F. W. Muller, Malcolm Reintzel, C. F. Muller and I. E. Widmeyer, served supper, which was followed by a smoker. William P. Earnest, jr., of J. Morgan Read Council, and R. H. Norton, of Anacostia Council, were the winners of a gold coin.

Independent Council, No. 2, met with Councilor E. B. Warren presiding. Interesting reports were made by the several committees and addresses delivered by National Representative F. D. Seiffert and Deputy State Councilor F. Bruckshen. Among the visitors who spoke were Past Councilor August L. Dahler, of Liberty Bell Council; Councilor William Dahler, of Francis Scott Key Council; J. B. Freeman, N. W. Smith, T. Helmers and Fred Dahler.

Andrew Jackson Council, No. 16, met Tuesday evening with Councilor G. O. Sunday presiding and all officers present. Two former members were reinstated. Interesting remarks were made by Deputy State Councilor Charles Hild, National Committeeman T. E. Skinner, Past Councilor C. T. Lacy and Past Councilor J. S. Latham.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA

Anacostia Council, No. 14, met Wednesday evening with the councilor, Gertrude Everhart, presiding. Under the direction of Capt. Howard Beall the degrees of loyalty, love and patriotism were conferred on Madison Price with Past State Councilor Mary P. James as the initiatory councilor, and Daisy I. Smithson and the State council inside sentinel, Ethel Burroughs, as flag bearers. One meeting night each month has been set aside for social night, each month having a different committee. This month the council will be entertained by the men members with Philip J. Martin as chairman. At the close of the last meeting a get-together hour was observed and refreshments were served.

Goodwill Council, No. 15, will hold a box party and social on Thursday evening. Members are invited and are requested to bring a box with them. It is announced that a card party will be held at the Junior Order Hall on May 31.

An old-fashioned Virginia square dance will be given for the benefit of the orphans' home fund of the organization on Monday evening, May 21, at 8:30 o'clock, in the Naval Lodge Hall, Fourth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, by Golden Rule Council, No. 10, with Mrs. Eva Wood as chairman in charge of the general arrangements.

Members of the order are requested to invite their friends to attend the memorial service at the Grace Baptist Church Sunday evening, May 27. Donations for flowers are now being received by Mrs. Cora L. Thompson, 729 Thirteenth street southeast, chairman of the State council committee on good of the order.

Betsy Ross Council, No. 25, held a meeting Wednesday evening, with the councilor, Mrs. Mary R. Quade, presiding. The following committees reported: Charles E. Whitney, carnival; Mrs. Ada M. Strickland, candy and resolutions; Miss Hattie Miller, card party and Mrs. Bernice E. Trotter, relief. Other business transacted was nomination of officers and the outlining of plans for the birthday celebration next Wednesday evening, when the council will be one year old. There will be a short program and refreshments.

Kenilworth Council, No. 13, met Tuesday evening, with the councilor, Mrs. Virginia Adair, presiding. Report was made on the Bible committee by Past Councilor John Driggers, in which he announced that the presentation would be made to the Presbyterian Church jointly between this council and Woodrow Wilson Council, No. 11 of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at the first Sunday evening service in June. Nomination of offices for the ensuing term was made as follows: Mrs. Maylee Kirby, councilor; Randolph L. Jennings, associate councilor; Mrs. Pauline Steele, vice councilor; Paul Dahlman, associate vice councilor; Miss Margaret Jennings, conductress; Miss Elizabeth Hunter, outside sentinel; Miss Margaret Terncak, inside sentinel; Mrs. Ethel L. Keefe, recording secretary; Mrs. Nicie Payton, treasurer; Mrs. Susie A. Jennings, financial secretary; Miss Clara Dunkley, assistant recording secretary; representatives to the State council, Mrs. Sarah Dahlman, Mrs. Susie Jennings and Mrs. Naomi Gibson. At this meeting the council received a fraternal visit from Star Spangled Banner Council, No. 7, of Capitol Heights, Md. The delegation was headed by the State council outside sentinel, Mrs. Margaret Halfpap. The guests were welcomed on behalf of the members of Kenilworth Council by the councilor, Mrs. Adair. Mrs. Edith Davis, Mrs. Maude Abbott and Mrs. Margaret Halfpap spoke for the Maryland delegation, and Deputy State Councilor Ollie Montgomery and Scribe George A. Cohill, from Golden Rule Council and Mrs. Jennie Drigger, of Mayflower Council, delivered addresses.

A social session was held with Mrs. Ethel L. Keefe as chairman of the committee in charge. She was assisted by Miss Esther Dunkley in charge of the games, and Mrs. Naomi Gibson and Miss Margaret Jennings in charge of refreshments. Mrs. Jennie Driggers gave a reading and piano selections were rendered by Miss Elizabeth Hunter. The social hour concluded with refreshments served by Mrs. Ethel L. Keefe and her committee, assisted by the men of the council.

Old Glory Council, No. 12, met Monday evening with the councilor, Mrs. Myra Courtney, presiding. Remarks were made by Past Councilor Mildred Rock and National Representative Mary A. Ferguson, who is also the deputy State councilor. During the social hour refreshments were served by the chairman of the good of the order committee.

Triumph Council, No. 8, was called to order Thursday evening by the councilor, Mrs. Amelia Budesheim. Associate Junior Past Councilor Agnes Barbour was tendered a vote of thanks on the success of the social she held recently. Mrs. Mary Towers acted as pianist for the evening. Past Councilor Harry Buell made a report on the complimentary dance which he is holding next Thursday. At the close of a brief meeting games were played and refreshments were served.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Hermione Lodge, No. 12, has changed its meeting nights to the first and third Fridays of each month. The change has been made, it is stated, in anticipation of increased activity both in rank work and social affairs. The lodge meets at Wisconsin avenue and M street northwest.

Syracusians Lodge, No. 10, and Rathbone-Superior Lodge, No. 29, will visit the Pythian Lodge at Gaithersburg tomorrow evening.

The board of directors of the Knights of Pythias Hall Association will meet tomorrow evening and transact important business. On June 1 the board will receive the report of the finance committee for presentation at the meeting of the stockholders on June 5, at which an election of a new board of directors will be held.

Members of the ways and means committee are requested to attend the meeting of that committee next Saturday evening, at which matters of importance will be discussed.

Webster Lodge had as visitors at its last convention Past Grand Chancellor Albert Gorham, who has just returned from Miami, Fla., and J. E. Willis, of Ivanhoe Lodge, Portland, Oreg. Mr. Willis, who is now living in this city, gave an interesting talk on the early days in the development of Portland.

Chancellor Commander Rhodes, of Home Lodge, No. 31, requests all members to attend the meeting of the lodge tomorrow evening, at which an amendment to the grand statutes, giving Home Lodge the privileges accorded the other lodges, will be presented.

Washington Company No. 1, Uniform Rank, will meet Thursday evening. Capt. Kreisel requests the attendance of all members.

The committee in charge of the memorial services to be held on June 10 held an important meeting Thursday evening, with Grand Chancellor A. Lacy Embrey acting as chairman. The work of the several committees was defined, and announcement was made that plans were being perfected to make the flag day and memorial services the most elaborate ever held by the order. The memorial committee meets each Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

Supreme Vice Chancellor Alva M. Lumpkin will arrive in Washington on Monday evening, June 11, and will accompany the members of the order to Arlington Cemetery the next morning at 11 o'clock, and from there to Mount Vernon. Tuesday evening a subscription banquet will be held at the Washington Hotel.

Rathbone Temple, No. 8, Pythian Sisters, held its regular meeting Friday evening, with Mrs. Lawson presiding. It was announced that the birthday party and grand visitation of the temple would be held on May 18. The guests will include the grand chancellor and his associate grand lodge officers. The committee on arrangements is composed of Mrs. Marks, chairman; all the officers of the temple and also Mrs. Payne, Mrs. Kraemer, Mrs. Motyka, Mr. and Mrs. Rudy, Mr. and Mrs. Baum, Mr. Rowe, Mrs. Craemer, Mrs. Ourand, Mrs. [illegible]ting, Mrs. Saxton, Mr. and Mrs. Southard, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Whitworth and Mrs. Helbig. The temples in Fredericksburg and Baltimore have been invited to attend the affair. Mrs. Marks announced a meeting of the degree team, of which she is president, for tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. Cordelia Vaunchill.

Friendship Temple, No. 9, Pythian Sisters, met Wednesday evening, Mrs. G. Fortune, most excellent chief, presiding. At the close of a short meeting next Wednesday evening there will be a card party given under the chairmanship of Mrs. Ella Embrey. On May 22 a number of the members will go to Fredericksburg, Va., when Mrs. N. Crowthers, grand chief of Virginia, will make her official visit.

FRATERNAL ORDER OF EAGLES

The annual election of officers of Washington Aerie, No. 125, held Monday evening, resulted as follows: Worthy president, Luther B. Hayes; worthy vice president, J. W. Hambleton; worthy chaplain, Henry Backenheimer; secretary, George W. Sollers; treasurer, Walter Brown; physician, Dr. Charles J. Demas; inner guard, William E. Brown; outside guard, T. Funari; trustees, Jacob Oppenheimer, H. H. Trundle and W. A. Barger. O. E. Rehbern was advanced to the office of past worthy president. A large number of members attended the meeting, which was held in the aerie's new quarters in the Pythian Temple.

ROYAL ARCANUM

In the absence of the regent, Miss Dorothy Alberger, who was in attendance at the annual convention of the supreme council, Loyal Ladies of the Arcanum, at Asbury Park, N. J., Vice Regent Nellie Lewis presided at the meeting of District Council last Monday evening. Arrangements were completed for a benefit card party, to be held in the hall at 24 Grant place on Monday evening, May 21. Among those present were Mrs. Cora Giles, Mrs. Alice Klotz, Mrs. Katherine Jacobs, Mrs. Vera Whalen, Mrs. C. R. Cotton and Mrs. B. W. Bollinger. Refreshments were served.

Kismet Council met Wednesday evening with Regent R. G. Klotz presiding. Secretary J. T. Whalen, Collector B. W. Bollinger, Treasurer R. L. West and Guide J. W. Berkeley were at their respective stations. After regular business refreshments were served. Among those present were the Messrs. Hess, Ward, Burroughs, Cotton Pate, Schryer, Cole, Johnson and Chestnut. Past Grand Regent Warren M. Schooner was guest and speaker of the evening. Award of prizes to the Royal Arcanum Bowling League for the season were made.

The Royal Arcanum Booster Club has made arrangements to meet with Municipal Council tomorrow evening, and an elaborate program of entertainment has been prepared. The annual election of officers will be held.

The annual memorial services in remembrance of members of the order deceased during the past year will be held Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Pythian Temple, third floor front hall. A fitting program has been prepared.

Regent A. B. Whedon directed the meeting of Capitol Council on Wednesday evening. He was assisted by Secretary O. H. P. Scott and Collector A. L. Ebersole. Past Grand Regent Sidney I. Bessellevre was the guest of the evening and Grand Guide Ed T. Green was the speaker. After regular transaction of business the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee and a program was presented.

NATIONAL UNION

The spring ceremonial was held in Pythian Temple recently with Jack Marshall presiding. Visitors present were former president of the senate, Henry Smale, of Chicago, Ill.; Senate Secretary E. A. Myers, of Toledo, Ohio and the Messrs. Young and Holman, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who launded the work of Victory Council's degree team under the leadership of W. T. Bell, in conferring the degrees on a large class of candidates. A smoker followed the work.

The theater party at the National Theater Tuesday evening for the benefit of the hospital service association was a success. M. J. Kindsfather headed the committee in charge.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS OF AMERICA.

Carnation and Martha McCaffrey Camps have completed arrangements for the entertainment of Supreme Manager Walch next Friday evening at 8 o'clock at the Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets northeast. All members of the order are invited.

MODERN WOODMEN OF AMERICA

Washington Camp, No. 11464, entertained the newly-appointed State deputy, Dr. S. C. A. Rubey, at its last meeting. He was accompanied by District Deputy Henry H. Mill

Cars and Car Care

MOTORDOM

Roads and Touring

Much of Tour's Success Rests on Condition of Car

Putting Engine, Drive and Safety Mechanism in Best of Shape Before Starting Assures Happy, Carefree Summer Journey.

As the car goes, so goes the tour.

In other words, if the car goes well, the tour goes well; but if the car runs poorly, the fine edge of motor wayfaring is dulled.

So, when the motorist and his family sit down to plan the outing, the car itself is a good place to start.

In considering the car prior to starting on the long tour, the motorist should realize that there really is a vast difference between the type of driving that one does from day to day and that one will do once the highway looms clear and straight ahead. The familiar "proving ground," the motorist's daily route, may show him the condition of the car for that particular trip, but when he hits the rural road, he encounters conditions that are entirely new and unfamiliar.

In the main, preparing the car for the different type of service for which it will be called, largely is a matter of detail and inspection. One may assume this from the fact that the modern motor car is a very superior product and much better maintained.

In considering the detailed attention that may be essential to fitting the car for the tour, the engine offers an ideal starting point. In what way does the engine's duty on the tour differ from its ordinary service? The answer to this question determines in large measure just what is necessary to make it ready.

Touring Speeds Higher.

One may assume, in the first place, that the touring pace will exceed that of ordinary driving. In addition, strange ascents and unfamiliar descents will be met. Instead of running from 10 to, perhaps, 30 miles a day, the car will be driven from 200 to 250 or 300 miles. It will have few breathing spells during the daylight hours. Thus, it is apparent that the engine of the tourist's car must have speed and power and, of equal importance, stamina. It must run fast, pull hard and stick to its more or less unfamiliar schedule of much longer periods than usual.

The car owner who has kept his automobile in good condition may find the machine ready after merely filling up the gasoline tank, putting air into the tires and checking the crankcase lubricant. Even the man who has been a bit careless of these details will find much less to do than he may anticipate.

Carburetion, ignition, cooling and lubrication are the four points of engine preparation to be considered. Seeing that the first item is taken care of largely as a matter of cleaning and adjustment. The cleaning should begin at the vacuum tank. From there it should proceed through the feed line to the filter or strainer. It may be found in the case of the filter, that some water has gathered in the base. This should be drained, and if the chamois is excessively dirty or worn, it will pay to replace it.

Strainer Needs Cleaning.

In the case of the strainer where the fuel line enters the carburetor, it is well to take it off and wash it thoroughly in gasoline or kerosene, being careful, of course, not to break it or get it out of shape. If the strainer has rusted, be sure all of the rust is removed.

After the cleaning is complete, one should be certain to make all connections absolutely tight.

The matter of carburetor adjustment largely is dependent upon the type of driving to be encountered. In the main, however, one may count upon a leaner mixture to assure good operation.

The general arrival of antiknock fuels has eliminated much of the necessity of cleaning carbon before starting the tour. If, however, the engine has not been treated to this form of care for a long period, it might be found helpful before the tour gets under way.

As to ignition, one should be sure it is right before setting forth on one's journey. If the timing is slow, the car will heat excessively and show all the vagaries that an overheated engine always reveals—a lack of power, general sluggishness and excessive valve deterioration. This may not manifest itself on the average daily trip to and from the business district, but the touring drive soon brings out the trouble.

If speed is one of the primary considerations of the traveler, it might be found helpful to set the timing slightly above normal. This may be unwise, however, if hills are to be encountered, for it may mean a loss of power under such conditions.

Timing Needs Consideration.

The importance of having the cooling system functioning perfectly is obvious. The first step toward assuring adequate cooling is to flush out the system thoroughly. A diluted mixture of salsoda is excellent to remove scale, but this may not be necessary. It may be sufficient to insert the garden hose in the top of the radiator and allow the water to run through rather forcefully for a few minutes.

If the car is equipped with a thermostat, one should be certain that the valve is in good working order.

The fan, playing a most vital part in cooling, deserves attention. The belt should be checked against slippage, but should not be so tight that it will stretch or drag on the shaft.

Linked up with the problem of cooling and tremendously important is the matter of engine lubrication. Regardless of the condition of the lubricant in the crankcase, it is well to consider its replacement with fresh, able-bodied oil before taking to the highway on the long tour. In addition, it may prove helpful to have the case flushed with a light oil to remove as much sludge and abrasive as possible.

Of course, the car equipped with an oil rectifier may not need this treatment, but one should make certain of this before proceeding. The oil meter on the instrument board usually indicates the condition of the pump with fair accuracy, but if any deficiency is suspected in this vital part of the engine it should be rectified before the tour begins.

Drive Mechanism Next.

With carburetion, ignition, cooling and lubrication taken care of, the engine is ready for the trip.

The next consideration is the power transmission units, the transmission gears, the propeller shaft, universal joints, and the differential. In the case of all of these units, long trip preparation involves largely lubrication. Because the car will be subjected to hours of driving at a time, it may be well to use a heavier grease in the transmission case and in the differential. The worn universal joint should be treated with a heavy lubricant. A lighter grease quickly is thinned by the heat and thrown out and, frequently, the joint is running dry before the driver realizes the situation.

The mechanical units of the car prepared, the next consideration should be its safety features, with emphasis laid particularly on brakes, steering and tires.

Venturing forth without being certain of the car's brakes borders on foolhardiness. They should be functioning with perfect efficiency and equalization should be absolute. Good brakes are especially essential on unfamiliar high ways where sharp curves and sharper descents suddenly confront the stranger.

Check Steering Carefully.

Tourists would save themselves many uncomfortable if not hazardous moments if they made it a point to have the steering apparatus thoroughly inspected before starting out. Again the abnormality of the service on the car's part is responsible for this need. High speeds and unfamiliar roads, not to mention possible congestion of traffic when one has become fatigued, necessitate easy and accurate steering.

If one is skeptical of the tires on the car, it is wise to overcome all doubts before starting. Old tires can better be worn out in short-run service than at any other time.

These are the essential details of shaping the car for the trip. If everyone of them were attended to, the cost would not be prohibitive for, in spite of the number of items, the whole process amounts to having the car thoroughly and completely inspected and lubricated. In considering the advantage of this process, it is well to remember that, all other things apart:

As the car goes, so goes the tour.

SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN IS LAUNCHED IN VIRGINIA

Drive Marks Beginning of Yearly Period of Free Car Inspection.

TEST STATIONS SELECTED

Virginia during the last week embarked upon a "save-a-life" campaign with the purpose of establishing a regular annual period of free mechanical inspection of all motor vehicles licensed to operate in the State. The campaign will be in progress until June 2.

A proclamation, in which he urged all automobile owners to avail themselves of this opportunity of free inspection to eliminate defects, was issued by Gov. Harry F. Byrd, and the direction of the project given in charge of James M. Hayes, jr., commissioner of motor vehicles of Virginia. Service stations and garages throughout the State have been asked to cooperate, and a certain number have been designated as official testing establishments.

Brakes, lights, horns, steering apparatus, windshield wipers and rear-view mirrors on trucks are to be pieces of equipment on which emphasis will be laid in the mechanical inspection. It is believed that these are the parts which are most likely to become defective and, when defective, are responsible for a large number of the serious accidents which take place every year.

Official inspection stickers will be issued to all cars and trucks which have been examined and found to be in good condition or which have been put in good condition as a result of the examination. Owners may select any official testing station, and adjustments or repairs found to be necessary for safe operation may at the owner's order be charged for at the usual standard rate of charge.

The "save-a-life" campaign is really an intensive effort to cut down the accident rate in Virginia, according to Commissioner Hayes. It is the belief of automobile authorities throughout the United States, he declares, that, if all motor vehicles could be easily and quickly controlled by their drivers, the accident rate would diminish rapidly.

"We want no unsafe automobile on the roads in Virginia," said Mr. Hayes, in announcing the details of the campaign. "It is perfectly obvious that the best driver in the world can not stop a car which 'has no brakes' or warn pedestrians and other cars if the horn is not working. Inspection of drivers is not sufficient. The vehicles they drive must also be in safe condition to prevent injury to themselves and others.

"Fifty-nine per cent of the deaths from automobile accident in the United States are caused by defects in the mechanical condition of the automobile itself. A modern automobile is good for tens of thousands of miles of service, and is entirely safe in the hands of a careful driver, but being a piece of machinery, it requires regular mechanical inspection at least once a year to keep it in good running order, and to operate it economically and safely."

TRUCK AND TRACTOR SHOW IS SUCCESSFUL

Altoona Enterprise Proves Popular—Exhibit Covered Wide Field.

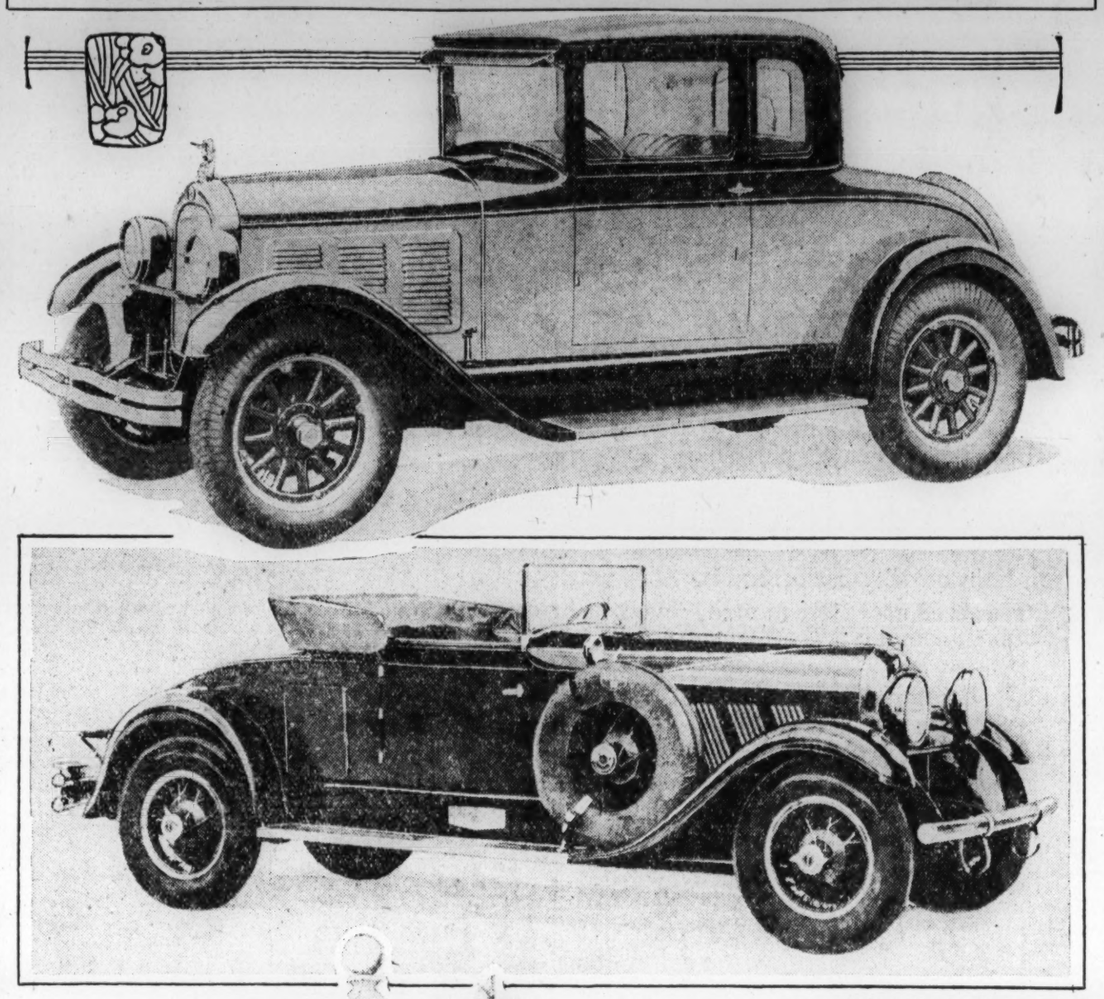

Passenger-car shows have become a well established institution in motordom, but a display of trucks and tractors is an innovation which, though of narrow appeal, appears to have promise of real popularity.

A three-day truck and tractor show was held recently in Altoona, Pa., under the auspices of the county truck and tractor dealers. The event was said by its sponsors to be eminently successful, so much so that a permanent general manager was elected and plans made for regular shows in the future.

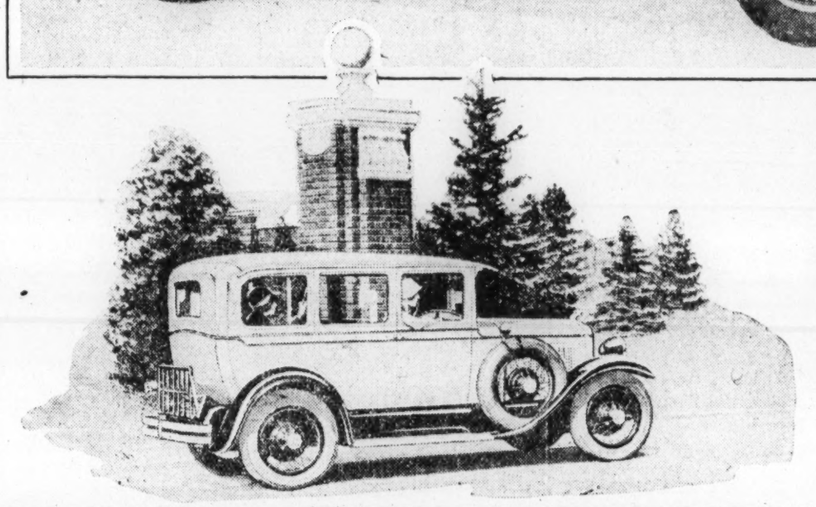

At the Altoona show the heaviest truck on the highway was shown alongside the lightest delivery car. Throughout the three days in which the show was in progress attendance was large, indicating that the automobile which speeds up commerce can be put on dress parade as well as its attractively fitted counterpart in the passenger line.

Carbon cleaning is made more effective if waste or rags are packed into the engine head bolt holes and water passages before the operation of scraping piston heads is begun.

LINES OF THREE COMPANIES AUGMENTED BY NEW BODY STYLES

ROAD GUIDE ISSUED BY NEW YORK STATE

Booklet Outlines Trips in Park System and Maps Highways.

For the information of motorists who plan to visit New York this summer a 120-page booklet of the size that easily fits one's pocket has been issued by the State. Many illustrations of the State parks are contained in the publication, which will be distributed through the State council of parks, offices of which are at 302 Broadway, New York City, and at Albany. The booklet is copyrighted.

A full page road map accompanies each of the eleven regional park districts, while a double page key map occupies the center of the booklet. The publication is the first of its kind to be issued by New York State and there probably will be a heavy call for it during the coming months. The popularity of New York State's parks is perhaps illustrated in the fact that the Palisades Interstate Park alone attracted more than 7,000,000 persons last year

The booklet has been arranged in the way of a visionary trip, starting out of New York City and carrying the motorist first to the Long Island State Park system and then up the Hudson River, through the Catskills, the Adirondacks and thence through central and western New York.

Breaker Cam Needs Annual Lubrication

The breaker cam in the distributor is one unit that rarely gets consideration in the automobile lubrication process. Of course, it rarely needs it, but the thoughtful motorist who wants to keep this unit functioning at its highest efficiency will get around to the task once a year, at least.

Each side of the cam should be treated to a thin coating of light grease. The best way to apply it is by using a toothpick or a match stem.

Windshield Wiper May Stall Engine

Faulty carburetor adjustment is blamed unjustly for much of the engine stalling traceable to leaks in the rubber tube of the vacuum windshield cleaner. When the engine stalls in traffic, many motorists are prone to think that the carburetor idling jet is cut down too far.

Inspection of the cleaner tube is a simple matter. If a leak is found replace the tube. Then if the engine still stalls, blame the carburetor.

The Old Mechanic Says:

Aviation has somethin' to teach the average motorist, probably lots of things, but one that occurs to me is the lesson to be learned from difference in attitude between the two fields after an accident. When a plane has been damaged, every part of it is closely inspected before it again is put into service. The flyer won't take a chance on somethin' bein' wrong. The car owner's different.

After an accident, he's satisfied that nothin' can be the matter if it doesn't show up in a hasty inspection. Often, he's right. On the other hand, he's often wrong.

There's one type of accident where this attitude leaves him wrong more frequently than right. That's the bump from behind that is not so very uncommon these days. I've known of car owners, lots of them, who never even get out and look to see what damage has been done. They either just assume that nothin' has happened or they leave it up to the other fellow to tell 'em. Naturally, he couldn't see the thing from the right viewpoint.

Had an illustration of what happens in such a case just the other day. A fellow whose car I service called up from out in the country askin' me to send out a man to get his spare tire off the carrier. He'd had a collision a day or so before and just assumed that nothin' had been hurt. When he needed his spare tire, he found the carrier so sprung that he could not get the tire off. The trip to the country, together with the cost of straightenin' the carrier, set him back $6. Although the other fellow should have paid the bill this chap had not even bothered to get his name or number.

Failure to check up on possible damage after an accident costs lots of others money, the same way.

NEW AUTOS SHOW EASE OF OPERATION

Chief Engineer of Auburn Automobile Co. Cites Progress in Facility.

While beauty in appearance, tremendous power available at will, and durability and vigor are recognized as outstanding accomplishments in the production of the present-day motor car, one of the most remarkable achievements of modern automobile engineering is the ease with which the improved models of 1928 are operated. This point is made by H. C. Snow, chief engineer of the Auburn Automobile Co.

"Few of us ten years ago would have cared to take a trip of 300 or 400 miles in an automobile," declares Mr. Snow, "and if we did, at the end of the trip we would have been completely exhausted.

"Today such a trip is a matter of no particular account. We sit behind a large, easily turned steering wheel, in a comfortable position, on luxuriously soft cushions. To start the car, we simply pull a button on the dash.

"The clutch operates with practically no resistance and the gear shifting lever is right at our finger tips. The throttle is within easy reach of the foot and there is no need to strain or stretch. A slight pressure on this throttle and the car leaps from 5 miles an hour to 25. Another pressure and it goes up to 50 with apparently no strain. Then to 75, and still the same smooth flow of power. Hour after hour at terrific speed and the motor almost as cool as when we started! Over dirt roads, gravel roads, concrete, with scarcely a jolt. And always there is that feeling of security that by a slight pressure on the foot brake the car can be brought to a standstill in a few feet."

There are many real bargains in used cars if the motorist can get over his seemingly innate conviction that because a car has been used it must have something wrong with it.

FAILURE TO KEEP LIGHTS FOCUSED HELD UNFAIR

Lamps Should Be Glareless and Well Adjusted, Says A. A. A. Official.

DANGERS ARE RECITED

Maintaining headlights of automobiles in constant adjustment so as to obviate the discomfort and hazard which result from glare and lack of focus is a duty incumbent upon motordom as a whole, in the opinion of Ernest N. Smith, general manager of the American Automobile Association. There can be no exceptions to this rule, he asserts, since driving becomes safe only in proportion to the extent to which all dangerous factors are eliminated.

Failure to maintain one's lights in the best possible condition, both as to brilliancy and focus, is a distinct act of unfairness on the part of the motorist who is negligent in this respect, he declares, for in doing so one imposes on others a hardship he himself would be unwilling to bear.

"It is safe to say that scarcely any motorist does not recognize ill-focused headlights as a definite motoring evil," says Mr. Smith. "He needs only to recall his own unpleasant experiences which were caused by blinding glare from cars approaching on a street or highway to realize the discomfort and potential danger which can result. Knowing the evil, he should be the more willing to correct it in his own case.

"There will be found individuals, however, who rant about the glare of headlights on the cars of other drivers, but who take no steps even to find out if their own lights are glaring. They are quick to demand adjustment for all others, but for themselves the evil does not seem to exist.

"This is where the unfairness is instanced. The adage that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander was spoken to express just such a type of unfair conduct. Motoring, after all, is an individual matter. Regulations may be passed with collective objectives, but the remedy for our traffic evils ultimately must come from the individual. So it is with glaring headlights. Until every motorist thinks as much of the possible inconvenience and hazard his own lamps can cause, headlight glare will continue to be a distasteful obstacle in the way of enjoyable and safe motoring."

Of the New York State motor revenues totaling more than $31,000,000, more than one-half was collected in the metropolitan district of New York City.

Nation Plans for Record Motor Camping Season

Plans to Increase Tourist Camp Efficiency and Accommodations Made Throughout the Land as Demand for Facilities Gains in Volume.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Motorists everywhere are looking forward with keen anticipation to a long season of happy loitering along the open highways of the Nation, availing themselves of the manifold advantages which 1928 brings to the person with the automobile and the desire to travel in quest of new surroundings and fresh vistas of nature's choicest scenery.

As a result, municipalities in every section of the United States are laying plans for increasing the efficiency and convenience of accommodations of their tourist camps, in preparation for a record-breaking motoring season. Many cities which have no such camps now are actively planning for their early installation, realizing their important place in the modern scheme of things.

This motoring public constantly is increasing. The number of registered cars is ever mounting and, as may be supposed, the demands placed upon motor camping facilities steadily are becoming greater.

Camp Grounds Important.

The importance of the motor camping ground to the American motor touring public can not be overemphasized. Year by year this public has come more and more to rely upon the automobile and motor camp as the means of the annual vacation, and with the increase in this public, the need of the camping ground, maintained near the municipality, has grown to such proportions that were all camps suddenly to be eliminated, probably no less than one-half of the vacations contemplated for this summer would have to be completely altered.

Many persons would find themselves obliged to forego a motor vacation entirely, unless they confined themselves to short tours, not longer than a day or two, because of economic considerations. Others would be forced to cut down their holiday period considerably, while a good proportion would give up entirely the thought of a motoring vacation, and go to some nearby resort instead.

Since the founding of the first motor camp some years ago, this type of accommodation as a factor in luring the American public to spend its vacation in the open, sleeping under the stars, has increased tremendously. Growing at first from the small necessity of the municipality to assign motorists a regular spot on which to pitch their tents, it has become one of the primary factors in making the vacation by automobile a success, and it has greatly aided the American in his universal desire to see his native land.

Economical for Tourist.

One of the greatest aids which the camp provides is the economy with which a large family may spend its holidays. Where the charges otherwise for a group of four or five might be somewhat beyond many family purses, the camp has stepped in and completely solved the problem which for years had worried those providers with moderate incomes.

These families now are in a position to get out on the highways and byways, viewing the splendors of nature, the historic sites where their forefathers fought and died and, too, gaining a better conception of their country's resources and of the needs of their fellow-citizen everywhere.

It is true that good highways have been perhaps the greatest factor in spreading the desire to tour throughout the American public. But safe and sanitary camps along the way, and the assurance that conveniences will be found, have also played their part, and a very large part at that, in getting the motorists to enjoy the pleasures of the summer camping tour.

Adds to Pleasure.

To the man or woman who lives in a city, the motor camping ground has come as a godsend. The city dweller always has longed to be able to spend his vacation in the outdoors, and, with the present great number of camps which may be found en route, he need not worry about being able to get all the fresh air possible, along with the conveniences to which he has become accustomed in the city.

The tourist camp also adds greatly to the pleasure of a motor journey in that it satisfies the gregarious instinct of the human being. In the evening, after a hard day's drive, motorists from the four corners of the continent gather and discuss the problems of their tours, each imparting to the other some advice calculated to be of help during the remainder of the trip. Other topics, all of vital interest, are discussed, and the motorist learns to look upon persons hailing from other sections of the country as individuals who have local problems just as large, if not larger, than those which trouble him. His outlook is broadened and he returns home possessed of a greater love for his country and his neighbor.

Prevents Disease Spread.

There is no doubt that if there was no motor camping grounds, many vacations would have a disastrous outcome. Motorists would camp along the way without heeding their water supply, for instance, and many would suffer serious harm, if not death, from contagious diseases acquired along the way.

In thousands of homes plans now are being made for the trip this summer. Children as well as grown-ups are looking ahead eagerly to the time when they will all pile out of the car, pull forth the paraphernalia which has been stowed in various parts of the machine and prepare to pitch their tent for the first time. The first supper cooked in the open air; crisp bacon, baked beans, toast, luscious black cherries, coffee and pure fresh milk, all topped off with ice cream bought from the caretaker of the camp. Then a long, sound sleep, the sleep of the just, and off again the next morning, to pitch camp some 200 miles farther on, amid new scenery and new people.

Truly, the motor camp, as a means of educating the public, as a means of increasing the regard which one man bears for his neighbor and his country, and as a means of providing the maximum amount of enjoyment to the vacationist, is a factor growing in significance.

Auto Rapidly Displacing Camel in Desert Travel

The lumbering ship of the desert which for ages has been the storied means of transportation on those vast arid expanses is slowly giving way before the automobile. Passenger routes in the East are growing constantly with automobiles and huge American buses making regular trips across the sandy wastes.

Desert caravan routes between Bagdad and the Mediterranean over which for ages have been carried the spices and silks of the Orient are being motorized rapidly, according to consular information to the Department of Commerce. The most modern methods of transport are converting weeks of travel across the desert into a single day of speedy transit. The route from Bagdad through Damascus and Beirut is the shortest route across the desert to the Mediterranean Sea. It is being used for all automobile passage across the sands.

About 400 car trips are being made each month over this route, transporting 2,000 passengers and mail and freight across the desert. The distance from Bagdad to Damascus is about 600 miles and is now covered in 24 hours of continuous travel. Six-wheel buses of American make, equipped with special tanks for water and gasoline, are used for transportation over this long desert route. Round trips are made every two weeks.

The old Zenobia caravan route was in use more than 1,600 years ago in the days of Queen Zenobia, when Palmyra was a flourishing city. Its use for automobiles was begun several years ago when the running of semiweekly convoys was started.

Spring in Starter Liable to Give Way

There is little point in being puzzled if there is a hum in the starter but it fails to turn the engine over. This effect, in nine cases out of ten, has but one cause. The starter spring is broken.

In the early days of motoring this trouble was much more common than it is now, but despite the improvements made, starter springs are susceptible to breakage. Their replacement is neither a difficult nor an expensive task.

STANDARDS BUREAU HELPS TO SIMPLIFY CAR INDUSTRY TASK

Auto Tags Throughout U. S. and Possessions Now Are Similar.

DRILLING TO FIT THEM TO BRACKETS IS ENDED

Number of Balloon-Tire Sizes Is Decreased by Federal Work.

The day when automobile license tags had to be filed, punched, drilled or otherwise mutilated to make it possible to place them on mounting brackets is past, according to announcement by Ray M. Hudson, assistant director, commercial standards group, Bureau of Standards.

Washington motorists have benefited with those throughout the country in the uniformity of the slots for attaching the plates, and they will recall the difference between the provision made for easy attachment this year with the difficulties experienced in other years. Instead of having to use some sort of a make-shift drill to punch a hole in the tag and risk defacing it, the 1928 plates could be placed in position on virtually all makes simply by using the slots provided.

The license plates for 1928, Mr. Hudson says, in 48 States, the District of Columbia, Porto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands conformed to the standard plate brackets developed by the Society of Automotive Engineers. It was the first year, according to the bureau's announcement, that all plates were made in conformity to the standard.

Asked Standards Aid.

Several years ago the assistance of the division of simplified practice, of the commercial standards group, was requested by the Society of Automotive Engineers in developing the adoption of the standard. The division took up the matter with the several State vehicle authorities, urging them to recognize this standard, inasmuch as there was a great variety in plate punchings at that time and relatively few of them matched up with the standard plate bracket slots developed by the Society of Automotive Engineers.

At the time the subject was presented to the division consideration was also given to the possibilities for standardizing the size of plate symbols, the gauges of metal, size of plates, code of numbering, location of plates on cars, illumination of the license plates, and the coordination of color selection.

Practically all cars now come through production equipped with standard plate mounting brackets, so it is no longer necessary to file, punch, drill or otherwise mutilate plates in order that they will fit, eliminating much of the annual annoyance, irritation and bother to motorists when changing plates.

Forty-one representative American business men and three foreign industrial leaders called at the Department of Comerce up to March 15 to gather first-hand information regarding the benefits to be derived from a simplification program.

During the first quarter, association acceptances of the adopted recommendations increased 5 per cent, bringing their total to 859, while individual acceptances increased 11 per cent, making their total 8,597. Of completed simplified practice recommendations in print, there has been a total sale of 286,612 copies from the date of their respective issue to March 15.

Comments on Progress.

Commenting on the progress that has been made in the field of standardization and simplification during the first quarter of this year, with specific reference to adherence, Mr. Hudson said that "the success or failure of a simplified practice program is shown in the degree of adherence accorded by its acceptors. Each recommendation is reviewed annually by a standing committee, appointed from within the industry itself. This committee conducts a survey to ascertain the average degree of adherence to the respective program. Whenever it is impracticable to base this on a factual survey, the committee renders an estimated degree of adherence that the program received during the year. The committee also makes a recommendation for any revision or modification that may be necessary, thus safeguarding the fullest development of individual initiative and invention, as well as caring for the changing trends of business.

"During the first quarter of the present year there were eight simplified practice recommendations submitted to the respective standing committees for consideration. Of this number two were revised and six reaffirmed. The average degree of adherence to these eight projects was 89.18 per cent, based on factual surveys."

Tire Project Assisted.

The project to establish a simplified line for balloon tire sizes was given greater impetus during the quarter. As a result of cooperative action between the manufacturers of automobile tires, the Society of Automotive Engineers, the Rubber Association of America, and the Tire and Rim Association, a tentative simplified practice recommendation has been drafted, which would reduce the variety of balloon tire sizes from 70 to 17.

A meeting of representatives of tire, rim and car mahufacturers, the National Automotive Chamber of Commerce, the Rubber Association of America, the Society of Automotive Engineers, and the Tire and Rim Association was held in Detroit, on March 16, at which time the proposed simplified list of seventeen balloon tire sizes was approved, which will apply to 929 equipment, and will not concern itself with present rolling equipment.

A conception of the shake-up in balloon tire sizes during 1927 may be had by checking the 1928 cars against those of 1927. The present model cars carry 22 different sizes of balloon tires. The 1927 cars have 27 different sizes, but of the 22 sizes on this year's cars, five are new, that is, they were not in use when the 1927 cars were placed on the market. A check of the cars also shows that ten sizes listed for 1927 cars are not included in present-day original equipment. Thus, it is indicated that fifteen sizes of balloon tires have either been discarded or added to the tire line-up during the course of one year.

"It is of more than passing interest that the multiplicity of sizes of balloon tires and tubes has caused the tire dealers of the country to materially increase their stock, resulting in an increase of investment," said Mr. Hudson. According to leaders in the industry there are 40 or more sizes of tires being made at the present time, with ten cross-sections and five different wheel sizes. Despite this large selection, practically 90 per cent of the tires sales, during the first part of 1927, were confined to 5 of these 40 sizes.

In discussing the simplifications developed by the automotive industry, Mr. Hudson further stated that "the modern automobile demonstrates the possibilities of simplification and standardization, since through the practice of machining thousands of parts to the standard dimensions, and assembling them progressively, costs have been reduced to the point where the automobile is now a necessity rather than a luxury. This simplification of parts is being further extended in the industry. In the automotive industry reduction of production costs depends upon simplification and standardization, with the result that the automobile is one of the few important manufactured commodities than can be bought today at less than the prewar prices."

Looking Over the Cars

Some of the Points You May Have Missed

By FRANK J. CARMODY

The automobile has provided aviation with many good ideas, as every one will agree. It did the same for the motor bus and, after the latter left the infant stage, it began to return the various favors conferred upon it. Aviation seems destined to follow the example set by the bus in this respect. To give but one illustration, one might cite the case of the carburetor accelerating well about which so many motorists are talking today. This is new in the motor car field. It is old in aviation. Planes always did have to be "quick on the gun" and traffic conditions finally made it necessary for automobiles to become equally fast on the accelerator. It was an easy matter for the latter to borrow the accelerating well which served aviaion so excellenly in this respect.

• • • •

These spring rains which are driven by high winds through the hood louvers and onto the ignition wires are causing fewer stops this year than ever before. The reason, of course, is that steps have been taken in the layout of the wiring system to see that it is protected from just this trouble. Today, one finds on a majority of the newer cars that the distributor has been placed, if not actually on top of the motor, at least higher on the side. Further protection is seen in the fact that, in many cars, the wiring is carried in some form of conduit to the various spark plugs. Little, but it's important in making motoring a more carefree experience.

• • • •

Making the car fit the market long has been recognized as the first principle in motor merchandising success. That is why the buyer's choice has grown from three or four models to eight or ten times that number. Another manifestation of this effort to give the buyer what he needs is to be found in the Oldsmobile coach models equipped with sleeping berths. It is designed to fill the smaller community's need for an ambulance.

• • • •

Car makers can not become so wedded to an idea that they can not see its limitations—at least they can not and maintain a reputation for being progressive. An illustration is the windshield on the Auburn cabriolet model. It is not the characteristic sloping type used on a majority of the company's products. The reason is that it does not lend itself so readily to use in connection with the convertible body style. Auburn is "sold" on the sloping windshield, but not to the extent that it does not see this limitation on its use.

• • • •

Rumors always seem to be more rampant in the motor car field than in any other, and none comes to mind in which faulty information can do more damage. Two rumors that seem to be in stock at the moment are that Nash is to introduce a new line of cars and that Chrysler is going to discontinue its four-cylinder cars. Both of these have been flatly and firmly denied by the company officials. It is unfortunate that the rumor always seems to travel faster and farther than the denial, which is an excellent reason why the source of the information should be looked into.

• • • •

Speaking of rumors, one that really did have a reasonable though absolutely inaccurate foundation was that which was about to put Reo into speedway racing this year. Peter DePaolo, speedway champion, is going to drive a "Flying Cloud" in this season's races. The point is that it is not a real Flying Cloud but only DePaolo's pet name for his regular racing steed. He is associated with the retail end of Reo in California and is allowed to use the name. The foundation of the rumor thus could not be labeled unreasonable, but it was just as wrong as if it had been. That's the point.

• • • •

Thermo-syphon cooling still has its followers. Chrysler's model 52, the Essex, and the Velie six cylinder models are the three which continue to use this method, and although a majority have gone to the water pump, no member of this trio is troubled by cooling problems.

• • • •

Hudson' unique valve arrangement, with one set of valves in the head and one in the side, is called by its designers an F-head engine. One of the largest motor publications which runs a composite chart of car specifications, however, lists the Hudson engine as an N-head type. A study will indicate that either designation is fitting.

• • • •

Even in the case of those cars whose buyers will find the gear ratio left to their option, there usually is specified a reduction that may be regarded as standard. An exception is made in the specifications of three cars which list no specific gear ratio but leave the whole thing to the buyer. The three are Stutz, Cadillac and LaSalle. Of course, the man who is not technically up on gear ratios is not allowed by the retail salesman to make the mistake of getting the wrong one.

SOLUTION OF USED CAR PROBLEM IMPORTANT

Second-Hand Automobiles Must Be Considered Definite Products, Says Grant.

WIDE PRICE RANGE SEEN

Consideration of the used car as a definite product to which more attention must be given and is being given in the selling of automobiles is viewed as pointing the way to one solution of the used car problem by R. H. Grant, vice president in charge of sales of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Evidencing the growing importance of the used car, Mr. Grant stated that during the first quarter of 1928, when the Chevrolet dealer organization was moving 250,000 new cars, it also was delivering at retail more than 200,000 used ones. This was made possible, he said, by a changing attitude toward the used product on the part of both the automobile dealer and the public.

"Where the automobile dealer formerly paid little attention to the used car, the proportion of used car to new car sales has mounted so high that used cars are now an important part of his business," declared Mr. Grant, who pointed out that the practice now prevailing calls for refinishing and going over used automobiles by mechanics trained in approved factory methods.

"The public owes directly to the used car the wide range of prices at which transportation may be purchosed, and the wide variety of models from which selection may be made. If there were no such thing as a trade-in price, the owner of an automobile, instead of turning it in on a new model, would drive it himself until its usefulness was spent, just as he now uses his furniture or his farm or garden implements. There would consequently be no used car mart for the man who wants to buy a car at less than new car cost. Millions of present motorists who were attracted by used car prices would not now own automobiles if there had been no used car market.

"Every good automobile today is built with many years of service in it. The original purchaser generally turns it in on a new model after he has driven it a few years. There remains in the car many miles of dependable service which is available to the man who needs transportation on the basis of a low first cost.

"Of some 25,000,000 passenger cars now registered in the United States, it is estimated that approximately 60 per cent are in the hands of their second or third owners. In other words, 15,000,000 motorists are now riding in cars that were purchased on resale.

"Eliminate the used car from the market, and a good share of those 15,000,000 people would be denied the privilege of owning a car. And most of the remaining 10,000,000 motorists would be driving cars that do not measure up to their ideas of style simply because they would not be able to get a trade-in allowance, and would refuse to scrap their cars with unused value remaining in them.

"The result would have been a great many less new car sales within the past 20 years, and most of the 25,000,000 present motorists would have either no car at all or a car that fell short of their present taste for style, durability and performance.

JOHN SMITH and HIS CAR

Being the Experiences of a Typical Motorist

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

TESTING BY DRIVING.

Learning what repairs or adjustments a car needs without having a repairman make a special diagnosis impressed Smith as being a happy thought.

"You mean that I can tell by observing the car as I drive along just what servicing it needs?" he asked when I suggested the idea.

"You can tell a good part of the story, provided you are successful in feeling the car's pulse," I assured him. "There is no need to go at overhauling work blindly."

I explained to him how the need for the replacement of piston pins can be told by noting whether there is a sharp but light metallic knock in the engine as the car rolls along on level ground. When the engine is running fairly free and there is less pressure on the bearings, naturally any looseness in the piston pins comes to light and is evidenced by the peculiar noise which they make.

Smith was plainly worried over the possibility of getting this type of trouble mixed up with the need for having carbon removed from the cylinders. I explained to him that this need not be a problem because piston pin knocking usually does not show up in climbing hills. That is because the connecting rods are under a high strain and any looseness is taken up by the unusual stresses on the piston pins. It is in climbing hills, however, that carbon knocks can be readily detected. Any experienced driver can tell just about all he needs to know concerning the efficiency of the valves and the combustion chambers when he is trying to go uphill in high gear.

Detecting Bearing Looseness.

It is then that bearing looseness can be detected. However, it is necessary to drive fairly fast in order to determine this point. At slow speeds in high gear the bearings are under such terrific pressure that the looseness is not so evident and the noise is scarcely heard. Bearing noises are always characterized by a deep thumping.

I cautioned Smith against mistaking valve clicks and other tappet and valve gear noises for carbon knocks and piston pin noises. When he raised the point as to how he was to differentiate between many of these odd noises and those caused by detonation of fuel, I suggested to him the plan of trying different grades of gas. Mechanical noises in the engine, with the exception of those originating in the valves, will not be affected by a different fuel.

"How about a piston slap?" Smith asked, making a note of all these points.

Finding a Loose Piston.

"There is a simple test for this," I replied. "Before I mentio it let me say that if you have a bad piston or its cylinder has worn oval it is natural to suppose that the engine is going to pump oil. In other words, you should find the spark plug of the offending cylinder more carbonized than the others because more oil will get into that particular cylinder.

"Now about the test which will determine at just which cylinder the loose piston is to be found. While you are letting the engine idle, take a screwdriver and, starting with cylinder number one, short circuit the spark across to the metal parts of the cylinder head. This stops that cylinder from firing, and since its piston is running more or less free when you suddenly permit the plug to fire, any looseness will be revealed by a knock.

"Now then, while it is running free suddenly remove the screwdriver so that the spark fires the mixture in number one cylinder. If, as you do this, there is a sharp metallic knock you can be reasonably sure that the piston is slapping, although I would not advise reaching this conclusion until you have also checked up on the matter of this cylinder consuming more oil than the rest. If with this test you hear a deep thump from the base of the engine you can also rest assured that a bearing is loose. Try the same test for each cylinder in succession."

Since Smith was chiefly concerned with having his engine overhauled we did not go into other units of the chassis. But the plan of testing the car by using it fits any part and should be utilized any time there is a doubt as to its efficiency or well-being.

(Copyright, 1928, by Ullman Feature Service.)

Careless Handling May Injure Bearing

In removing front wheel bearings for cleaning or some other purpose, it is well to exercise caution against dropping these units to the floor. Many a bearing has had its efficiency reduced by being pulled off with the wheel with no thought given to the fact that its cage may be flattened by the impact against the floor.

Incidentally, it will be found just as simple to leave the inner bearing on the spindle if cleaning is the only care it needs.

One of the most interesting and potentially useful sections of the instruction books accompanying new cars is that which is devoted to a description of the various noises that may develop.

OLD CARS NOW READILY MADE TO LOOK LIKE NEW

Great Progress Reported in Field of Refinishing and Renovation.

FINE LACQUER OFFERED

That many motorists who can not see their way clear to acquiring a new car at the moment put up with automobiles that are old and shabby in appearance is due in many cases to their lack of understanding of the remarkable progress that has been recorded in the field of renovation and refinishing. This point is made by Morris Weeks, foreman of the paint and body division of the Washington Cadillac Co.'s maintenance department, who declares that the claim that old cars can be made to "look like new" is a literal truth.

"The well equipped and expertly staffed paint and body shop today can do just as good lacquer work as can be done anywhere," says Weeks. "Many motorists are not aware of this fact. As a result they continue to drive cars that look far from their best."

"It is not always refinishing that a car requires to restore it to its original lustrous beauty," Weeks says. Sometimes, the special process of renovation that has been developed since lacquer finishes came into universal use is all that is required to make the car look its best. Explaining this point, he declares that the car that often looks as if its finish were totally destroyed, is affected by nothing more than a "traffic film" which is easily and inexpensively removed.

In addition to restoring the finish on the body, the renovation process includes treating fenders, chassis and wheels to several coats of lacquer which brings them up to the appearance of the rest of the car.

"While lacquer finishes have been in almost universal use for more than three years there are many motorists who still do not recognize that the field as well as the factory is capable of applying them," says Weeks. "That it is provides one of the most interesting features of this type of finish. The same equipment and the same high character of workmanship is available to the local refinishing establishment as well as to the motor car factory. It puts the local shop in a position to do exactly the same fine work on the car that has become shabby through use that the factory can do to the new car.

"This service should be a boon to the car owner who can not see his financial way clear to acquiring a new car but who, nevertheless, would like to restore the beauty of the machine he now owns. Needless to say, it requires far less time and is by no means so costly to have a car refinished by the modern method.

"It provides the most effective solution for the problem of having a fine looking car at all times."

DID YOU KNOW

That the head of the speedometer is an especially fine mechanism, like a good watch, and never should be touched except by an expert? The motorist who would not take his timepiece apart, nor allow anyone but a jeweler to do it, should recognize that the same care is required in the case of the speedometer.

That ventilation of the closed car is one of the problams that the finest body builders still do not regard as solved?

That although linen dusters, goggles and caps have passed out of motordom, a pair of cotton gloves makes a valuable addition to the car's tool kit?

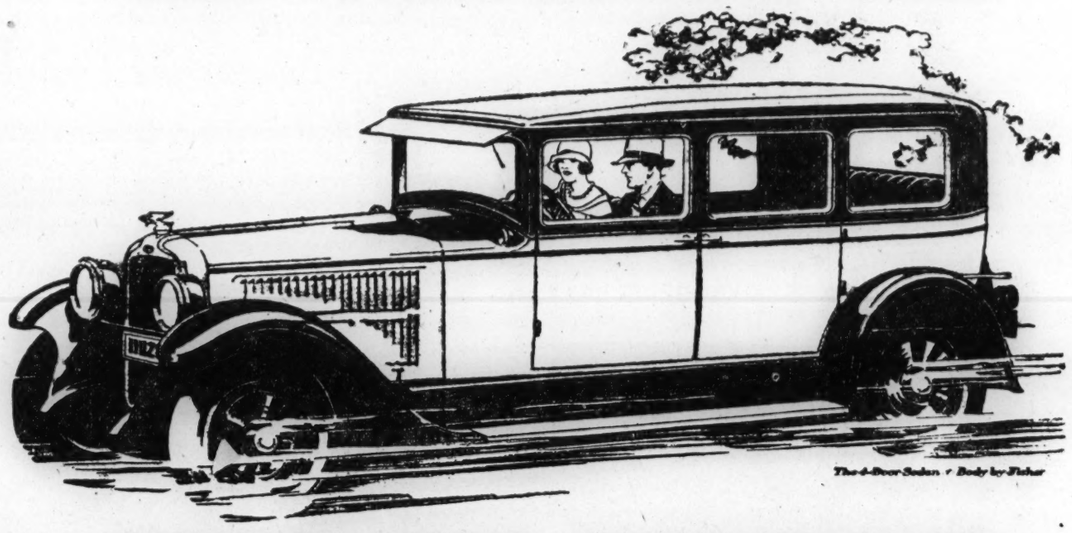

Clutch Adjustment Calls for Expert

Some motorists who like to tinker around the car themselves make the mistake of thinking that a slipping clutch is to be remedied by readjustment of the pedal. The pedal has nothing to do with the slippage, and its readjustment may mean a serious reduction of the clearance between it and the toeboard. The effect is the same as driving with the clutch only partly disengaged.

Slipping of the clutch is remedied within the unit and unless the car owner is equipped with knowledge of this device, he should leave the task to the service expert.

Bearing adjustments are incomplete if they are made without first having determined the condition of the crank pin, which is susceptible to uneven wear.

Facts and figures prove the supremacy of the ALL-AMERICAN SIX

"This new Hupmobile saves me $1000"

THUS remarked the motorist who had planned to spend from $2500 to $3500 on a personal car for his wife—and then saw the new Hupmobile Century Six. He purchased immediately, saying that the car fulfilled every requirement in luxury, style and power that he could have desired. Time after time, men and women long accustomed to making their selection from the higher-priced fields, are coming to the brilliant new Hupmobile Century Six and Eight, and gratefully pocketing the difference. Hupmobile quality and Hupmobile performance are known to all. Now to these are added beauty and distinction of line unsurpassed at any price. You have only to see the new Hupmobile Century models to realize how far these cars are destined to go in invading the higher priced field. You have only to drive and ride in them to know how completely they meet every wish for the highest conceivable type of performance.

50 standard and custom-equipped models on three different wheelbases—the Six of the Century, the Century Eight and the Century 125 Eight.

"Maybe We're Wrong"

By E. L. Cord

Auburn has built its success by not underestimating the public's intelligence. That is why we are going to lay our cards on the table face up and explain what our hardest job is today.

It is not to design more advanced cars—that is easy.

It is not finances—few are as strong as Auburn today.

It is not modern factories—no competitor excels Auburn in this respect.

It is not to build better cars, more enduring cars and sell them for less cost—we DO it.

BUT IT IS TO MAKE YOU BELIEVE IT. THAT IS OUR HARDEST JOB!

Not that we blame many admirable people for asking, "How CAN Auburn do it? We know exactly why they take that attitude, but we do not know exactly how to answer it.

Sincere people ask that question, without realizing that they do not know what Auburn is building, and have never driven the new Auburn. They assume in advance that the car they have a preference for is better. Maybe they are judging that car by its reputation and comparative standing of years ago. But it is hard to argue against a prejudice. You might win an argument but lose a sale.

We do not say others cannot do it. We only say Auburn DOES it.

Because—

No one has a monopoly on brains! And Brains is the most important ingredient in a motor car.

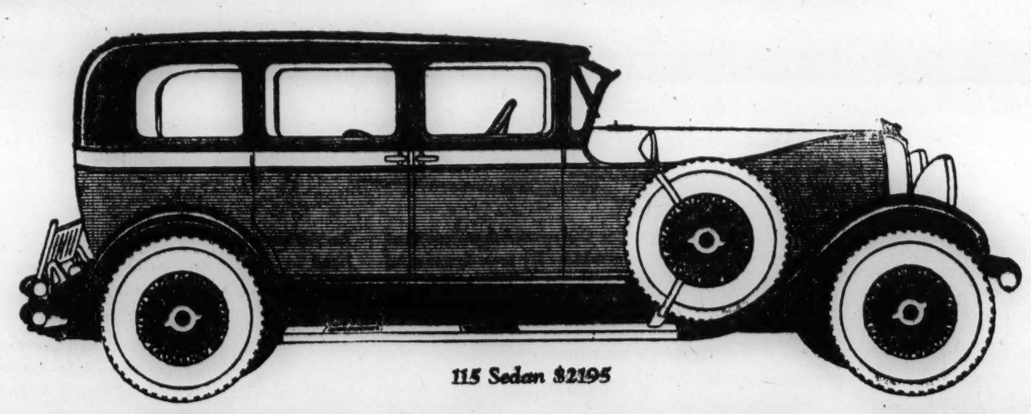

Next comes the motive of the builders; their sincerity;—their PRODUCT can be no better than their POLICY.

If their purpose is to see how much BETTER cars they can build, regardless of all other temptations, you can safely judge them by their CAR alone.

We could impress you with statistics of Auburn's size, growth and resources. We could probably surprise you with Auburn's modernized methods and facilities. We could explain Auburn's low overhead, and how many times we turn our capital. We could quote remarkable sales increases.

But, we still believe the only way to buy a motor car is by comparing different cars. We submit the new Auburn on this basis and say, "Drive it and if it does not SELL ITSELF you will not be asked to buy."

If we are right, then you will not care HOW Auburn can do it, because you will profit from the fact Auburn DOES it.

MARMON

now 1*st* in production of straight-eights

because of these five great advantages:

1 —A straight-eight at the price of a six—$1395 (at the factory). And once you try a straight-eight, you'll never go back to sixes. Thousands have had this experience since January.

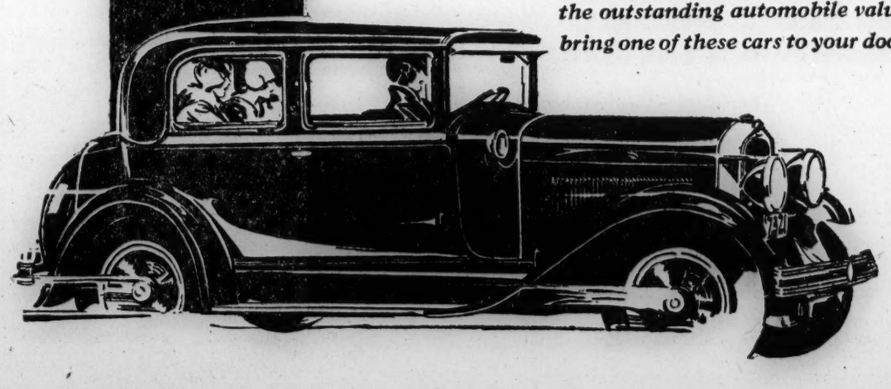

2 —The easiest riding car in the world regardless of size or price. (A bold statement, but one we'll stand on.)

3 —A car that's easier to drive—easier to park—than any car to date. (Advanced engineering makes this possible.)

4 —A wonderfully good looking car—backed by a name that has meant fine things for over a quarter of a century. (It's a rather nice thing to say, "I drive a Marmon".)

5 —A car which in the hands of owners has proved itself entirely trouble-free, except for usual routine adjustments. (A fact any owner will gladly attest.)

Please remember to see the New Marmon 68 before you buy. It's the outstanding automobile value of the year. A 'phone call will bring one of these cars to your door—so that you, yourself, may see.

ACACIA COMPLETES DEDICATION PLANS FOR NEW BUILDING

Ten-Story Home at First and Indiana Avenue Cost $1,500,000.

POSTMASTER GENERAL IS TO MAKE ADDRESS

Almas Temple Shrine Band to Play at the Exercises on Wednesday.

Plans for the dedication of the beautiful new ten-story home office building recently completed at Fist street and Indiana avenue have just been announced by William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Mutual Life Association.

Erected at a cost of $1,500,000 on a site monumentally located between the Capitol and Union Station, the Acacia's new home office building takes its place as one of the finest structures in the National Capital. To commemorate the accomplishment which has enabled Acacia to build this home, officials of the association have arranged for elaborate and fitting dedication ceremonies.

Attended by more than 300 members of the field force from all sections of the country who won the right to attend the dedication in a contest conducted by the association; by high officials of the city and National Government, and by leaders in Masonic circles, the dedication will take place on Wednesday evening. Plans have been made to hold the dedication on the tennis courts opposite the Acacia Building, which also is Acacia property.

New to Make Address.

Postmaster General Harry S. New will make an address in which he will touch upon the national significance of the Acacia Mutual Life Association and the real importance of its leading position. The response of Masonry will be made by James C. Gibbs, grand master of Masons of the District of Columbia, who will dedicate the building.

The dedication ceremonies will be opened with William Montgomery, president of Acacia, presiding. This will be at 8 o'clock, and in the event of rain the function will be held in the auditorium on the tenth floor of the Acacia Building. The Almas Temple Shrine Band will play until the invocation is said by Dr. John C. Palmer, P. H. grand chaplain, Grand Lodge, District of Columbia. William Montgomery then will recognize the guests of honor in whose number will be included many dignitaries.

Following this will come the addresses of Postmaster General New and Mr. Gibbs. At this point a battery of floodlights will be turned on the building to enable those in attendance to get a clear and full view of the handsome structure which henceforth will house the home office workers of the Acacia Mutual Life Association.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, then will speak on "Dedicating a Temple of Service," and the trust set forth by Bishop Freeman will be accepted on behalf of the Acacia Mutual Life Association, by William Montgomery, the man who now is its president and who has been its directing head for more than 34 years.

Band Will Play.

At the conclusion of Mr. Montgomery's address, the Almas Band will play "The Star-Spangled Banner." Then the band will strike up "Onward Christian Soldiers," and the employes, headed by the officers and directors of the association, will march in double file east on D street, south on New Jersey avenue, and west on Indiana avenue where the line will enter the Acacia Building at the corner of First street and Indiana avenue, taking possession of the building and dispersing.

According to the plans announced by Mr. Montgomery, the building will be lighted and opened for inspection by guests holding cards. There will be dancing on the roof garden.

The tennis courts will be decorated with palms and flowers and arrangements have been made for the installation of loudspeakers so that all those in the audience will hear everything clearly and distinctly.

The dedication on Wednesday evening will mark the achievement of an ideal long cherished by the Acacia Mutual Life Association—that of its own home office building. Acacia's great growth during the last 20 years has made it necessary for the association constantly to be moving to newer and more commodious quarters. Now, with this new building at its disposal and with plans projected for two more units, Acacia officials believe that they have planned well for the future.

The more than 300 Acacia representatives in the field who will be present at the dedication ceremonies Wednesday night will remain in Washington for an Acacia convention which will not be concluded until Friday, and for the branch managers until Saturday. The auditorium located on the tenth floor of the new building will be used as the convention hall.

Best Real Estate Advertising Topic

Advertising real estate is essentially selling the whole city to the people of the city. How to do it most effectively will be the subject both of a national conference on advertising and of a national contest for the best real estate advertising to be held in connection with the coming annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Louisville, June 19-22.

Charles Henry MacKintosh, former president of the Associate Advertising Clubs of the World, will address the general convention and will be a principle speaker at the special conference on advertising, to be held Thursday, June 21.

REAL ESTATE SEASONAL ACTIVITY DISAPPEARING

Peak and Slow Seasons Are Tending to Merge Into Uniform Volume.

BUILDING LARGE FACTOR

The pronounced seasonal rise and fall in the activity of the real estate market is tending to disappear. This is shown in a study of the official records of real estate transfers reported to the National Association of Real Estate Boards for the compilation of its monthly index of the real estate market. The former lowering of activity beginning in December and prevailing noticeably in January and February has perceptibly lessened during the period from 1916 to 1928.

The study found an appreciable shift going on in monthly activity, with a measurable filling up of seasonal troughs, and a corresponding leveling of peaks in seasons of greatest activity.

Translated into the terms of the average property holder this means that there is coming to be no reason for waiting for some "peak season" before putting real estate on the market, or for a "dull season" before buying a house. Peak seasons and slow seasons are tending to merge into a uniform activity.

Doubtless the fact that building construction has become less seasonal is an important factor in bringing about disappearance to a degree of the seasonal tendency in real estate activity, according to the association's department of education and research, which made the statistical study to ascertain what changes may be measured in market conditions over a period of 11 years.

Climatic conditions throughout the United States are such that there is considerable tendency for unfavorable conditions in one section to be offset by favorable conditions in others, it is also pointed out. Indeed, some change in activity of the real estate market in the Southern and Southwestern States, which normally do a large volume of business during the winter months, may have some influence in bringing about a leveling effect on the different months of the year for the country as a whole.

The association has taken the monthly average number of transfers and conveyances recorded during the years 1916-1923 as the base of its index.

The present study compared the monthly average during those years with the average number of transfers and conveyances recorded during the years 1924-1927.

It is found, for example, that during the years 1916 to 1923, inclusive, an average of 7.3 per cent of the total volume of real estate transfers took place in the month of January, whereas during the years 1924 to 192-, inclusive, January averaged 7.8 per cent of the year's total, an increase of .05 per cent. For February it is found that during the years 1916 to 1923, inclusive, the average amount of business done was 6.7 per cent of the yearly total, whereas during the years 1924 to 1927, inclusive, 7.3 per cent of the year's business was done in February, or an increase of .06 per cent.

The months which show a relative gain in activity are December, January, February, March, April and July.

Council of National Boards Will Try to Work Out Modernization.

The working out of a unified and comprehensive program modernization of State tax systems will be brought before a joint meeting of the States council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the national board of presidents and secretaries of the State real estate associations, to be held at Louisville, Ky., June 18.

The meeting will be held immediately preceding the annual convention of the national association, to be held in Louisville, June 19-22.

L. S. Booth, Seattle, Wash., chairman of the national association's committee on State taxation, will address the joint meeting on a proposed program of action.

The administrative decisions of the real estate license boards of various States will be analyzed by Harry E. Smoot, assistant to the general counsel of the national association.

J. W. Jacoby, of the Ohio State real estate commission, will lead a round table discussion comparing educational requirements in the real estate license laws of various States.

Paul O. Meredith, executive secretary of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards, will discuss State conventions.

Leon E. Todd, Camden, N. J.; A. L. Nique, Pontiac, Mich., and Arthur J. Mertzke, director of the department of education and research for the national association, will talk on conferences for real estate.

A business session of the States council will be held Wednesday afternoon, June 20.

NORFOLK REALTORS KEEP SALES RECORD

Property Transfers, From 1906 to 1920, Plotted in Map Books.

The Real Estate Board of Norfolk, Va., is keeping a record of the real estate sales in the city as a basis for the intelligent understanding of its real estate situation.

The board secures each day from the courthouse files a record of all sales of real estate made in the city of Norfolk. The real estate transfers are plotted in map books drawn on a 50-foot scale. The board records the description of the property, a plat of the large sales, a record of the grantee and of the grantor and of the sales price. The record of sales from 1920 on is open to the use of any member of the board.

The board has a full record of all large sales in Norfolk for the period 1906 to 1920. This information was compiled by a survey of the courthouse records and from information supplied by individual members of the board. It is compiled with special attention to waterfront sales.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT TO ADDRESS REALTORS

Henry G. Zander, of Chicago, Will Be Guest of Local Board Wednesday.

TO DISCUSS CONVENTION

Henry G. Zander, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will address the Washington Real Estate Board Wednesday night at Wardman Park Hotel.

Members of the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board have been invited to the meeting as guests of the local board to hear the address of the national president.

It has been the established custom of the national organization to send its president on speaking tours throughout the country. Eastern cities are usually visited in the spring, and Mr. Zander's tour will end with the annual convention to be held in Louisville, June 17 to 22.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards now comprises 610 constituent local boards located in every State, Hawaii and Canada. In addition to the speaking tours of its president, its work is also supervised and extended by five regional vice presidents, who are assigned to certain zones. Through the work of these national officers it was pointed out that the activities of local and State organizations are co-ordinated with those of the parent organization.

At the coming meeting it is expected that Mr. Zander will outline the activities of the National Association for the current year and discuss the principle features of the Louisville convention. A reception committee has been appointed to make arrangements for the meeting which will be followed by an informal buffet supper. A musical program will be rendered under the direction of Percy S. Foster.

The committee consists of Thomas L. Phillips, chairman; H. H. Carter, J. Lee Donnelly, William R. Ellis, L. C. Leigh, B. H. Parker, Harry B. Pitts, Howard A. Schladt, Harry A. Seay, Fred H. Ugast, Lansing Valk and John F. Webster.

REALTORS WILL USE PLANES TO MEETING

Los Angeles Man, With Family, Will Fly From Los Angeles to Louisville.

That the airplane is an accepted means of transportation for the business world was evidenced yesterday, when the Louisville Real Estate Board, in making plans for entertainment of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which will hold its annual convention in Louisville June 19 to 22, sent out a query to delegates asking them to state whether they would arrive by train, motor, airplane or boat. Realtors from a number of cities will leave the land long enough to come to their annual meeting by air, according to the national association.

A plane from Los Angeles will bring Harry H. Culver, of the association's board of directors, and his family across the continent by way of St. Louis and Kansas City. Charles B. Beery, Minneapolis, has chartered a plane to bring himself and his 4-year-old twin sons down from the North. Three ships will bring delegates and guests from the Buffalo Real Estate Board. L. T. Stevenson Pittsburgh, also of the association's board of directors, will bring three members of his firm to Louisville with him, by plane, and at least one party from the Long Island Real Estate Board is expected by air.

William P. MacCracken, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, and F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, who are to be guests of the convetnion, and to speak on the effect of aviation on real estate values of the future, are expected to fly from Washington. Two realtor parties, that of William D. Winchell, Buffalo, and the Culver party, of Los Angeles, are making the trip in their own planes. A number of real estate firms are already using planes regularly in showing customers the lay of subdivisions or other large properties.

DEVONSHIRE GARDENS IS SUBDIVISION NAME

Mrs. A. E. Davis' Title for Brumback Development Wins $100 Prize.

Devonshire Gardens has been selected for the name of the new subdivision of the Brumback Realty Co., on the Lee Highway, a half mile west of Falls Church, Va., the firm announced yesterday.

Mrs. A. E. Davis, 709 A street northeast, submitted the winning title and was awarded the $100 prize for the name selected in the contest. More than 4,000 were suggested. The judges were Milford Witts, secretary of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce; Milton U. Varney, president of the Monarch Club; Fletcher Kemp, superintendent of schools for Arlington County, and K. A. Brumback, president of the Brumback Realty Co., Clarendon, Va.

The subdivision is being divided into tracts of approximately an acre each, improved by modern bungalows, distinctive in type. Formal opening of the development took place yesterday and will continue throughout the week, closing Saturday. The firm reported a brisk demand for these homes with acre tracts.

Contest Results in 11 Warren Firm Sales

As a result of the recent home beautiful educational exhibition, sponsored by The Washington Post, R. Bates Warren, of M. & R. B. Warren, yesterday announced his firm had sold eleven houses in its development at Leland, Chevy Chase, Md.

Warren attributed this sales activity to the large number of people drawn to the exhibition house loaned by the firm on Forty-fifth street, Leland, during the week it was in progress, which gave the public a thorough opportunity to see how a home of this type could be comfortably and tastily furnished.

MORE SPACE LEASED BY WEAVER BROTHERS

General Expansion Necessitates Renting of Additional Office Room.

Necessitated by the general expansion of its business, Weaver Brothers, 907 Fifteenth street northwest, has leased additional space in the rear of its offices on the ground floor of the Southern Building, which practically doubles the present facilities.

The additional space takes in part of that occupied by the lunchroom in the corridor and the rear of the office room formerly used by the Allan E. Walker Co. When remodeling is completed the private office of Earl MacIntosh, vice president, a large conference room and the insurance and bookkeeping departments will be located there.

It is probable that the personnel of the firm will also be increased in the near future to take care of the increase in business. The firm specializes in loans, insurance, chain store leasing and business properties.

ARCHITECTS TO AID IN FUTURE AIRPORTS

British Royal Institute Is Offering Prizes for the Best Designs.

London, England, May 12 (A.P.).—Budding British architects have been invited to peep into the future and submit plans of their idea of the best imaginative scheme for a London aircraft terminus suitable fifteen years hence. The Royal Institute of British Architects is to decide the competition, which originated with the Gloucester Aircraft Co. and approved by other aviation interests.

The idea of the competition is to stimulate the imagination and foresight of architectural students and to assist them to visualize the influence which aerial development must have upon the design of a first-class aerial terminus for land planes or amphibians only.

Designs will be submitted in September and the awards made in October, the first prize being $625 and the second $100. The competition is limited to students under the age of 30.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS, SUBURB OF CLERKS, IS NOW REAL CITY

Population Up Where Finest Breezes Blow Has Reached Total of 45,000.

EVERY MODERN URBAN IMPROVEMENT IN USE

History Recalled to Illustrate Amazing Progress Section Has Made.

By MALCOLM G. DOUGLAS.
Real Estate Editor.

Some 30 years ago Government clerks seeking a home in the suburbs established the community now known as Columbia Heights, that section of Northwest Washington running north from Florida avenue to Park road and west from Eleventh to Sixteenth street.

Today this same territory is one of the most thriving business and residential centers in the District of Columbia, and its supporters have given it the term of "a city in itself," with its modern business section and handsome dwellings, along with schools, churches and transportation facilities, which make the community practically independent of downtown Washington.

While the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association takes in the territory of Eleventh street to Sixteenth street and Florida avenue to Shepherd street, the records of the District surveyor for the year 1895 show the boundaries of Columbia Heights to be from Eleventh to Fourteenth streets and Florida avenue to Park road. The section west of Fourteenth street and north of Florida avenue to Park road in the last century, was owned by old Columbia College, now a part of George Washington University.

Takes Name of College.

The tract was designated on the plat book from Florida avenue to Clifton streets, as Columbian College lands, south part; from Clifton to Fairmont streets, as University Park, and from Fairmont to Irving streets, as Columbian College lands, north part.

The university acquired the land about 1831, and disposed of its last holdings about 1885, and what is known as Columbia Heights today derived its name from Columbian College.

This territory was beyond the original plan of the city of Maj. L'Enfant, the northern boundary being Florida avenue. The Fourteenth street horse cars stopped at this point for years, but later, with the coming of electricity tracks were laid to Park road, and the northern terminus of the line was at Park road, and the old car barn stood on the site of the present Arcade Market.

In the old highway plan of the District, the streets in this area west of Fourteenth street were named after the presidents and other officials of the old Columbian institution.

What is now Belmont street was Staughton street; Chapin street was named after the second president of the college; Clifton street was Douglas street; Euclid street was Roanoke place; Fairmont was Huntington street; Girard was Binney place; Harvard was Bacon street, Columbia road took its name from the college, and Irving street was Kenesaw avenue.

Some Present Statistics.

Some conception of the present size of Columbia Heights can be obtained from the following figures: This section now contains 18 churches, nine schools, 3 fire engine houses, two banks, three theaters, one hospital group, one telephone exchange, one postoffice, one public library branch, and one power station. In addition there are some 360 stores, two lumber yards, three laundries, twelve filling stations and garages, and 190 apartment houses. An estimate of its population today places it in excess of 45,000.

Following upon its development as a residential center, Columbia Heights has become a modern, up-to-date business community in recent time. During the last seven years, particularly the business section centering around Fourteenth street and Park road, has grown by leaps and bounds, and its appearance has been completely changed by the construction of a modern bank, now being enlarged, office and theater buildings and attractive shops and stores.

During the last year the Arcade Market Building has been enlarged and improved and plans are now being worked out for auditorium space to handle 10,000 persons.

Swept by Park Breezes.

Residents of the section today enjoy advantages peculiar to the locality. First of all the elevation is nearly 500 feet above the sea level, and is swept by breezes from the park areas of Rock Creek and Piney Branch to the west and north.

The houses and apartment buildings in the region are modern in every respect and transportation facilities to the heart of the city by car and bus are of the best.

Shopping in Columbia Heights is most convenient to the housewife, because she has ample facilities right at hand, with high grade retail stores, numerous luncheon places, and attractive motion picture theaters to while away the leisure hours. In addition, nearby parks afford an excellent place for her children to play. Excellent public schools and splendid church buildings also add to the section.

With this record of past achievement to its credit, and with its attractions as a residential section, the organized business men of Columbia Heights are confident their section will play a part of continually increasing importance in the business life of the National Capital.

3,000 ARCHITECTS TO ATTEND SESSIONS CALLED THIS WEEK

Mobilization of Arts of Design Will Be Main Topic at St. Louis Meeting.

FOUR CANDIDATES SEEK OFFICE AS PRESIDENT

J. C. Baldwin, of Washington, Is Renominated as National Secretary.

Delegates from 58 chapters, comprising more than 5,000 members, will attend the sixty-first convention of the American Institute of Architects, which begins Wednesday at the Chase Hotel, St. Louis. The president of the institute, Milton B. Medary, of Philadelphia, will preside. Sessions will last three days.

"Mobilization" of the arts of design will be a chief topic of discussion leading to a definite declaration of policy by the convention. Representatives of architecture, sculpture, mural painting and landscape architecture will join in moving for better architecture in America through coordinated effort in these fields.

"The age of specialization is not leading us to the mountain tops," declares a statement made public yesterday by J. Monroe Hewlett, of New York, chairman of the institute's committee on allied arts, who will direct a convention symposium on collaboration in the arts of design.

"While groups of influential citizens charged with responsibilities by Nation, State or city are learning by experience the kind of service that groups of artists as distinguished from individuals, can give them, it is fitting that architects should undertake an appraisal of the forces that make for better architecture, to the end that all such forces shall be mobilized in the service of our country and our time.

Would Coordinate Effort.

"The vaster the fabric of the Nation, the more essential it becomes that the efforts of all the individuals who are contributing to the finished result shall be effectively coordinated."

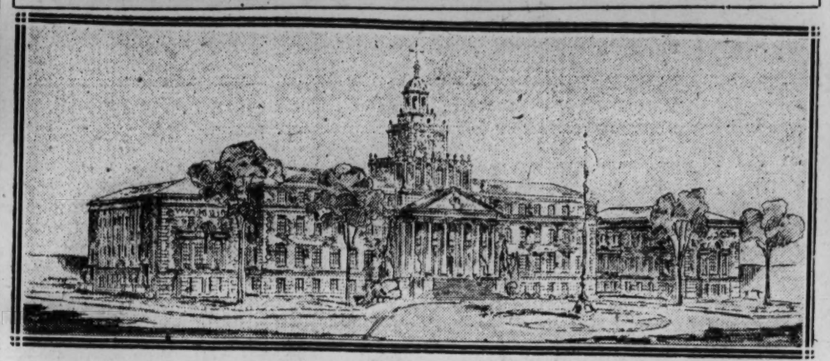

"The Influence of the Layman and Patron of the Arts," "The Influence of Tradition," "The Influence of Environment" and "The Influence of Education" will be chief themes of the symposium.

Community planning, to bring about "balanced" use of neighborhood areas, to adapt zoning to the age of electricity, and to check the "disfiguration" of rural America will be discussed. Public health and safety, construction of school buildings, small houses, and foreign relations will be other topics.

Officers and directors will be elected by the convention. There are four candidates for the presidency of the institute, Charles Allen Favrot, of New

Anderson is the architect, and a member of the committee raising a fund of $100,000 for this locality to carry out the project, as the beginning of the campaign to raise $1,500,000 to cover the cost of the first group of five buildings.

J. CURTIS WALKER JOINS SILVER SPRING CONCERNS

Young Realtor Elected Treasurer of North Washington Realty Co.

WILL CLOSE HIS OFFICE

J. Curtis Walker, prominent young realtor of this city, has been elected treasurer of the North Washington Realty Co. and executive vice president of the North Washington Mortgage & Insurance Co., according to an announcement yesterday by Maj. E. Brooke Lee, president of the realty company. He was elected at the last meeting of the board of directors of these companies.

Walker is closing his offices in the Maryland Title Co., 923 Fifteenth street northwest, where he specialized in the sale of acreage and downtown business properties, and will devote his entire time to his new connections at Silver Spring, commencing June 1.

The North Washington Realty Co. is said to be the largest Maryland owner home building and land development company in the suburbs of Montgomery County and devotes its entire effort to the sale of homes and the development of subdivisions in the northern suburban district of Montgomery County known as "Maryland North of Washington," which includes the general Silver Spring, Woodside, Blair-Takoma sections.

The North Washington Mortgage & Insurance Co., an affiliated corporation, is a sales and finance organization financing builders and home owners in the same general vicinity.

P. Blair Lee, former treasurer of the North Washington Realty Co. and general manager of the Silver Spring Building Supply Co., resigned from these companies on January 1 to accept the junior vice presidency of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, but has retained his stock ownership in both companies. Mr. Walker is taking over the executive responsibilities which Mr. Lee shared in the North Washington Realty Co.

SUMMER SEA TRIPS GROW IN POPULARITY

"Holiday Yachts" Are Put Into Service for Use of British Tourists.

Glasgow, Scotland, May 12 (A.P.).—Holidays afloat are increasing in popularity with people of Great Britain and shipping companies are catering for these by putting into service a number of small liners, which are called "holiday yachts."

Summer passages from and to principal ports in Scotland, England and Ireland are already scheduled and advance bookings numerous. The many Scottish "firths" are among the attractions, and a trip lasting from seven to twelve days will cost the tripper from £8 to £12.

The tourist who wishes to journey farther afield is being catered for aboard larger boats scheduled to run on 57 different cruises during the season, including runs across to Norway, to Spain, Portugal and Morocco, to the Mediterranean ports or to Greece and Constantinople. Charges for this varied program range according to the time and length of journey.

EACH CUBAN HOLIDAY TO SEE IMPROVEMENT

Anniversaries to Be Marked by the Inauguration of Some Public Work.

Havana, Cuba, May 12 (A.P.).—The department of public works of Cuba has set for itself the goal of making every national holiday the inauguration date of an important improvement on the island.

Secretary of Public Works Cespedes, a descendant of the famous Manuel de Cespedes of revolutionary fame, says that his program of improvement will lend practical as well as historical significance to various dates in the history of Cuba.

When the anniversary of the founding of Cuba is commemorated on May 20, there will likewise be the inauguration of the Havana to Guanajay section of the Cuban Central Highway, which, when completed, will provide a through motor road to all principal points of Cuba.

Secretary Cespedes says that the new capitol building, in the course of construction the past year and which will be one of the most imposing edifices on the American continent, will be completed in twelve months. This, also, will be inaugurated on an outstanding day in Cuba's history.

APRIL CONSTRUCTION CONTRACTS IN EAST TOPS ALL RECORDS

$643,137,100 Total Reported in Thirty-seven States for Month.

April construction contracts in the territory east of the Rocky Mountains broke all previous monthly records, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Building and engineering work contracted for last month in the 37 Eastern States (about 91 per cent of the total country), amounted to $643,137,100. August, 1925; March, 1926; August, 1926; March, 1927; April, 1927, and June, 1927, are the only other months on record showing as much as 600 million dollars for construction contracts. June of last year held the previous high record of $632,478,000. The April increase over March of this year was 9 per cent; over April of last year, 6 per cent.

Last month's contract total made another record. It brought the amount of new construction work started in these States since the first of this year up to $2,128,204,100, which is the largest total on record for the first four months of any year. The increase over the first four months of last year was 6 per cent.

Analysis of the April building and engineering record showed the following important classes of work: $276,586,200, or 43 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $117,401,000, or 18 per cent, for public works and utilities; $85,093,400, or 13 per cent, for industrial projects; $84,757,700, or 13 per cent, for commercial buildings; and $32,885,400, or 5 per cent, for educational projects.

Eastern States Total.

New work planned in the 37 Eastern States during the past month reached a total of $631,473,700, being a drop of 6 per cent from the amount reported in the preceding month and a loss of 4 per cent from the amount reported in April of last year.

April construction contracts in New York State and northern New Jersey amounted to $150,905,900. This figure is almost the same as the amount ($152,567,500) reported in the preceding month, but there was a drop of 8 per cent from the April, 1927, record. Included in last month's contract total were the following items of importance: $80,957,900, or 54 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $28,114,400, or 19 per cent, for public works and utilities; $22,140,000, or 15 per cent, for commercial buildings, and $5,901,600, or 4 per cent, for educational projects.

During the past four months there was $573,253,500 worth of contracts let on new building and engineering work in this territory, being an increase of 6 per cent over the total for the corresponding period of last year.

Total for April.

New work planned in New York State and northern New Jersey during the month of April reached a total of $259,780,000. The above figure shows a gain of 10 per cent over the total for March of this year and was 14 per cent ahead of the amount reported in April, 1927.

New building and engineering work started in the New England States during the past month reached a total of $46,420,600. This figure was the highest April contract total on record for this district. It was 10 per cent ahead of the March 1928 total, as well as 9 per cent ahead of the total for April of last year. The following were the most important items contained in the April building record: $22,267,700, or 48 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $6,549,600, or 14 per cent, for public works and utilities; $6,081,300, or 13 per cent, for commercial buildings, and $3,857,100, or 10 per cent, for industrial projects.

Contracts let on new construction in the New England States since the first of this year amounted to $147,657,300, being an increase of 16 per cent over the amount let in the first four months of last year.

Gain Over April.

Contemplated projects as reported in these States during the past month reached a total of $50,531,900. This figure was 7 per cent ahead of the amount reported in April, 1927, but showed a loss of 11 per cent from the amount reported in March of this year.

April construction contracts in the Middle Atlantic States (eastern Pensylvania, southern New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia) amounting to $102,584,200 was the largest monthly total ever recorded in this district. The awarding of two large contracts, one for an electric power plant to be constructed in southern New Jersey at a cost of $10,000,000, and the other for a group of manufacturing buildings to be erected in Virginia at a cost of $17,500,000 helped to make last month's total break all previous records. There was an increase of 47 per cent over the total for the preceding month and an increase of 40 per cent over the total for April of last year.

Analysis of the April contract total showed the following items of note: $40,308,800, or 39 per cent of the total, for residential buildings; $34,612,900, or 34 per cent, for industrial projects; $9,649,600, or 9 per cent, for public works and utilities, and $6,136,900, or 6 per cent, for commercial buildings.

Last month's total brought the amount of new construction started in the Middle Atlantic States since the first of this year up to $270,515,500, being an increase of 9 per cent over the total for the corresponding period of 1927.

New work planned in this district during the month of April reached a total of $108,692,700. This figure showed a slight increase over the amount ($107,605,600) reported in March of this year and was 17 per cent ahead of the total for new work planned during April of last year.

The Pittsburgh district (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky) had a total of $75,005,600 for contracts let on new building and engineering work during the past month. The above figure was 20 per cent below the total for March of this year and was 11 per cent under the total for April, 1927. Included in the April building record were the following items of note: $25,371,700, or 34 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $19,491,100, or 26 per cent, for public works and utilities; $8,146,-160, or 11 per cent, for industrial projects; $8,062,500, or 11 per cent, for commercial buildings, and $6,996,800, or 9 per cent, for educational projects.

New Building Reported.

During the past four months there was $220,939,900 worth of new construction work started in this territory, as compared with $253,659,800 for the first four months of last year, the decrease being 13 per cent.

New work contemplated in April in the Pittsburgh district reached a total of $80,364,900. This figure shows a drop of 29 per cent from the amount reported in the preceding month and was 30 per cent less than the amount contemplated during April, 1927.

New construction started in the Central West (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Southern Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska) during April amounted to $187,232,000. The above figure was the largest April contract total ever recorded in this district. There was an increase of 7 per cent over the March, 1928, record, as well as an increase of 13 per cent over the April, 1927, total. The awarding of a contract for an office building to be built in Chicago at a cost of $10,-000,000 helped to swell the month's record.

April Contract Total.

Analysis of the April contract total showed the following items of importance: $81,885,800, or 44 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $36,451,600, or 19 per cent, for public works and utilities; $31,935,100, or 17 per cent, for commercial buildings, and $16,599,600, or 9 per cent, for industrial projects.

Last month's record brought the total amount of new building and engineering work started in this district since the first of this year up to $630,-216,000, which was an increase of 19 per cent over the amount started in the first four months of last year.

Contemplated new work as reported in the Central West during the month of April reached a total of $217,337,500, being a drop of 8 per cent from the amount reported in March of this year and a drop of 12 per cent from the total for April, 1927.

New Construction Work.

Minnesota, the Dakotas and Northern Michigan had $7,138,200 in contracts for new construction work during the past month. The above figure showed an increase of 30 per cent over the total for March of this year, but was 23 per cent under the record for April, 1927. Included in last month's construction record were the following: $2,705,300, or 38 per cent of the total, for residential buildings; $1,389,200, or 19 per cent, for commercial buildings; $930,-700, or 13 per cent, for educational projects, and $882,000, or 12 per cent, for public works and utilities.

New construction started in the Northwest during the first four months of this year amounted to $17,944,900, which was a drop of 29 per cent from the total for the first four months of 1927.

Contemplated new projects reported last month in this district amounted to $11,874,200. This figure shows an increase of 2 per cent over the total for March of this year, but was 9 per cent under the total for April of last year.

Southeastern States.

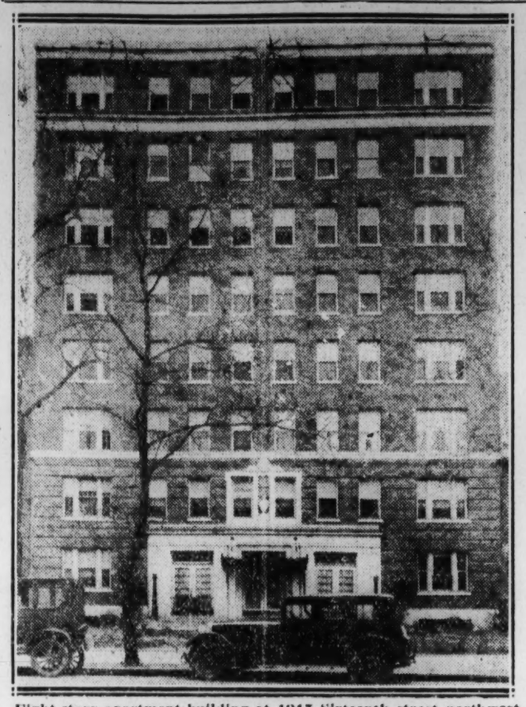

New building and engineering work started in the Southeastern States (the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana) during April amounted to $55,236,700. This figure was the second highest April contract total on record for this district. It was 23 per cent ahead of the total for April of last year and was 10 per cent over the total for March of this year.

The April building record included the following important classes of work: $15,828,100, or 29 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $14,200,200, or 26 per cent, for industrial projects; $12,607,800, or 23 per cent, for public works and utilities, and $4,768,500, or 9 per cent, for commercial buildings.

Last month's record brought the total amount of new construction started in the Southeastern States since the first of this year up to $191,403,400, which was a loss of 7 per cent from the total for the first four months of 1927.

New work planned during April amounted to $79,968,000. This figure was 55 per cent ahead of the total for April of last year, but was 3 per cent less than the total for March of this year.

The Friendly

Shelter of Century-old Trees

Surely it was a forest like Rock Creek Hills which inspired Joyce Kilmer to sing "I Know That I Shall Never See, a Poem Lovely as a Tree." For here one may gratify that race-old yearning to give to his home the shelter and protection and peace that are only possible with friendly trees.

Here, too, nature the artist, is now painting her fairest pictures—in the pink and mauve and tender green of glorious Springtime. Pictures into which golden sunshine and cool shadows, flower-dotted green carpets and sparkling waters invite you to step as a living part.

Truly, Rock Creek Hills, which is a part of Rock Creek Park itself, is very, very wonderful these glorious May days.

Drive out this Sunday and enjoy the beauty of Washington's most delightful "fine home community." Choose the site for that home you've been intending building these many years; or, perhaps your fondest dreams will be reflected in the wonderful new home now for sale at

MRS. VERNON M. HUNT
Of Washington
Who Purchased First New Bungalow

Ideally located on the paved Lee Highway, only one mile west of Falls Church, 7 miles, or 15 minutes from the Key Bridge, and only 23 minutes from downtown Washington.

This is the first subdivision of its kind that has been put on the local market, and it offers a splendid opportunity for an investment whether you want it for building purposes at the present time or not. It is a difficult matter to secure an acre of ground on a hard-surfaced road near a large city for such a low price. The lots in Devonshire Gardens are unusually large and are equivalent in area to six or more city lots, making a model and a novel suburban development.

NEWS OF THE CHESS WORLD

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER.

Today we will take time out to devote a few words to the latest newcomer to local chess ranks, John Winter, formerly of Chicago and Detroit. Since his arrival in this city Mr. Winter has been wreaking havoc among the stronger players of the Capital City Chess Club and has been winning skittle games with monotonous regularity. Not content with this he entered the Kriegspiel tourney and finished high man in his group with a score of three victories and no losses. An examination of his past records, however, partially explains his local successes.

The secret of his steadiness at skittles can doubtless be attributed to his long years of experience in tournament play. During his long sojourn in Chicago he was an a...st annual entrant in the Illinois State championship tournaments, and frequently finished among the leaders of the event. He has also been a participant in the Western Chess Association's annual championship tournaments with few exceptions since 1905, and has always given a creditable account of himself.

At Detroit he quickly became recognized as one of the strongest and most feared match and tournament players. Mr. Winter informs us that during a recent visit to Florida he managed to win the State championship title, which he still claims. Some idea of the strength of the newcomer may be gleaned when it is known that he has two victories to his credit, in Western tournament play, over Norman T. Whitaker, well-known local master and present United States tournament champion.

Winter plays a very aggressive and combinational type of game, which makes him ever a source of danger to the prize winners. One of the victories above mentioned was accomplished in seventeen moves with Winter playing the black side. Whitaker states that it is the shortest defeat he has suffered in clock play.

In order to make local players better acquainted with Mr. Winter, local club officials have arranged to have him give a simultaneous exhibition at the club's quarters, 1317 F street northwest. The event will take place on Saturday evening, May 19, at 8 o'clock. All club members, regardless of their strength, are urged to participate. Visitors are invited to attend and take boards against the newcomer. There will be no charges whatever connected with the affair. Club officials are looking forward to a goodly gathering, inasmuch as this will in all probability be the last exhibition of simultaneous chess to be seen in this city until the cessation of the torrid months.

The appended game is one which Winter won from J. S. Morrison in the Western tourney of 1913. His opponent will be recognized as the several time holder of the Canadian championship title. The finish was both pretty and effective.

Perkins Club Champion.

N. S. Perkins now holds the club championship title at the local club for his second consecutive year. Perkins acquired the title this year only after a hard struggle. In the tournament proper he finished in a tie with E. M. Knapp for premier honors. This made necessary a play-off which was scheduled to be one of two game up, draws not counting. However, after the two had contested two drawn games they agreed that the first one to win would become the title holder. Perkins clinched the title by defeating Knapp in their third partie. The Perry-C. A. Hesse game was finally awarded to the latter by the chess committee and the tournament was thereby officially brought to a close. The final standing is appended.

*Fouts forfeited five games.

C. C. Bettinger, chairman of the chess committee at the local club, announces that an invitation has been tendered the Baltimore Chess and Checker Association to play a match of about 20 or 25 boards in this city on Saturday, June 9. The Baltimoreans defeated the locals when they last journeyed to the neighboring city and the Washingtonians are aching for retaliation.

The annual meeting of the Capital City Club is scheduled for Saturday, June 2, at 8 o'clock. Although the meeting is called primarily for the election of officers it is expected that much other business of unusual importance will come before the assembled club members, including the question of increased dues. Present officials are urgent in their request that every member who can possibly arrange to do so be present at the meeting.

C. C. Bettinger and Carl A. Hesse are playing a private match in which the winner of the first eight games be declared the victor. To date the players have contested two games. The first resulted in a draw and Hesse came out victorious in the second.

Correspondence Play.

Albert T. Leise, secretary-tournament director of the Correspondence Chess League of America writes the following message for all lovers of correspondence chess:

"The league has been in existence for almost 19 years, and in that time it has grown from a local club of a mere handful, called the Correspondence Chess League of Greater New York, into a continental organization totaling more than 300 members. Any player residing on the North American continent, or on an adjacent island, is eligible for membership, and is cordially invited to join in enjoyment of tournament play by mail. All grades of players compete, so newcomers can be accommodated with opponents of their general caliber. In arranging assignments, the tournament director takes heed of all requests, such as for nearby or distant opponents, or for certain opponents, and whenever possible fulfils them.

"The annual dues are $2, all memberships expiring on December 31, but for memberships secured after June 1 only $1 is charged for the balance of the calendar year. Tournament fees are additional. Make all remittances payable to Z. L. Hoover, treasurer, but send them directly to Secretary Leise, 1680 Avenue A, New York City.

"From time to time the league promotes interstate team matches in which non-members may participate. In these events a team representing one State plays against the team of another State. Each player pays at 25-cent fee and contests two games with one of the opposing players, securing a victory certificate if he scores 1½ or 2 points for his team. Anyone interested in such a match should write to Mr. Leise. You who have never played by correspondence should try it out by participating in one of these matches."

It is probable that District players may be allowed to compete in State tourneys by special arrangement with Mr. Leise, particularly if they have had previous residence in some State. We append the schedule for the remainder of the year which the league has published.

June—Quarterly one-round tournament. Divided into sections of four players. Two games between opponents, played to a finish. Each section is complete in itself.

September — Quarterly one-round tournament. Same as June quarterly.

October—Leadership tournament. Divided into three classes, A, B and C. Classification of members is determined through the records of the league, according to the judgment of the tournament director. (Where such records are not available, evidence can be submitted to aid the tournament director in selecting a tentative rating.) These classes are subdivided into sections of seven players. One game between opponents, played to a finish. Each section is complete in itself. Open to all members. Fee, $1. Prizes, section winners, gold medal; second place, silver medal.

December — Quarterly one-round tournament. Same as June quarterly.

Solution of Problem.

The key to No. 263, three-mover by John A. McIlvane, is Kt-Q8. Among those sending in solutions were J. W. Harris, Jacob Frech, J. V. Davies, Harvey W. Wiley, jr., Wilfred C. Page, Clair J. Bressler, and Dell Floyd.

Jacob Frech writes, "McIlvane's 263 is an excellent three-mover. I find no salient feature pointing to the key move, Kt-Q8. On the contrary, the key move surrenders with seeming recklessness the only command of the flight squares, and seemingly wastefully duplicates command of two others; but therein lies the secret of the potency of the key move; for it thereby liberates two powerful pieces, queen and rook, and incidentally enables them to assume better command of the surrendered squares in some of the variations. The problem has about 28 solution series, many of them being difficult two-movers after black's first move. The rook pawn is an irrelevancy." J. W. Harris terms it "quite a pretty problem." Harvey W. Wiley, jr., comments, "A very pretty little problem with at least six variations, a large number for this type of composition. The play following 1....., K-B4 is particularly fine. Mr. McIlvane appears to be quite an artist in the field of lightweight three-movers."

Dell Floyd writes, "Like in all of Mr. McIlvane's problems, the key move is kept well hidden. Mr. Mundelle played a clever trick upon us with No. 262." Clair J. Bressler says, "After spending several days exhausting all possible moves, I am convinced that Kt-Q8 solves the problem, even though the mate in two is encountered provided black moves to Q3 on his first move. This position gave me the most trouble and caused me to eliminate all other possible moves before feeling I had solved the problem."

In answer to J. V. Davies' query, we state that the diagrams which he desires will be forthcoming in the immediate future.

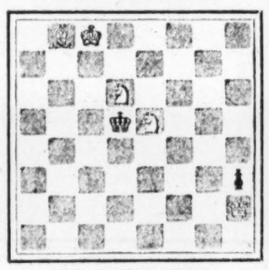

Today's offering is a two-mover by Mr. McIlvane. Solvers are requested to send in their comments, criticisms, or suggestions. Also be on the lookout for second solutions, inasmuch as all these offerings by the Pittsburgher are undergoing their initial publication.

WASHINGTON'S · MOST BEAUTIFUL · STORE

The HECHT CO ~ F St.

OFFICE OF THE SALES PROMOTION MANAGER

May 7, 1928.

The Washington Post,

Washington, D. C.

Attention of Mr. Si Grogan,
Advertising Manager.

Dear Sir:

We are happy to have been included among those exhibitors that helped the Washington Post to sponsor the Home Beautiful week, which occurred late in April. This was splendidly handled by the Post in every way, and on all sides we heard much favorable comment.

We feel that with the trend so definitely upon us for furniture and furnishings modernistic, that the house in Chevy Chase which we outfitted in this new type of furniture was a splendid bit of advertising, not alone for The Hecht Co., but for the Washington Post. We were the first store in town to have modernistic furniture, and the first store in town to exhibit it in a house.

Yours truly,

THE HECHT CO.

PARENT-TEACHER ACTIVITIES

The monthly conference of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations will be held in the auditorium of the Interior Department, Eighteenth and F streets northwest, on Tuesday from 10:30 to 4 o'clock.

The annual reports of all local Parent-Teacher organizations will be read by their presidents.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, will speak at 2 o'clock on the "Summer Round-up" of the children.

Reports will be made by the delegates who attended the convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers held in Cleveland.

The monthly Parent-Teacher Bulletin, containing the reports of all local presidents, will be ready for distribution at the meeting Tuesday. Will the presidents come prepared to take a good number for their members?

Today is designated as Mothers Day, when every man, woman and child should pay homage to mother.

Oliver Wendell Holmes tells us "Youth fades; love droops; the leaves of friendship fall; mother's secret hopes outlive them all." And mother's secret hopes are nearly always their offspring, you and me. When the day is over and the calendar turns, check the next date of importance, Tuesday, May 22, when the whole family can again celebrate at the National Theater when the National Theater Players present "Craig's Wife," George Kelley's Pulitzer prize play for 1926 for the benefit of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations.

Congratulations.

The 1929 convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held in Washington next spring. It has been reported that this is the first time in the history of the organization that a State has won the convention on the first ballot. Six States were using every effort to obtain this great honor.

Summer Round-Up.

The summer round-up chairmen are urged to be present at the meeting of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations on Tuesday afternoon. Any association that has not registered in the campaign and appointed a chairman is requested to do so at once so that all examinations can be completed during the month of May.

This is one of the most important activities of our organization and is being supported by our Superintendent of Schools and the Board of Education. Every elementary school association is expected to enter this campaign and do its best toward sending classes to school in the fall physically fit to do what is expected of them.

For information concerning the summer round-up, write or phone Mrs. H. N. Stull, 408 Fourth street northeast, Lincoln 6241.

National Convention Notes.

Mrs. S. W. N. Marrs, of Texas, was elected president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Miss Catherine Watkins, director of kindergartens of the public schools of the District of Columbia, was elected national chairman of kindergarten extension.

The paid-up membership of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers for the year 1927-1928 is 1,275,401, a gain of 140,000. This is not a padded membership. It means that each one of these 1,275,401 fathers, mothers and teachers has paid his or her dues to the national organization.

Parkview.

On May 3 A. W. Miller, principal of Central High School, addressed the Park View Platoon School Parent-Teacher Association on "Choosing a High School Course." Miller told of the fundamental differences of the District of Columbia high schools and why it is important to choose the high school course with the college course in view. The parent must know the aptitudes of the child before a satisfactory choice can be made.

Park View Boys' Glee Club, directed by Mr. Williams, of the manual arts department, sang several numbers that were well received. Mrs. Bolton, of Grade 2, spoke on the organization and plan of primary work, explaining the activities program followed in the primary grades. The change in the method of teaching reading was explained to the interested listeners, some of whom have been quite disturbed over this method.

Miss Smith spoke on "Seventh Grade Boys and Girls." All parents were given a cordial welcome to visit this grade.

The health chairman, Mrs. Victor Kebler, reported on the May Day physical examinations given May 1 in the school to preschool children. The parents showed much interest and consulted freely with the doctors and the school nurse, Mrs. Alice Everett. Dr. J. H. Bullock, 766 Rock Creek Church road, and Dr. H. C. Duffy, 4201 Illinois avenue, gave their services. Dr. Thomas Linville, school doctor, also served. A number of children were given free dental treatment by Dr. E. H. Sloan, 762 Rock Creek Church road. The past week a group of members viewed the hygiene exhibit at the National Museum arranged by Dr. Whitebread and found it well worth seeing.

Plans are being made for the losing team on the membership drive to entertain the winners with a party. The winning team included those children who have seven or more badges for the attendance of their parents at the meetings.

The following resolution was adopted:

"Be it resolved, That Park View Platoon School Parent-Teacher Association requests the Board of Education of the District of Columbia to include in the annual estimates for 1930 provisions for purchase of the balance of the land in the square on which the present Park View School Building is located, and for such additional building facilities as are needed to make Park View a complete platoon school for eight grades."

Bryan.

The Bryan Association celebrated May Day by having six of the mothers take about 30 pupils to the dentists in the Northeast, where they had their teeth examined and attended to.

John Eaton.

The final meeting for the year of the John Eaton Parent-Teacher Association was held Monday afternoon in the school museum, which the association has installed in the building.

The recently appointed recording secretary, Mrs. C. G. Gilbert, was formally installed in office and the regular business of the organization was transacted in the usual manner.

The following chairmen reported on the work of their committees: Mrs. C. G. Gilbert, clothes conservation; Mrs. Fletcher Sheffield, national publications, and Mrs. Lester Neuman, summer round-up.

Mrs. Frederick Caskey reported on the recent benefit, "The Lady of the Lake," played by Miss Offutt's eighth grade. The play was a financial success, but it was a great success as a demonstration of close cooperation between the parents, teachers, and pupils of the school.

NATIONAL LEADER

Associated Press Photo.

MRS. S. M. MARRS,
of Austin, Tex., newly elected president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Mrs. Arthur Pierce, the social hygiene chairman, presented two resolutions concerning the teaching of that subject which were submitted by the State chairman, Mrs. Roop. There was much discussion on these resolutions, but they were voted upon in the affirmative.

The ways and means chairman, Mrs. R. E. O'Brien, announced the State benefit theater party in the National Theater on May 22.

The association voted to send a letter of appreciation to Stephen Buckingham for the donation of an exhibit of the "Development of the Radio" to the school museum.

The John Eaton banner was awarded to the 7B, 8A class of Miss Dore, and the fourth grade class of Miss Mallaly was presented with the $5 attendance prize for the fourth time this year.

Each pupil in Miss Offitt's class was presented with a school pennant by the association in appreciation for their effort in behilf of the school.

The speaker for the afternoon was the supervising principal of the first division, Henry W. Draper, who explained the junior high school system and the relation of the new Gordon Junior High to the John Eaton.

Langley Pilot.

The Langley Pilot arrived at the State office this week. It is a matter of much rejoicing in the P.-T. A. ranks, when the State publicity and the local and school publicity join hands for the welfare of all children in the District of Columbia. The publicity chairman of the Langley Junior High P.-T. A., Mrs. Gertrude Stant, has an interesting column in the Pilot, under the title of Parent-Teacher Associations News.

Bradley School News.

The publicity department of the D. C. Parent-Teacher Associations was also pleased to receive a news sheet published by the second grade of the Bradley School. It is noted that on Wednesday the second grade took a walk around the Agriculture Buildings and saw some beautiful pansies. This shows that they are alert to see the beauties of nature. The editors of the 2AB News are to be congratulated.

Reservoir—Conduit.

A health play by pupils of the sixth grade and a talk by Miss Gertrude Bowling, of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, on the health of the preschool child, were features of the meeting of the Reservoir-Conduit Road Parent-Teacher Association on Tuesday afternoon.

The annual luncheon for the children is to be held on Thursday at the Reservoir School.

The next meeting is to be held in the evening and will be a card party, Mrs. Hungill, Mrs. Burrows and Mrs. Sorensen will be hostesses.

Lenox—French.

The last meeting for the year of the Lenox-French Parent-Teacher Association was held May 1 in the Lenox School.

A short business meeting was held, at which Principal Lowe expressed the appreciation of the faculty for the help and cooperation given by the parents of the Parent-Teacher Association.

A delightful program was presented by a committee of teachers, Mr. Folmer acting as chairman. W. W. Hebbard showed a number of very interesting pictures of Washington, many taken several years ago. F. W. Wilken, accompanied by L. Guezman, rendered several violin solos. Two groups of pupils, drilled by Mrs. Larcombe, presented a wand drill and folk dance. After community singing, led by Mr. Folmer, refreshments were served by a group of eighth-grade pupils.

This was one of the most successful and largely attended meetings of the year.

Peabody—Hilton.

The annual May festival and luncheon given by the Peabody-Hilton Parent-Teacher Association will be held Thursday. Luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock, and the exercises will begin at 1 o'clock. The school orchestra, directed by Miss Ward, will furnish the music and the physical exercises will be in charge of Miss Naylor.

Parents and friends are cordially invited to attend.

Juvenile Protection.

The Parent-Teacher representative to the Juvenile Protection Association will meet Wednesday at the Epiphany Parish Hall, 1317 G street northwest, at 2 p. m.

Wheatley.

Wheatley School Parent-Teacher Association met May 3 in the school building.

The president's message was read.

Seven hundred and forty-six children took part in the May Day program, held in the school yards.

Three members received certificates from the training class at George Washington University.

The association sent fifteen of the school-safety-patrol boys to see the picture, "Penalty," in appreciation of their good work.

A $5 appropriation was made for the building fund.

There is a campaign on for new members. The grade securing the most new members will be awarded a prize to their room, and a trip for the pupils of the room.

Preschool secretary reported that she would get to see all preschool children before the end of the term, reported seven children examined on May Day.

The new thrift banner was presented.

All were urged to take tickets for the 22d of May at the National Theater for the benefit of the Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Miss Curl's room won prize for most mothers present.

Miss Roscoe Hamilton recited.

Miss Brooks' pupils sang in chorus, accompanied by piano and violin.

Card party for the evening of May 3 was announced.

Tenley—Janney.

At the regular meeting of the Tenley-Janney Parent-Teacher Association Monday, May 5, the treasurer reported a balance of about $150 from the school entertainment last month. The delegates to the Parent-Teacher Institute and the annual District of Columbia convention made reports.

Announcements were made of a school luncheon May 17 and a lawn party at an appropriate date in June.

The president announced the appointment of committees: Mrs. Gray, legislative, chairman; Mrs. W. E. Denton, program; Mrs. Fred Hughes, clothes conservation; Mrs. M. J. Buell, membership; Mrs. Patrick Loughran, ways and means. Notice was given of a proposed amendment changing the date of the election of officers to May in accordance with the recommendation of the District Congress.

The association expressed itself in favor of giving clerical assistants to administrative principals. The president called attention to the "summer round-up" of pupils entering next fall and urged the cooperation of the members. Refreshments were served.

Welfare Magazine Tree.

One of the very beautiful exhibits at the national convention was the "tree" representing the work done in the District of Columbia, in featuring the reading of the official organ of the national congress, the Child Welfare Magazine. The idea and its development were original with the State chairman, Mrs. S. W. Rauscher. It was a source of much pride to the eleven delegates from the District of Columbia.

Facts About Round-Up.

Four hundred and forty-six associations during 1927 carried through the campaign. This group represents 204 communities. About 13,520 children were examined both in the spring and fall; 6,173 defects were corrected as follows: Eyes, 266; ears, 152; teeth, 1,587; tonsils, 1,009; adenoids, 663; heart, 68; lungs, 58; posture, 186; feet, 133; overweight, 256; underweight, 640; skin, 115; glands, 80; hernia, 25; circumcision, 54; vaccinations, 198; miscellaneous, 683. At the fall examinations a group of 2,556 children were 100 per cent.

Edmonds.

Stephen E. Kramer, assistant superintendent of schools, will speak at the final meeting of the year of the Edmonds Association Friday evening at 8 o'clock. All business having been completed and the annual reports of officers turned in, this meeting will be a social affair, with entertainment furnished by the Edmonds Mothers Glee Club. Mrs. H. A. Matthews, newly elected president, will preside.

Mt. Vernon Place Church.

An important and successful part of the children's week celebration at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South was the Parent-Teacher banquet held at the church on Tuesday, May 8, at 7:30 o'clock. One hundred and fifty persons were present. The banquet was served by the girl scout troop of the church, under the leadership of Mrs. W. L. Coffman.

The program was a very interesting one. Miss Lewis, leader of the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia, explained what the Girl Scout movement represents. Mrs. J. S. Coombs, president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the church, made the address of welcome, which was followed by a solo by Dr. Haynes. Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter, president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the District, gave a helpful talk on the necessity of supervised play for children. Mr. John W. Rustin, assistant to the pastor, explained the real meaning of children's week. Miss Francis P. Hill announced the forward step of the Parent-Teacher Association for this year, namely, to start a church school library, and envelopes were distributed that each person present might have an opportunity to contribute to the library fund. Miss Gretchen V. Lord rendered a solo. Miss Eunice Rustin gave two dialect readings. Mr. E. H. DeGroat, jr., made an interesting and instructive talk on "Value of Religious Education."

Grant.

The children of the U. S. Grant School, together with their teachers and the grade mothers, attended the presentation of "Simba" at Poli's recently. This marvelous African picture of jungle life made a deep impression on all present.

Child health day: On the morning of May Day the preschool children were gathered for examination, some at the school, others at the clinic. The examinations were conducted by four physicians, two Parent-Teacher mothers, and the president, Mrs. J. L. Parrish. At 3 in the afternoon seventeen children, accompanied by two teachers and Mrs. Arthur Lowe, grade mother for the first grade, went to the dentists for treatment. At this time it would be well to warn parents to carefully guard the "6-year molar." In many cases these teeth have been neglected, being but shells. Some have to be extracted, which leaves a deformed mouth.

The fifth grade of the school gave a May Day play in assembly, Friday morning. Marion Fowler was queen and her attendants were: Flower girls: Audrey Kubach, Emilie Mayer, Elsie Morton, Florence Miller. Fountain girls: Amelia Bender, Grace Chamberlin, Jamie Tomlinson, Sara Hofbury, Pauline Massey, Joy Keeling, Louise Shackleford, Mary Sheriden. Dairy maids: Sonia Kramer, Mary Carter, Helen Cokenas, Virginia Spragg, Flora Feirson, Marion Hoover, Evelyn Phillips. The jester was Ruth Anderson. Carpenter, Charles Marshall. Keeper of grounds, George Viginer. Watchman and sons: Frances Osgood, Harold Wilson, Edward Thacker. Farmers: Russell Kellar, Robert Barbour, Don Gillespie. William Bender was herald. Court guards: Lynn McDowell, Elmer Collins, Cook, Stephen Banghman.

The lovely play coming as it does in the "Merry Month of May," was gotten up by the talented fifth grade teacher, Miss Elizabeth Chamblien. Pictures were made in the afternoon by Mrs. Parrish, president, and Mrs. Fowler, fifth grade mother.

Hine Junior High.

The Hine Junior High Association will hold the last meeting of the season Thursday at 8 p. m. Officers for the next year will be elected. Music will be provided by the Hine Glee Club, and there will be a demonstration of work done in the dressmaking classes. A cup will be awarded to the leader of the winning platoon in the recent competition drill.

Whittier.

The monthly meeting of the Whittier Parent-Teacher Association will be held Monday at 2 p. m. at the school. A good attendance is desired, as there will be the annual election of officers.

Emery—Eckington.

The officers for the ensuing year for the Emery-Eckington Association, who were elected at the last meeting of the season held at Emery School the evening of May 4, were as follows: Mrs. A. Frazier, president; Mrs. Robert Stickney, first vice president; Mrs. Louis Darling, second vice president; Mrs. E. Earl Wagner, secretary, and Mrs. J. B. Cissel, treasurer.

At the April meeting the banner for having the largest number of parents present was won by Miss Lewis' room, 5 A-B grade, Emery School, and at this recent meeting Mrs. Jones' room, 1 B grade, Emery School, captured the banner.

A benefit movie is being planned for Thursday evening, June 7.

Brent—Dent.

The Brent-Dent Association held a business meeting Monday, April 29, to elect a nominating committee and hear reports from the recent State convention.

The last meeting of the year will be held at the Brent-Dent School tomorrow at 8 o'clock. Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, will be the speaker and will be introduced by Miss Elizabeth Hummer, supervising principal of the seventh division. Pupils from the two schools will give piano, violin and vocal selections. Plans for the school luncheon to be held at the Dent School Thursday, May 17, will be discussed and officers for the year 1928-1929 elected.

Force—Adams.

The monthly meeting of the Force-Adams Parent-Teacher Association was held in Force School, Monday at 3 p. m. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, also the treasurer's report showing a satisfactory balance, and all outstanding bills paid.

The following resolutions were passed: That a letter of thanks be sent to the physicians, Dr. Grove, Dr. Gallagher, Dr. Gager and Dr. Dycus for giving the physical examinations to the preschool children on May Day; that the revisions in the constitution as outlined by the committee appointed for the purpose be accepted; that the president's expenses to the national convention held in Cleveland the past week be paid out of the general fund; that letters be sent to Col. Grant and the Commissioners requesting a much needed playground in this vicinity.

The election of officers for the following year then took place with results as follows: President, Mrs. Chambers; first vice president, Mrs. Clark; second vice president, Miss Gore; secretary, Mrs. Tilley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O'Malley; treasurer, P.-T. A. fund, Mrs. Gager; treasurer of milk fund, Mrs. Haberman.

A rising vote of thanks was given to the retiring treasurer, Mrs. Hughes, who found it impossible to serve longer.

The report of Mrs. Waldman, chairman of summer round-up, was read and showed very satisfactory results. Several children who were unable to be present on May Day will have examinations made later and a number have promised to have private examinations made and defects, if any, corrected, before school opens next fall.

The banners for attendance were again awarded to Mrs. House's eighth grade and Miss Carrother's sixth grade. The kindergarten won the bird.

Henry Polk.

The executive committee of Henry Polk School, Parent-Teacher Association, met at the school Monday to arrange for a monthly meeting which will be held tomorrow at 3:15 at the school. The election of officers will be the business on hand, and a program will be given by the Kindergarten Band.

Benning.

The regular monthly meeting of the Benning Association was held in the schoolhouse Tuesday, May 1, at 2:15 p. m.

The regular routine of business was attended to in the usual way, but more rapidly, as May Day was to be celebrated after school closed.

After the reading of several letters, the meeting adjourned, going into the yard for the following celebration:

A royal court, consisting of a king and queen, court lords and ladies, flower girls and pages, presided at the May Day celebration given by the children for their parents and friends.

Every grade from the first through the eighth took part by song or dance. Following these the physical training awards were made. Later, while a baseball game between the upper grades was played, running and jumping contests were held, with a schlag game following.

Exhibits of work of sewing, cooking, carpentry, &c., were on display.

P.-T. A. Programs.

Parent-teacher programs should put across some of the ideas for which P.-T. A. stands. Programs should be planned to conform to the main building principles of the Parent-Teacher Associations, whose aim is child welfare.

The association is not primarily a financial institution, and raising money is not its chief aim. The school is not a charitable enterprise, and the P.-T. A. need not necessarily be a financial aid to the school board.

But it should advance the intelligence of parents, their knowledge of their job. Each six years the teacher is expected to spend a summer in school, to improve her knowledge of her work. Why should not parents also do things to improve themselves in the business of being parents? The object of P.-T. A. meetings is to learn more of our children's needs. Do your programs so function?

When your members go home, do they feel that they have received something that will help them in their jobs? The P.-T. A. should be a study club, and parents should know more at the end of the year than at the beginning. Your association is a success, if, in case it should disband it would be missed by the community—From the Vermont Bulletin.

Carbery.

Mrs. John W. Davis presided at the meeting of the Carberry P.-T. A. held May 8. Mrs. William H. Rowe, who recently returned from the National Congress of Parents and Teachers convention held at Cleveland, gave an account of the convention. She aid that there was an urgent need for well trained and well informed leaders in P.-T. A. work, and that we must go farther than studying our local organization and must reach out for a larger field of work.

It was voted by the association to give a farewell party to the sixth grade class which will leave the Junior High in June. An amendment to the constitution was offered whereby the annual election would be held in June instead of October.

Mrs. William Domdera reported on clothes conservation; Mrs. Alice David from the Juvenile Protective Association, and Mrs. Walter Hagen on publicity. Mrs. John Rosson told of the success of the Peabody-Hilton-Carbery Schlag Team in winning the cup for the sixth division. It was decided to hold a card party at Northeast Masonic Temple on May 29.

Barnard.

Barnard Parent-Teacher Association will hold its last meeting of the season at the school on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The annual election of officers will be held at this meeting.

Keene.

The Joseph R. Keene P.-T. A. opened its meeting Tuesday by songs and recitations by the pupils of the seventh grade under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. B. E. Drake.

Minutes of the previous meeting and the State and national presidents' messages were read by the secretary, Mrs. J. C. Brown.

Words appropriate to our president, Mrs. F. D. Morris, who has recently been elected fourth vice president to the State congress, was sung to the music of the P.-T. A. song composed by Mrs. Margaret Sisson. A resolution was proposed by Mrs. H. J. Overman to make certain changes in the present constitution and by-laws to be acted upon at the next meeting.

Appropriation was made to purchase records for the school and hire a bus to take the boys and girls to the Bloomingdale Playground to play hand ball and schlag in the next scheduled games.

Mrs. R. T. Wyche reported progress on the library program for the coming summer.

New members admitted were Mrs. Charles T. Grove, Mrs. F. A. Eastern, Mrs. Irvin Hollander and Mrs. William J. Dunkum.

An entertainment program consisted of songs by Mrs. George T. Grove, Bernard Joy and a recitation by Dora Funk and Bernard Joy.

Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, vice president of the State congress, addressed the association on the subject of "What Is the State Congress Functions?"

Mrs. B. E. Drake, teacher of the seventh grade, won the attendance banner for the evening.

Woodridge.

The Woodridge Parent-Teacher Association will have Dr. La Salle, assistant superintendent of the Washington Schools and director of mental tests for the District of Columbia, as the speaker at the meeting of the association on Thursday evening.

The children of the sixth grade have prepared an attractive number for this meeting and the Woodridge-Langdon Orchestra will play. The committee is arranging other interesting features that will be announced later.

Mrs. Bennert, teacher in charge of the third grade of the Woodridge School, took the children of that grade on a sightseeing trip one day last week, visiting the Congressional Library, the Capitol, the Union Station and the Postoffice, where Assistant Postmaster Haycock gave them two guides who showed the children the interesting things that are done with the mail after it is brought to the postoffice; after which they went to the Lincoln Memorial and to the Washington Monument, making both an interesting and instructive trip through the Capital City of their Country.

Woodridge Honor Roll.

1-B—Bobby Bradly, Frank Dwyer, Benjamin Elliot, Donald Luke, John Murphy, Mary Francis Fimmer, Ruth Mitchell, Marie Schrodt. 2-A—Harvey Major, Leon Myers, Jack Firestone, Mary Benson, Alline Dietz, Sulmarie Spence. 2-B—John Reilly, Pleas Valentine, Harriot Davis, Mabel Long, Anna Snlegoski, Marcelle Libonati, Virginia Schade, Patricia Pratt. 3-A—Nelson Rogers, Doris Thompson. 3-B—Robert Benson, Olive Varney, Robert Strizzi. 4-A—Olive Wharton, Dorothy Carrol, Lorna Moyer, Virginia Manson Willis Dobbins. 4-B—Ollie Rosenfeld, Charles Channing, Donald Onyon. 5-A—Exleen Kellermon. 6-B—Jean Rassler.

A dinner to be given by the executive committee of the association to the teachers of the Woodridge School is being arranged for by the hospitality committee, announcement of which will be made as soon as the plans have been completed.

The bridge and 500 card party given by the association on April 19 was an unusually successful one in every way and the association is especially grateful for the cooperation and help of the friends and patrons of the school and wish to thank the following firms for their generous help in contributing so

Let Me Show You Through—these beautiful semi-detached homes

in CLEVELAND PARK

As we approach you will be favorably impressed with the gray rubble stone terrace walls, and the wide concrete front porch. Entering the front door to the reception hall and living room, the hardwood floors, the attractive lighting fixtures and cheery open fireplace will instantly win you—the dining room offers opportunities for arranging your furniture tastefully. The kitchen is large and bright as are all other rooms. The attic gives ample room for storage. The double rear porches are screened and we look out upon the brick garage which matches the house.

And, oh, we almost forgot to take a peek at the cellar. If you know anything at all about home construction you can tell at a glance that these homes are substantially built—all the way through. The automatic hot-water heater—and other cellar equipment is the very best.

HOMES IN FLORIDA

People of leisure and means should consider the desirability of going to a part of the country where living conditions are easier and profitable; where the winters are mild, where nature furnishes three crops per year to those who wish to farm, where poultry, pigs and dairying can be carried on at profit and where land is reasonably priced.

Little homes with 5 and 10 acres garden land can be secured for $1,500 to $2,000 on easy terms. Country estates 100 to 200 acres beautiful land are from $5,000 to $10,000 within 30 minutes' ride over paved highway to one of the best cities in the South.

BROADCASTING SYSTEM IS USED IN CLASSROOMS

Loud Speakers Enable Principal to Address Pupils From Office.

PROGRAMS ALSO GIVEN

New Orleans, May 12 (A.P.).—Modern science is relieving the tedium of the school teacher's day in New Orleans schools.

Through the novel use of the "public address" system, consisting of the microphone, amplifier and projector, the principal of the La Salle Grammer School sits at her desk and makes announcements and issues instructions to the entire student body and teachers in their class rooms. Visiting speakers and musical programs are likewise heard through the loud speakers.

Faced with the necessity of providing a means of assembly for the 510 pupils, the board of education decided to test the address system instead of erecting an auditorium. So successful has been the operation, the broadcasting sets have been ordered installed in six other schools.

"I don't see how we ever managed without the system," Miss Gertrude Ellis, the La Salle principal, says, "but when I became a member of the faculty when the school opened in 1901, such an inventoin was undreamed of. Our meager facilities then were sufficient, but the school has grown until I would be lost in having to go from room to room to see teachers and pupils.

"The results are more efficient and I get twice as much work done. The system also has reduced the fire hazard, since I can summon the children for fire drill without the delay of ringing the old bell."

As the programs are varied and all of them not of universal appeal, a switchboard is maintained so that the interested classes may be included in the broadcast and the others shut off. A radio receiving set is in the principal's office, and frequently the broadcasts are amplified throughout the building.

TO ATTEND SESSIONS CALLED THIS WEEK

exhibition of the civic buildings of St. Louis. Harry F. Cunningham, of New York, will speak.

Producers' Council Talks.

Discussion of the report of the board of directors is scheduled for Friday morning, followed by a noon luncheon at which O. C. Harn will discuss the Producers' Council. Routine business will occupy the afternoon.

The concluding session will be held at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening at the Art Museum, when the results of the elections will be announced and the new president of the Institute inducted into office. Fellowships, the craftsmanship medal and the fine arts medal will be awarded. A formal reception at 9 p. m. will close the convention.

Several preliminary meetings are scheduled. The Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture meets Monday and Tuesday. The national council of architectural registration boards and the producers' council convene on Tuesday.

Arrangements for the convention are in charge of a St. Louis convention committee, headed by L. Baylor Pendleton.

A statement by President Medary calls attention to the public exhibition of Goodhue's work. The statement says:

"The vice president of the institute, William Emerson, of Boston, has arranged with Mrs. Bertram Grosvenor Goodhue and with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which is custodian of a large portion of Goodhue's works, for an exhibition to be held as a feature of the convention program. The exhibition will be located in the room adjacent to the convention hall, which is at the east end of the main floor of the hotel.

"Mr Emerson has been successful in gathering what is believed to be the most complete exhibition of Mr. Goodhue's work ever assembled. The exhibition will be hung with special care and in such a way as to make convenient the enjoyment and study of the work of that great architect."

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

PLAY OF ADVERSARIES OF THE DECLARER.

IN the game of Auction Bridge there are many who play their cards creditably as Declarer; they rarely overlook a chance to develop special opportunities in the hand, or lose a "cold trick" by bad play. But quite a considerable percentage of these same players who manage Dummy and the offensive so admirably, frequently fail to recognize all the possibilities of defense when they are performing against the Declarer. A trick saved by the adversaries in defense might be worth over 250 points if Declarer needed just one trick to go game and rubber, while an extra trick won by Declarer might mean only six inconsequential points, but there seems to be so much more fun and thrill obtained from playing the Declarer's cards that many perfect themselves in the fine points of Declarer's play and neglect the equally fine points in the play of the adversaries. Many a capable pair of players have allowed a contract to be made by default—one might almost say—or have seen Declarer score a game to which he was in nowise entitled without realizing that a life-saving opportunity had been overlooked by them.

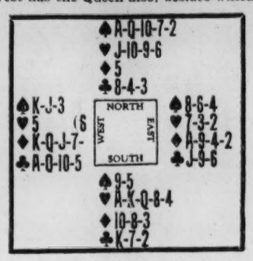

Discussing the possibilities of the defense the first thought that suggests itself is the old-time rule inherited from Whist: "Lead through strength and up to weakness." In Whist this important strategy was recognized in the celebrated rhyming rules of that game:

"When looking for a lead
'Tis seldom wrong
To lead up to the weak
Or through the strong."

In Bridge this principle is just as important as it was in Whist, and much simpler for Declarer's opponents to put into effect on account of the exposed Dummy. Any one must appreciate that when Dummy has only small cards in one suit and Ace-Queen or King-Jack in another, the weak suit should be led up to rather than the tenace, but there are many players who could see that much if they were in the lead, but who would never think about manipulating the play so as to secure the opportunity to make an advantageous lead "up to" weakness.

Suppose. In the following deal, that South bid a Heart, West doubled, North jumped to two Hearts and all passed; then that West led the King of Diamonds to the first trick.

If East should play a small Diamond, West would win the trick and then would have to lead again; but East should be able to see the advantage of leading from his hand up to Dummy's weak Clubs, and realize that this lead can be secured only by winning the first trick (by overtaking West's King) and at no real sacrifice. The King lead, with East holding the Ace, shows that West has the Queen also; besides which, it is evident that East and West will not get more than one Diamond trick. West doubled South's Heart informatorily, showing presumable strength in the other three suits, including Clubs; so he probably wants a Club led up to Dummy's weakness. In addition to this, East should appreciate that unless he leads Clubs, South may obtain Club discards on North's Spades.

Ordinarily it would waste a trick to play an Ace on partner's King, and if East lacks imagination and neglected to use his reasoning power he would duck the first trick as a matter of course; it will be seen from the diagram that if East should play his Diamond Ace and return the Jack of Clubs, East and West would win four tricks and save the game before Declarer could get started; if he fail to do so, the Declarer will make game.

Many lead placing opportunities present themselves to the adversaries and it frequently is necessary to overtake partner's trick in order to make the desired profitable attack on Dummy.

One of the charms of Auction Bridge is that unusual situations happen more frequently than the average player anticipates, and it is the ability to diagnose and act on them that distinguishes the expert from the ordinary good player.

Stuart Junior High.

The Stuart Junior High Home and School Association met, May 2. Mrs George B. Lady presiding. Mrs. Magruder reported on the benefit theater party recently held, also on the Child Welfare Magazine. Others reporting were Mrs. Pitcher, hospitality; Mrs. Schmidt, refreshments; Mrs. Charles Nestler, reading circle, and Mrs. Ira Biggs, legislation. Miss Lucas, teacher, read the State president's message, and Mrs. Joseph Sanders, health chairman of the District congress, spoke on the relation of a child's health to its intelligence rating.

Miss Beller, teacher, told of the friendship doll that is to be sent to Roumania by the Stuart Junior High Red Cross, and had it on display. Prizes for the section honor roll and also for the best attendance at monthly meetings were awarded to Miss Dagnall's section, 8B1. These prizes were a picture of Old Ironsides and a fern stand. Dr. Schwartz told about the afternoon that the school spent at the Plaza playground in the competitive physical training activities.

The banner for attendance was again won by the 8B1 section. Miss Dagnall, teacher.

Singing Mothers.

The "Singing Mothers" chorus of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations sang at the WRC broadcasting station on Thursday of the past week. They sang "Our Battle Hymn for Children," "The Together Song," "Our P.-T. A. Song," "The End of Year," and "The Parting Song." This was a new venture of our "Singing Mothers" of which the D. C. P.-T. A. is very proud, and it is hoped that the public will have the pleasure of hearing them many times.

Legislation.

The committee on legislation of the D. C. Congress of Parent-Teacher Associations, attended the weekly meeting of the committee on the District of Columbia, House of Representatives, on Wednesday morning, May 9. Four bills relating to the schools were reported favorably by the subcommittee on education, Mr. Reid, chairman, and the reports accepted by the full committee. These bills were (1), relieving the Board of Education from individual liability for official acts of the board; (2), permitting Government employes to teach in night schools when the total of both salaries is over $2,500 per annum; (3), clarifying language in the teachers' salary act, and (4), providing free textbooks and supplies for all children in the public schools. The "degree-conferring" bill was also reported with an amendment providing that when diplomas are granted for correspondence courses, it should be plainly so stated on the diploma.

All local committees on legislation are urged to attend the meeting of the House District committee occasionally as there is no better method of becoming informed regarding legislation affecting the District of Columbia.

Emery-Eckington.

The officers for the ensuing year for the Emery-Eckington Association, who were elected at the last meeting of the season, held at Emery School the evening of May 4, were as follows: Mrs. A. Frazier, reelected president; Mrs. Robert Stickney, first vice president; Mrs. Louis Darling, second vice president; Mrs. E. Earl Wagner, secretary, and Mrs. J. B. Cissell, reelected treasurer.

At the April meeting the banner for having the largest number of parents present was won by Miss Lewis' room, 5 A-B grade, of Emery School, and at this recent meeting, Mrs. Jones' room, 1 B grade, Emery School, captured the banner.

A benefit movie is to be given by the association Thursday evening, June 7.

Cripples Who Work Praised by Tunney

New York, May 12 (A.P.).—Cripples who make themselves breadwinners, in the opinion of Gene Tunney, show more real courage than any hero he knows—home run hitter or champion boxer—does. He gave his views at graduation exercises in a trades school for the disabled.

GIRLS FRIENDLY SOCIETY

On May 21 a benefit performance of "Craig's Wife" will be given by the National Theater Players for the Holiday House.

Among those who have taken boxes are Mrs. William C. Rives, Mrs. Henry W. Watson, Mrs. William Livingston Crounse, Mrs. Mackay Smith, Mrs. Randolph McKim, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mrs. John C. Boyd and Mr. Richard Harlow.

The branch at Christ Church, Rockville, will present "'tis Jarley's Wax Works" on May 24 and 25.

Among those taking part are Miss Mildred Ward, Miss Julia Montgomery, Miss Mary Somervell, Miss Maud Wilson, Miss Shirley Prescott, Miss Emily Markland, Miss Hallie Gott, Miss Mervale Bond and Mrs. Walter Williams. The play is being directed by Mrs Berry Clarke and Miss Almoney.

"In Laws and Outlaws," will be presented Friday by the branch at St. James' Chapel, Bowie, Md., under the direction of Miss Marjorie Zug.

The branch at Epiphany Chapel held a dance May 3. Mrs. Charles Boggs was in charge of the refreshment committee. This was the last dance of the season.

The candidates' class of Epiphany Chapel held the last meeting of the year Monday afternoon. Dorothy Harding, Mary Wilson and Margaret Cornwell gave recitations and Mary Margaret Carroll and Isabel Riggles danced.

At the annual diocesan candidates' service and party May 5, silver loving cups were awarded to Esther Kurtz and Margaret Cornwell for a perfect attendance record for 5 years. The cups were presented by Mrs. E. B. Meigs, diocesan president of the society. Ruth Hartung, a member of the candidates' class at St. John's Church, Georgetown, was awarded a blue ribbon, in addition to the silver loving cup given her last year, for 6 years' perfect attendance.

Miss Alice Gerow, branch president of the branch at St. Stephen's Church; Miss Ruth House, Miss Margaret Heiff, Miss Catherine Scribener and Miss Elizabeth Shanks, all members of the branch, spent the week-end at the Holiday House.

Last Sunday afternoon the Rev. George Grambs, assistant rector of St. Stephen's Church, held a service in the Eleanor Lewis Memorial Chapel at the Holiday House.

Additional members of the branch who came down Sunday were Mrs. Frank Sherman, Miss Mildred Sherman, Miss Dorothy Shaffer, Miss Frances Sherman, Miss Fanita Clair Mont, Miss Virginia Jordan and Miss Lydia Gerow. Miss Margaret Heiff took up the offering at the service in the chapel.

The branch meeting Monday evening was held in the parlors of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. The candidates' class will also meet there until the new St. Stephen's Church and parish hall are completed.

A business meeting was held by the branch at St. John's Church, Georgetown, on Tuesday evening, and a report of the dance given last week was made. Mrs. A. S. Stewart is instructing the probationers' class whose members will be admitted within the next few weeks.

The girls in the branch at St. David's Chapel worked for the bazaar, which they will hold the last Friday in May. At the meeting Tuesday afternoon, Theresa Hongell was awarded a prize for the best sewing. Marion Traveland and Frances Purois prepared and served refreshments. The service was led by the girls. Several members were present at the corporate communion last Sunday.

The branch at Epiphany Church held the usual supper and classes Monday evening, followed by a business meeting. The chorus class assisted the entertainment given by the branch at Trinity Church Friday evening.

The candidates' class at the Church of Our Saviour Brookland, will give a benefit performance of "Betty's Dream" Friday.

The usual monthly social of the branch at the Chapel of the Nativity was held Monday evening. Plans were discussed for a dramatic entertainment to be given June 5 under the direction of Mrs. Clyde Bell.

"Love Pirates of Hawaii" was presented by the branch at St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek, Tuesday evening in the parish hall.

The branch at Trinity Church gave a play and dance Friday evening.

Few Biting Insects Are Poisonous.

DR. H. E. Ewing has proved that very few of the American biting insects and near insects are poisonous. He tried out many of them that, according to vague public belief, are deadly. His method was simple.

He induced the animal to bite him and his friends willingly and unwillingly, catch as catch can, and specially arranged, briefly and for as long a period as desired. In short, he worked every turn in the technique of biting. He gave the animal the best of of it at every turn. His conclusion was the entire lot is a bunch of fakers. They do not pack enough poison to hurt anybody.

First, he invited a striped scorpion to the biting party given by himself and friends. He held this scorpion on his finger and prodded him until he bit. There was a little irritation and stinging, but it was all gone in three or four hours. No treatment was needed.

Next came a giant whip scorpion. His bite caused no ill effects except those due to the mechanical effects of the bite, plus a slight irritation. Next came a common tarantula. The bite of this near spider caused a little bleeding, but that was about all.

Another variety of tarantula was slightly poisonous. His conclusion was that the bite of this tarantula was not serious, "but a large dose injected into a small child would probably cause some pain and discomfort."

He then tried a trapdoor spider, a member of the tarantula family. He found that it carried less poison than do the ordinary webspinning spiders, and they have almost none.

Two other varieties of spider were tried. Of one, he wrote: "No harm." Of the other: "Slight irritation."

There is one kind of spider that packs a fair dose of poison. That is the variety known as "The Merry Widow." The male of that species has no poison. The bite of the female caused some pain, itching, and constitutional effects. While it was much the most poisonous of the animals experimented with up to that time, he found this spider not aggressive under ordinary circumstances and generally fairly harmless.

As to the house centipede, his conclusions were: "Fears not justified." Its dose of poison is trivial and its jaws are to weak to penetrate the skin of an adult.

He forced a giant waterbug to bite him. He found the bite "painful, but the pain was transitory."

Speaking generally, he thinks that when any great amount of irritation follows the bite of these insects, particularly if it persists, it is because of secondary infections rather than of the bite itself. It will be recalled that the same is true for mosquito bites.

PREVENTING INSANITY.

M. J. writes: Can insanity be prevented and how?

I am a nervous young lady. Recently I read that insanity can be inherited. Since then I have been very depressed, since we have a case of insanity in the family.

REPLY.

It can.

There are several kinds of insanity. The method of prevention varies according to the type of the disorder.

Emotional insanity can be prevented by training in emotional control and calm.

In some instances paranoia can be prevented by training. Insanity in the wake of epilepsy can be prevented by right living, that is, by hard work, preferably manual labor, eating lightly and properly, and regulating the bowel habits.

Insanity due to alcohol and other drugs can be prevented by avoiding the cause.

Paresis can be prevented by treatment of the basic disorder.

FRENCH SPRING TELLS OF NEARING DISASTER

Waters Gush Forth as They Did in Revolution, in 1870 and 1914.

Maromme, France, May 12 (A.P.).—Some new national disaster is foreseen through the sudden activity of the mad spring of Maromme."

It is flowing again, flooding fields and roads after ten years of quiet. Legend makes it the certain signal of catastrophe.

Back in 1789, when the French Revolution was about to begin the mad spring began to flow and continued during the reign of terror according to local history handed down by word of mouth. Likewise, it broke a long dry spell to flow again in 1870 and continued during the European war of that time. True to its reputation, it became active again in the last spring of 1914, and ceased when the armistice was signed.

Now there is a greater flow than ever and the villagers are alarmed, many taking the long way around to avoid passing near it, others crossing themselves as they go by.

Combines May Solve Problem of Harvest

Winnipeg, May 12 (A.P.).—Western Canada's annual harvest labor problem may be solved, at least to some extent, authorities say, by the combined harvester-thresher. In the past it has been necessary to import 60,000 men from other parts of Canada and from the United States to assist in garnering the crops.

More than 770 combines were used in western Canada in 1927, an increase of 596 over the previous year.

It is forecast that as many as 1,000 combines will be operating in the wheat fields of the Canadian West in 1928. The area to be cut and threshed by each machine is estimated at about 600 acres.

Carbonated Beverages

By DR. DANIEL R. HODGDON.

By DR. DANIEL R. HODGDON,
Formerly president of Hannemann Medical College and Hospital of Chicago, director Industrial Educational Bureau, president of College of Technology, Newark; lecturer Newark Institute of Arts and Sciences and member of the faculty of New York University and New Jersey State Normal School.

DR. DANIEL R. HODGDON.

The use of carbonated beverages has come more of a blessing to humanity than a detriment. Many people have a peculiar tendency of acquiring a "dry" habit just as some people acquire a drinking habit. This habit is very prevalent. It is purely a habit and one which has been brought about through a slow and persistent neglect of the natural instinct of thirst. There are some people who never drink water between their meals. Among such people an increase of the water supply would result in a very beneficial reaction upon the system.

When people establish the habit of taking a certain amount of water every day they usually derive tremendous benefit from the change. Water is an aid to digestion. The old idea that drinking water with the meals unduly diluted the digestive fluids has been found to be erroneous.

Water drinking promotes an excessive flow of gastric juices. Too large amount, of course, would be detrimental because it brings on an acidity of the stomach. Carbonated beverages have an important part to play in the consumption of water. Frequently people who have acquired the "dry" habit will, because of the pleasant taste of the flavored carbonated beverage, consume a certain amount of this liquid with profit to the system.

The increased use of carbonated beverages undoubtedly shows an improvement in the average consumption of water. The carbonated beverages all have more or less a stimulating and cooling effect upon the stomach. The slight amount of gas introduced into the system through the use of carbonated beverages has a tendency to aid in cases of constipation by breaking up the packed condition of waste material in the alimentary canal.

In addition to the value of the water consumption there is also a useful and beneficial result obtained in the drinking of carbonated beverages which have been flavored with genuine fruit material. Carbonated beverages of this sort often furnishes the system quite as much important nutritive salts as many foods. These salts are in such a form as to be readily and easily assimilated by the human system. It must be remembered, however, that all of the above presupposes a clean, wholesome, honest product.

Carbonated beverages sweetened with real sugar may be considered foods, those sweetened with saccarine or other artificial material which is not absorbed into the body as a food material is quite valueless or is greatly lessened in value from a dietetical standpoint.

Some of the artificial fruit flavors may have a beneficial reaction upon the system as sort of appetizer, but in general they add nothing of dietetical value. The natural fruit flavors, of course, are the superior types of carbonated beverages.

The increased use of the carbonated beverages with meals is not to be discouraged. The favorable action of the carbonic acid gas in the breaking up of the food packs and the stimulating action upon the flow of the gastric juices all valuable assets in the normal healthy reaction of the human system.

Only that type of carbonated beverage should be selected which has been carefully made under the most wholesome and rigid sanitary conditions. It should be a type that is sweetened with sugar and of the natural fruit flavors. Only a brand which is well known to be carefully prepared and strictly indorsed for its purity and wholesomeness should be used.

There are many mongrel types of carbonated beverages coming on the market every year. They are made to sell rather than for their real honest value. They are often concoctions which are thoroughly unfit for consumption from a dietetical standpoint. In making purchases of carbonated beverages, it may be worth more from the standpoint of health and well-being to pay a little more and buy a superior brand. When this is done there is no harm in the use of carbonated beverages both as a food and as an incentive for an increased consumption of the water supply in the system.

TESTED RECIPES

Ginger Ale Salad.

(This recipe serves eight.)

1 envelope gelatin.
½ cup cold water.
1 cup boiling water.
1 cup ginger ale.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 cups diced fruit—white grapes, pineapple and oranges.
1 tablespoon crystallized ginger, cut fine.
Juice of one lemon.
2-3 cup sugar.

Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes; dissolve in boiling water; add sugar, salt, crystallized ginger, lemon juice and ginger ale; cool; when it begins to thicken, add fruit.

Baked Ham.

Here is a very nice recipe for baked ham:

Take one slice of smoked ham, 1 inch thick. Rub on the ham 1 tablespoonful of Coleman's dry mustrd. Place in a pan that it nearly fills, cover with milk and bake in a moderate oven until tender. Serve with baked potatoes.

Breaded Pork Chops.

Prepare and season the chops; beat the yolks of 2 eggs, dip the chops in the yolks and then in cracked dust. Fry in fat. Serve with tomato sauce.

Macaroni With Corn.

One pound packed macaroni (cooked), two tablespoonfuls butter, two cups corn, two cups milk, two eggs.

Fried Macaroni.

Put desired amount of cooked macaroni into a frying pan with butter, pepper and salt to taste. Two or three eggs may be fried with the macaroni if desired. This is easily prepared, delicious and full of food value.

Spiced-Cheese Pudding.

2 slices stale bread.
2 eggs.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 cup milk.
1 cup cottage cheese.
¼ teaspoon soda.
½ cup sugar.
½ cup seeded raisins.
½ teaspoon allspice.
¼ teaspoon mace.
¼ teaspoon cloves.

Cut the bread into cubes and place in a greased baking dish. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately. Blend with yolks the milk, salt and sugar and cheese, to which the soda has been added. Add the spice and chopped raisins and lastly fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour this mixture over the cubes of bread and bake like a custard in a moderate oven.

If desired the white of 1 egg may be beaten separately, sweetened with 1 tablespoon of sugar, and spread over the top of the pudding just before removing it from the oven.

Corn muffins or cold rice cooked dry and flaky may be substituted for bread.

Old Dutch Cheese Cake.

The rule is the same as that for the filling of the cottage cheese pie, except that the milk should be reduced to one-half cup, two tablespoons cornstarch should be used, and the flavoring usually is of lemon juice and rind with mace or nutmeg. White corn sirup may be substituted for part of the sugar if the milk is reduced in proportion. Bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven or until brown. This makes a very firm custard.

Pineapple Salad.

Place lettuce leaves in an individual salad dish. Place on each 1 slice of pineapple, 1 piece of cream cheese in the center, some ground nuts and serve with mayonnaise.

Tapioca Pudding.

Use 5 tablespoonfuls one-minute tapioca with 1 quart of milk. Boil a minute, add the yolks of 2 eggs, 1 cup sugar. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth. Fold in last. Add some pineapple cut up fine. Put in the ice box and serve with ladyfingers or other dainty cake.

Chocolate Filling.

Melt two cups of milk with two squares of chocolate, cook with one cup granulated sugar until dissolved. Add one tablespoonful of corn starch to thicken and spread on the cake.

Oranges D'Abbott.

A delicious dessert and most palatable suggestion for collations.

Remove the peel break oranges into small sections and cut crosswise, add three to four dashes bitters to each portion, sweeten to suit. Improved by being on ice for a few hours or over night.

STEAMSHIPS STEAMSHIPS

The cuisine is famous on the S. S. Leviathan, sailing from New York to Europe May 26, June 16

Our cabin ships offer highest American standards at lower rates with a day or two longer at sea. President Harding sailing June 6, and President Roosevelt June 13, are the fastest cabin ships on the Atlantic ocean.

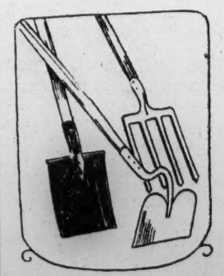

BEFORE you select any ship, ask your friends about the American way. They will certainly recommend a United States Liner for the remarkably fine cuisine, American standards of comfort, and the courteous, personal steward service maintained on board.

Sergt. Jasper Post.

Commander John J. Orlosky, of the Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, American Legion, is working on plans for a barbecue to be held during the month of July.

Vic's Sport Mart baseball team, sponsored by the post in the American Legion class of the Capital City League, made a great start with a thrilling 14-inning victory by the score of 5 to 4.

Commander Orlosky and Thomas J. Fralley represented the post at the reception given in honor of the President of Fidac, Nicola Sansanelli, of Italy, at the Cosmos Club on Wednesday evening.

A committee, headed by Comrade Blake, is making plans for a benefit performance in the near future at the National Theater.

The following resolution was adopted at a recent meeting of the post, requesting Congress to appropriate the sum of $2,500 to defray expenses of the national memorial service on May 30.

"Whereas, the 30th of May is National Memorial Day, dedicated to the memory of those who served in the military and naval forces of the United States, and

"Whereas, the memorial services held at Arlington Cemetery are regarded as the national memorial services of the Nation, and

"Whereas, the Grand Army of the Republic inaugurated Memorial Day and since the beginning, has supervised and directed said memorial service, and has borne the expenses connected therewith either directly or through its efforts by public subscription.

"Wherefore, be it resolved that the Congress of the United States is requested to appropriate the sum of $2,500 to be disbursed by the adjutant general, department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, to be used to bear the expenses of this national memorial service on May 30, 1928."

Jacob Jones Post.

The monthly meeting of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, No. 8, will take place at the Thomas Circle Club tomorrow at 8 p. m. This meeting will be in the form of a Mother's day meeting, and also will be department visitation night. All comrades are requested to attend.

Comrade Rose O'Hara has been appointed child welfare officer of the post.

The commander of the post, Mabel F. Staub, attended the reception given by the department commander, Col. J. Miller Kenyon, on Wednesday, May 9, for the commander of the Fidac.

At the monthly meeting of Jane A. Delano Post, No. 6, May 2, two new members were admitted, Mrs. Martha Johnson Christie and Miss Margaret Fix.

The members were enthusiastic over an Indian blanket sale campaign being sponsored by District of Columbia Department. The Delano Post decided to sponsor a baseball team of the Midget class to be known as the Jane A. Delano Post, No. 6. Arrangements were made for the memorial services Decoration Day at Arlington. An invitation was extended to the Delano Post members to attend services Mothers' day to be held at the Congressional Club, sponsored by the War Mothers.

Henry C. Spengler Unit.

Mrs. Robert Walbridge, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, paid an official visit to the officers of the various units in the District Monday evening at a meeting in the Jefferson room at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, president, and the following officers were present from Spengler Unit: Mrs. Porter H. Dale, Mrs. Ethel Nock, Mrs. R. S. Jones, Mrs. Ethel Fowler, Mrs. Hortense Fuller, Mrs. Roy E. Hughes, Mrs. Douglas A. White, Mrs. John Thomas Taylor and Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper. Mrs. Richard Seelye Jones acted as secretary.

Mrs. Walbridge gave an instructive address on auxiliary activities in the many departments she has visited this year, singling out Texas and the District of Columbia as representing perhaps the extremes in possibilities for get-together meetings; i. e., Texas units are so widely scattered in very remote localities and many of them have never attended a department meeting while in the District of Columbia the units are all in one small radius and with a brief notice can gather in a single evening for constructive conference.

The paid-up membership of Texas Department, as of April 30, is 4,591, and the auxiliary national convention to be held in San Antonio in October promises unusually attractive features. Some twenty members of Spengler unit will attend the annual State dinner and participate in convention activities.

Membership is the boost word for the District for the next three months, with five initiates to be admitted at Spengler Unit meeting May 23 at the Thomas Circle Club.

8 and 40.

The 8 and 40 is making rapid strides in organization this year. Plans have been made for Salon Departmentaux in Hawaii and Utah, and Texas to have three Petite Salons before annual marche in October; Arizona has about completed organization work, and Pennsylvania has organized five new salons this year; Montana is completing departmental organization, and the Departmental Chapeau in Vermont has appointed nine organizers to form Petite Salons; Iowa has voted to form a Departmental Salon.

District of Columbia Salon, No. 14, is keeping step with national policies and has a full calendar of activities for the next three months. The May Day Washington program ended with a May pole dance at Marine Barracks, under the direction of Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, with the participants children of World War veterans.

The salon voted $25 as a contribution to the national fund for child welfare at its meeting May 2. Mrs. Anita Carr White, L'Archiviste Nationale of Baltimore, was guest of honor and speaker of the evening. The following will act as ushers at Arlington on Memorial Day: Partners Benedict, Carley, Faulkner, Harper, Kaske, Key, Killeen, McIntosh, Murphy, Murray, Ober, Anita White and Witcomb.

Mrs. Leon Arnold, Mrs. Ethel Fowler and Mrs. Louise White will officially place a floral tribute on the grave of departed Partner Mrs. Emma P. Belt, and the partners at Arlington will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Mrs. Thomas E. Fawcett was hostess to the partners at her home last Friday night—making poppies was the occasion. The next social meeting will be May 16. Le Chapeau Departmental Dorothy B. Harper represented the salon at the reception given by Department Commander J. Miller Kenyon at the Cosmos Club Wednesday evening in honor of the president of Fidac, Nicola Sansanelli, of Italy.

Snyder-Farmer Post.

At a joint meeting of the Snyder-Farmer Post, No. 3, American Legion, and its auxiliary on May 9, Miss Betty Wright, of Tappahannock, Va., secretary of the National Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing, spoke on her work in the teaching of men deafened in their service during the World War to read lips.

Mrs. Norman Nock, gold star mother of Washington, spoke on her tours of the battlefields and American cemeteries in France.

Mrs. C. O'Neill, national custodian of records of the American War Mothers, and Mrs. Mary T. Shanahan, department president American War Mothers, Washington, D. C., spoke on the work of their organizations.

Short talks were given by Commander Johnson and Past Commanders Aiello, Heiser and Butler.

The auxiliary will hold a benefit card party Wednesday, May 23, at 8:30 p. m., at legion headquarters, on Maryland avenue, Hyattsville. The next meeting will be held Wednesday.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS.

Harry A. Nolan, commander of the Admiral George Dewey Naval Camp, District Spanish War Veterans, was born January 11, 1879, at Cumberland, Md., and came to Washington with his parents when he was 2 years old, making his home in this city since that time. He received his education in the parochial and public schools of Washington and learned the plumbing and steamfitting trade, which is his occupation at the present time.

He enlisted in the United States Navy February 8, 1900, and has a continuous naval service record of more than 20 years, serving on every type of ship of the Navy and holding six honorable discharges. He has had the rates of plumber and fitter and chief carpenter's mate, having been transferred to the latter position in the Fleet Naval Reserves November 5, 1920. He is also a member of the Fleet Reserve Association.

Commander Nolan joined the Admiral George Dewey Naval Camp eight years ago and has been active in the affairs of the veterans during that time, filling the offices of junior vice commander, senior vice commander and present commander of the camp, as well as serving on various important committees.

Past Department Commander Arthur H. League, chairman of the finance committee of the general Memorial Day committee, announces that headquarters for the committee has been opened at 720 Eleventh street northwest, the office being donated by the M. A. Leese Optical Co., where contributions will be received for the purpose of decorating 75,000 graves of United States soldiers, sailors and marines of all wars, including the graves of Confederate veterans, and for defraying the cost of holding exercises in the Arlington National Cemetery and other cemeteries in the District of Columbia. Chairman League requests the veterans to Checks should be made payable to E. D. Godfrey, quartermaster, Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., treasurer, 720 Eleventh street northwest.

Department President Margaret E. Burns, of the Ladies' Auxiliaries of the Spanish War Veterans, will be in charge of the headquarters and will be assisted in securing funds by a corps of women representing the various auxiliaries of veteran organizations. In addition to receiving funds at the headquarters the ladies will put in motion plans to secure the cooperation of the business men of the city in the drive. The committee is more in need of funds this year than for many years past and they are largely dependent on the citizens of Washington for contributions to carry on this worthy work.

The general Memorial Day committee is composed of the Grand Army of the Republic United Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, Army and Navy Union, Veterans of Indian Wars, Sons of Veterans and ladies' allied associations.

Col. Astor Camp.

The Col. John Jacob Astor Camp at its meeting Monday night in Stanley Hall, United States Soldiers' Home, indorsed Senior Vice Department Commander James G. Yaden for the office of department commander, and Junior Vice Department Commander Lorin C. Nelson for senior vice department commander, subject to the action of the department encampment to be held in June in this city.

The camp was honored by the presence of Margaret E. Burns, department president of the Ladies' Auxiliaries, who gave a talk on the need of funds for the finance committee for Memorial Day activities. The camp, by unanimous vote, appropriated $50 for the fund.

The following recruits were mustered in as active members: Herbert Tarbox, Company G, 43d U. S. Volunteer Infantry; Frank Hayden, Troop D, 6th U. S. Calvary; Michael J. Donlin, Company G, 11th U. S. Infantry; Bryan O'Hara, Company A, 22nd U. S. Infantry; Ben Kronstadt, Troop D, 6th U. S. Calvary; Paul J. Sholley, Company K, 1st U. S. Infantry; George L. Thompson, Company H, 9th U. S. Infantry; Alonzo O'Brien, Company C, 16th U. S. Infantry. Several other recruits were elected and will be mustered in at a later meeting.

Richard Harden Camp.

The Richard J. Harden Camp at its last meeting appropriated $40 for Memorial Day purposes, including $10 for a wreath for the grave of Bucky O'Neill, and Department Q. M. Rine was authorized to obtain wreaths for other camps making requests for similar purposes.

Department President Margaret E. Burns was admitted to the meeting and made a short address, stressing the need of money contributions for Memorial Day. In addition to the appropriation made by the camp, the individual members made substantial donations.

Department Commander Albert Michaud gave a short talk on the importance of a large attendance of Spanish War Veterans in the parade on Memorial Day and called attention to the banquet to be given in honor of Commander-in-Chief John J. Garrity at the Willard Hotel May 20. John A. Chisholm requested the comrades to meet at Glenwood Cemetery May 30 at 9 o'clock a. m. to assist in the decoration of veterans' graves. Other speakers were Past Department Commander William L. Mattocks, Clarence P. Brower and John Hamburg.

A communication from the department commander of Florida advised the camp that two of its members, F. L. George and W. T. Wiggins, were ill in Mount Alto Hospital in this city.

Senor Cayetano de Quesada, Cuban Consul, invited the members to attend the anniversary commemoration service on the death of Jose Marti, Cuban patriot, and a reception in honor of Senor Orestes Ferrara, Cuban Ambassador, and Commander-in-Chief John J. Garrity, of the United Spanish War Veterans, to be held in Memorial Continental Hall Saturday night. The members of all the camps of the District department are also invited. The speakers will be Ambassador Ferrara, Commander-in-Chief John J. Garrity, Past Commander-in-Chief Rice W. Means, president of the National Tribune, and Cuban Consul Cayetano de Quesada. Motion pictures of Cuba will be shown, and the United States Army Band will provide the music.

William O. Ohm, chairman of the relief committee, reported Louis E. Paxson ill in Walter Reed Hospital and Ernest Christopher returned to his home. He also reported James S. Hoper buried in Arlington Cemetery May 1 with military honors.

Col. Pettit Camp.

The Col. James S. Pettit Camp at its meeting Tuesday night mustered into membership the following recruits: William Ridgley Stone, jr., Company D, Fourth Regiment Immunes; Edward Jackson, U. S. S. Vermont, United States Navy; Frederick Meier, Troop D, First United States Cavalry (Rough Riders); Michael F. Kelly, Company L, Twenty-sixth United States Infantry; Charles F. Leubner, Company L, Thirty-second Regiment, Michigan Volunteer Infantry; George W. Dawson, United States Marine Corps; William F. Finn, jr., Company L, Third United States Engineers.

Senior Vice Commander Ryan, chairman of the relief committee, reported Otto F. Bendig in the Soldiers' Home Hospital, Milton L. G. Smith entered the Printing Pressmen's Home in Tennessee, and Frank J. Weber, Harry Thompson, William M. Burke and Willard H. Wheeler ill at their homes. Junior Vice Commander Strobel of the recruiting committee, reported that 40 recruits had been mustered in since the first of the year and that the mark of 200 to be reached by his administration would undoubtedly be passed.

Senior Vice Commander Ryan reported progress by the committee in charge of financing the trip of the Pettit Camp delegates to the national encampment to be held at Havana, Cuba, in October.

The camp appropriated $10 for the Memorial Day fund for decorating graves of veterans and holding exercises at the various cemeteries May 30, and the individual members contributed a substantial amount.

Many of the veterans expressed their intention of attending the banquet to Commander in Chief John J. Garrity at the Willard Hotel May 26.

Col. Astor Auxiliary.

Col. John Jacob Astor Auxiliary at its recent meeting elected delegates and alternates to the department convention to be held in June. The auxiliary will visit the Soldiers' Home Hospital next Sunday.

The auxiliary will give an entertainment under the direction of Minnie Lochboehler June 13 at Northeast Masonic Temple, Eighth and F streets northeast, for the benefit of the department.

Commander John Schaefer, of the Astor Camp, and Department Inspector M. Gertrude Keyes, of the auxiliary, made short addresses.

Department President Margaret E. Burns, with a corps of ladies from the auxiliaries, will receive contributions from the employes at the gates of the navy yard May 18.

Admiral Dewey Auxiliary.

The Admiral George Dewey Naval Auxiliary met at Northeast Masonic Temple Monday night, President Eliza-

AMMUNITION PICKED FOR FALL EXERCISES AT PROVING GROUND

New Type of Caliber .30 Tracers Selected for Anti-aircraft Show.

FRANKFORD ARSENAL PRODUCING CARTRIDGES

Design for Machine Gun Mount Device Has Been Prepared.

Caliber .30 ammunition of new types have been selected for the antiaircraft exercises to be conducted next autumn at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and a special lot of caliber .30 tracers will be made to conform to the requirements laid down by the Coast Artillery Corps. High-angle firing tests of various equipment to be used in the exercises will be conducted with caliber .30 and caliber .50 ammunition, starting tomorrow. Caliber .30 ammunition is being produced at Frankford Arsenal, Pa., at capacity, and various tests are being conducted by the using services of one lot furnished for that purpose.

Specimen Tracers Produced.

A specimen lot of caliber .50 tracers is being produced for the antiaircraft exercises. While ballistic tests still are under way to determine the type of ball ammunition to be used in those exercises, the results so far indicated that the new ammunition is superior to the model 1923 type; and, if the ballistic data are satisfactory, it will be issued for the exercises.

All caliber .30 and caliber .50 machine gun equipment is being overhauled at Springfield Armory, Mass., in preparation for the antiaircraft exercises. New switches are being tested out with the caliber .50 machine guns, and also longer charging handles and stronger driving springs.

Devices Are Prepared.

Tests conducted at Springfield Armory, Frankford Arsenal and Aberdeen Proving Ground indicate the desirability of beveling the mouth of the chamber of the caliber .50 barrels. It was found that barrels beveled in that manner reduce the number of malfunctions, particularly when fired at elevations, and that the beveling in no way removes any support from the chambered cartridge. This modification will be incorporated in a lot of 100 barrels now under manufacture.

A design of recoil cradle for the new antiaircraft machine gun tripod mount has been prepared and it is considered to be sufficiently promising to justify manufacture of a model. Deliveries have been completed on a contract for antiaircraft tripods suitable for mounting either the caliber .30 or caliber .50 machine gun.

NEW MARINE CORPS CHANGES ANNOUNCED

Lieut. Col. Fryer Is to Have Charge of Southern Recruiting Division.

Lieut. Col. Eli T. Fryer will be transferred from the field officers' course of instruction at Marine Barracks, Quantico, to duty at New Orleans, in charge of the Southern recruiting division.

Lieut. Col. James J. Meade, after completion of the course at Army War College, in this city, will proceed to duty in command of Marine Barrack, Naval Station, St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, as relief of Lieut. Col. Walter N. Hill, who will report at headquarters of the Marine Corps and be assigned to the next course at Army War College.

Maj. Roy S. Geiger, who will go from the field officers' course at Quantico to the next course at Army War College has been ordered to temporary duty at headquarters of the Marine Corps in charge of aviation during the absence of Maj. Edward H. Brainard, on sick leave.

Regulations for Rifle Matches Are Changed

200-Yard Shoot Removed From Camp Perry Program With 300-Meter Substituted—New Rule Adopted for Prize Distribution.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the National Rifle Association some important changes were made in the regulations to govern the association small-arm matches to be shot at Camp Perry, Ohio, September 3 to 8, inclusive. Some of the changes were made necessary because of the shortening of the match period to six days instead of a program of ten days as heretofore, and the others in the interest of uniformity. Sighting shots are eliminated from all individual and team matches, except the free rifle competitions. Some of the changes will result in advantage to civilian competitors.

The 200-yard "any rifle" match was removed from the Camp Perry program. This match first was placed in the program at the time the association was endeavoring to develop interest in the free-rifle type of shooting, and before the international free-rifle range was available at Camp Perry. It is planned to add several free-rifle 300-meter matches to the program this year, so that there is no good reason for continuing the 200-yard "any-rifle" match.

The course of fire in the President's match this year will call for ten shots at 200 yards, slow fire; ten at 600 yards and ten at 1,000 yards, the reduction from twenty to ten shots at 1,000 yards being necessary on account of the limited time available, and it also probably will benefit the civilian riflemen.

Marine Corps Cup.

In the Marine Corps Cup match, the course of fire will be reduced one-half to ten shots at 600 yards and ten at 1,000 yards. The A. E. F. Roumanian match course of fifteen shots will be reduced to ten shots at 200 yards and ten at 600 yards. The Camp Perry instructors' match will be combined in part with the President's match, in so far as the 200-yard stage of the latter match is to be considered, also as applying to the instructors' 200-yard stage. The pistol stage will be fired separately.

This year the individual civilian club match will be an aggregate competition, the scores made in the N. R. A. rapid-fire championship at 200 and 300 yards and in the President's match at 200, 600 and 1,000 yards constituting the course of fire to be considered in award of medals and cash.

The conditions of the united service match have been changed so that it will resemble the mythical All-American crew or football squad. The scores made in the N. R. A. rapid-fire championship and in the President's match will be considered in the selection of the five united service teams, the high 20 from the Army, high 20 from the Navy, high 20 from the Marine Corps, high 20 from the National Guard and high 20 civilians automatically being considered as members of their respective united service teams. The special united service team medal will be awarded to each of these teams of 20 men, and the united service trophy to the team that in those conditions has the highest aggregate score.

New Prize Rule.

A new rule for distribution of cash prizes at the Camp Perry matches has been adopted. The winner will receive a gold medal, the second high a silver medal, and the next eight men bronze medals. An effort will be made to obtain sufficient added money to provide not more than $100 in any one match in addition to the regular cash distribution. This added money will be divided 30 per cent to the winner, 30 per cent to the second high man and 20 per cent to the third.

These awards of medals and added money will be made entirely on the basis of scores, and regardless of whether the competitor is a regular, national guardsman or civilian. For the distribution of the regular N. R. A. cash prizes, however, competitors will be divided into three classes—regular service, National Guard and civilian—the R. O. T. C. and C. M. T. C. students being considered as civilians. The cash prizes will be distributed on the basis of the amount of entry fees paid into the match by the particular class to which a competitor belongs.

Col. W. A. Tewes, coach of last year's winning Dewar team, has been named captain of the 1928 Dewar team.

U. S. ACCEPTS AIR CORPS TRAINING SITE IN TEXAS

School for Pilots and Field Are to Occupy 2,400-Acre Tract.

FUNDS MADE AVAILABLE

The future training school for Army aviators will be located on a tract of about 2,400 acres of land situated about fifteen miles northeast of the center of San Antonio, Tex., and ultimately all of the heavier-than-air flying training schools of the Air Corps will be located at that place. After careful study, the War Department decided to accept the land, and as soon as the necessary legal steps can be completed, the title will pass to the United States, and the necessary funds appropriated, it is the intention to commence improvement of the site.

A sum of $5,673,975 now is available with which to start construction work on the new training center. This amount, supplemented by an item of $1,970,950 for barracks and quarters in a bill pending before Congress, and another item of $946,500 included in the 1930 fiscal year authorization bill for Air Corps technical construction, will make available $8,591,425 with which to proceed with the project.

Plans formulated in the office of the chief of the Air Corps contemplate the construction, during the 1929 fiscal year of a station for the first unit to house the primary flying school now operating at March Field, Calif. During the following fiscal year, construction will be started to take care of the primary flying school now at Brooks Field, Tex., and either in the 1931 or 1932 fiscal year the advanced flying school now at Kelly Field, Tex.

SUBSTITUTE FOR ARMY SERVICE HAT IS SOUGHT

Wool Being Tested in Effort to Replace the Rabbit-Hair Product.

THREE TYPES SUBMITTED

Tests are continuing under the auspices of the Infantry board at Fort Benning, Ga., of service hats with a view of finding a satisfactory headpiece that will replace the present service hat made of Australian rabbit hair. About a year ago several types of experimental hats made of wool were furnished for inspection, but only two of them were deemed sufficiently satisfactory to warrant test.

These two types differ slightly, one having a 1-inch ribbon hatband and a ribbon piping around its brim, and the other a 2-inch wool band without piping on the brim. Both were made of olive-drab wool cloth with parallel stitching. A six months' service test was given these hats by a company of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, but considerable difficulty was experienced in having the men wear them on account of their inferior appearance as compared with the service hat.

It is the desire of the War Department to find a suitable nonstrategic material, which in time of emergency could be procured in this country, and which at the same time would meet the hard usage of the service, and it is for the first reason that it is desired to find a material that will be equal to the Australian rabbit-hair hat. Recently a hat made of domestic material was sent to Fort Benning, and it is expected that about 50 more of the same material will be sent to various organizations of the several branches in the field for a service test. From all appearances, it looks like the regular service hat, but it remains to be ascertained how it will stand up in inclement weather.

MAJ. STIFF NAMED ON LIST OF OFFICERS PROMOTED IN ARMY

Three Vacancies Remain in Lieutenant-Colonel Grade; Lattin Is Advanced.

GRUM, OF ORDNANCE, IS ANNOUNCED CAPTAIN

Tormy, of Field Artillery, Will Be First Lieutenant; 225 Vacancies Remain.

During the past week, no promotions were made in the Army to the grade of colonel, but there are two vacancies in that grade, to which Lieut. Cols. Lorenzo D. Gasser, infantry, and Jennings B. Wilson, adjutant general's department, are entitled. Lieut. Col. Brady G. Ruttencutter, infantry, who was on the list between Lieuts. Cols Gasser and Wilson, has been placed on the retired list. When the two vacancies are filled, Lieut. Col. William O. Smith, Quartermaster Corps, will be left as senior in his grade.

Maj. Joseph W. Still, Infantry, was promoted to lieutenant colonel; there are three vacancies in the latter grade to which Majs. Robert M. Danford, Field Artillery, James K. Crain, Ordnance Department, and Carr W. Waller, Coast Artillery, are entitled; and, when they are promoted, Maj. Richard J. Herman, Infantry, will remain as senior in his grade.

Four Majority Vacancies.

Capt. Jay D. B. Lattin, Signal Corps, was promoted to major, in which grade there remain four vacancies, to which Capts. James D. MacMullen, Coast Artillery, R. Townsend Heard, Field Artillery, and Charles W. Bundy and Charles D. Y. Ostrom, Coast Artillery, are entitled. When these vacancies are filled, Capt. Turner M. Chambliss, Infantry, will be senior in his grade.

First Lieut. Allen F. Grum, Ordnance Department, has been promoted to captain, with four vacancies in the grade to be filled, to which First Lieuts. Bernard C. Dailey, Coast Artillery, Eduardo Andino, Infantry, Robert E. DeMerrit, Coast Artillery, and James F. Powell, Air Corps, are entitled. When they are promoted, First Lieut. William D. Hohenthal, Coast Artillery, will be left as senior in his grade.

From First Lieutenant.

Second Lieut. Bernard A. Tormey, Field Artillery, has been promoted to the grade of first lieutenant; four vacancies remain in the latter grade, to which Second Lieuts. Joseph I. Greene and Abner J. McGehee, jr., Infantry, and Valentine R. Smith and George W. Hartnell, Field Artillery, are entitled; and, when they are promoted, Second Lieut. Joseph A. Cella, Field Artillery, will be left as senior in his grade.

There now are 225 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the Army

ARMY AND NAVY UNION.

A new uniform membership card to be used by all of the departments and garrisons in the Army and Navy Union made its appearance a few days ago, in conformity with a resolution adopted at the national convention held in this city last September.

The card is divided into four parts, the section to be given to a member when his dues are paid, containing the preamble of the constitution on the reverse side. Another section is for the files of the garrison to which the member is attached, one for the national adjutant and the remaining section for the official magazine.

Maj. W. L. Peak, national commander, invites the attention of the members of the organization to the fact that an era of great expansion growth, in fact the greatest in its history, is now at hand. The reason for this optimistic outlook, he says, is that the 39 years background of the Army and Navy Union makes it a fertile soil for planting the seed of the greatest veteran society in the country.

Its perpetuity of service, potential strength of 7,000,000 members and the numerous class or group veteran organizations that have been constantly on the increase since shortly after the Spanish-American War, are a few of the paramount reasons for a healthy outlook for the organization.

The great need of the veterans today, says Maj. Peak, is the need of a united organization under one banner. This can be accomplished by membership in the Army and Navy Union which has the distinction of being the only organization in existence whose ranks are open to all who have served their country in time of war, or in time of peace, regardless of the circumstances.

National Commander Peak expresses the thought that a grand rally of the various veteran organizations and individual eligibles to the ranks would bring together one of the strongest influential veteran bodies in the history of veteran organizations. This would provide ample preparedness against an attack by a foreign power or against any uprising within this country against the government.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS.

George W. Phillips, past commander of the Department of the District of Columbia, was indorsed to fill the vacancy on the national executive committee of the Disabled American Veterans at a meeting of the Ace Chapter in the board room of the District Building last week.

Due to the pressure of professional duties, John Maher, of this city, was compelled to resign from the committee, as he will be unable to attend the eighth national convention at Denver the last week of next month. The vacancy is for the Fourth District, which is comprised of Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and the District of Columbia, and the Ace Chapter has asked that the other four chapters in Washington follow the indorsement in order that Phillips may commence to function without delay.

The Ace Chapter also voted to leave it to the discretion of the chapter's delegation to the State convention next month as to whether there should be a merger of all units here into one Washington chapter. Capt. Fred Kochli, State commander, who attended the meeting, explained that all four chapters here—Ace, Potomac, Naval and Rasmussen—are in good condition so far as membership is concerned, but he felt that the time has now come when Washington should follow Minneapolis, San Francisco and other large cities by having only one chapter that will draw from the whole city.

The D. A. V. delegation from here to the Denver national convention will leave here on the afternoon of June 19, and at Chicago will join a national special that will carry the representatives from Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa, Michigan and other States in that section.

Immediately after the State convention each of the chapters here will elect their delegates to the national gathering and, while the whole delegation is expected to travel westward as one party, several of the delegates intend to make side trips before returning to Washington.

Plans for the visit of the transatlantic fliers to Cleverland on Thursday as guests of the Cleveland Chapter of the D. A. V., were completed earlier in the week on a visit here by Stanton Hahn, of Columbus, commander of the Department of Ohio of the D. A. V. The Cleveland stop was the only change in the original schedule of the German-Irish fliers which takes them into seven cities.

In addition to checking on the plans for the Cleveland visit, Commander Hahn conferred with officials here on several problems facing the disabled men of Ohio.

The Disabled American Veterans' staff here is now concentrating upon an endeavor in obtaining favorable congressional action on several bills of vital importance to the disabled throughout the country.

The House has already passed the Johnson bill containing several proposed amendments to the act under which the Veterans' Bureau operates; the Rogers bill carrying $15,000,000 for hospital building and the Green bill to change three sections of the adjusted compensation measure. These bills are now before Senator David Reed, of Pennsylvania, and the D. A. V. is hoping for final vote by the Senate within the next ten days.

The Hawes-Reece bill to extend the time for the awards of decorations that are based upon citation during hostilities, and the Watson-Vestal bill for extending patent rights of veterans are among the other bills that are receiving the attention of the D. A. V. in the hope that they may be enacted before adjournment about the first of June.

While the District of Columbia Department of the D. A. V. has set a high mark this year in the matter of recruiting new members, it has been decided to concentrate during the next two weeks in getting older members to renew cards in order that the voting strength of the outfit here may be strengthened before the national convention. Names of old members have been given active members with orders to get in all reports before May 30, when the books at national headquarters at Cincinnati are closed.

In order that the names of every man who died during the World War—whether on the firing line or in a camp or hospital in this country—may be permanently available in official form, Mrs. Rogers, member of Congress, last week introduced a bill, at the request of the D. A. V., authorizing the War and Navy departments to compile all these names and publish them in one volume giving the military rank, organization, address, place of death and nearest relative of each of the deceased soldiers and sailors.

While it is felt that it is too late to get action on this measure at this session of Congress, the D. A. V. has served notice that it intends to continue the campaign until this book is finally published.

WAR VETERANS CLUB.

The American War Veterans Club will participate in the forthcoming card party, dinner and dance given by the Connecticut State Society at the Hotel Colonial on Saturday evening. Dr. Charles E. Morganston, member of the board of governors of the club, was recently elected president of the Connecticut State Society. Upon the elevation of Dr. Morganston to the presidency of the Connecticut State Society, the board of governors of the American War Veterans Club, on behalf of the members, presented Dr. and Mrs. Morganston with a large basket of flowers.

The annual motor caravan of the American War Veterans Club to Orkney Springs and the Shenandoah Caverns will be held June 29, 30 and July 1. Reservations for this outing to which veterans and their families are cordially invited are now being received at the club's headquarters in the Metropolitan Bank Building.

Many prominent persons in official life will attend this function. The honored guests of the club will be wounded war veterans from the various Government hospitals. They will be in charge of Mrs. M. D. Shackleford, of the Red Cross, at Walter Reed General Hospital. The club plans to send the caravan to Orkney Springs in two sections in order to assist the traffic regulations as much as possible.

Over 100 motor cars will be in line this year, piloted by Metropolitan and State police of Virginia. Gov. Harry Flood Byrd of Virginia and his staff have been invited to attend. The membership of the club is rapidly approaching its set quota of 200. When reached, a waiting list will be inaugurated. A meeting of the board of governors will be held at the residence of Gov. Ralph A. Cusick next Thursday evening to pass upon the many applications received for membership and other matters of interest to the club.

The club plans to hold several outings during the summer months. Honorary membership to the club conferred upon Col. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, was accepted by both of these world-famous figures in national life. Among the members of the War Veterans Club who will attend the Connecticut State Society's initial function are Representative and Mrs. Morgan G. Sanders, Representative and Mrs. J. J. McSwain, Representative and Mrs. A. H. Gasque, Representative and Mrs. J. J. Manlove, Hon. and Mrs. Isaac Gans, Judge and Mrs. Robert E. Mattingly, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Pollock, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Trible, Miss Dora Palkin, Miss Margaret Sitgreaves, Lieut. and Mrs. Charles Reimer, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Woolberg, Lieut. and Mrs. W. T. Hopkins, Capt. I. J. Menlaheim, Capt. D. W. McDermott, Dr. I. P. Constantinople, Maj. and Mrs. Charles W. Freeman, Capt. and Mrs. Jefferson L. Ford, Maj. and Mrs. Roy E. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Humphreys, Lieut. and Mrs. Curtis W. Handley, Col. and Mrs. Dunlop P. Penhallow, Dr. and Mrs. Albert H. Parham, Maj. and Mrs. Wallace Streater, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Welch, Mr. Rush S. Young, Miss Margaret Merchant, Miss Betty Hart, Mr. Harry Pollock, Mr. Georgas St. Jean, Miss Fanille Davies, Miss Elizabeth Gardner Coombs, Lieut. and Mrs. Howard S. Fisk, Capt. and Mrs. Harvey L. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Beckitt, Maj. and Mrs. W. E. Palmer, Col. and Mrs. Fred B. Ryons, Lieut. and Mrs. I. F. Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Albus, Lieut. and Mrs. Walter F. Kilbourne, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Cusick, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Haberkorn, Miss Adelaide Oser and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Allen Spiller.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS.

The Daughters of Union Veterans of Civil War, Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, No. 1, met in regular session May 7, in G. A. R. Hall, 1412 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, with the president, Mrs. Olive C. Johnson, in the chair.

Roll call by Secretary Anna Hage showed absentees in offices which were filled as follows: Senior vice president, L. Bassett; junior vice president, Sister Clements; patriotic instructor, Cora Manoly; guard, Margaret Brodt; chaplain, Elizabeth Quackenbush; council member No. 2, Pauline Commerford; color bearers Nos. 2 and 3, Marion Pierson and Grace Newlen.

Among G. A. R. Veterans present were Col. O. H. Oldroyd, Commander W. F. Bobb, Adjt. Gen. H. Johnson, quartermaster; E. S. Godfrey, G. H. Kunsman and W. N. Fuller from Lincoln Camp, Sons of Veterans.

All members are urged to help Lincoln Camp, Sons of Union Veterans of Civil War, in decoration of graves of soldiers at Mount Olivet Cemetery, May 27 at 1 p. m.

Theodore F. Brown, chaplain of Phil Sheridan's Post, No. 6, G. A. R., is ill in Walter Reed Hospital.

Cavaliers of the Air

By JOHN J. DALY

Visit of German-Irish Fliers Recalls Feats of Gallant Charioteers Who Have Braved Death and Disaster in the Cause of Aeronautics.

THIS time last year a boy came riding out of the West, Paris bound. Unknown, practically unheralded, he took his place beside celebrities in aviation who were then contemplating a nonstop flight from America to Europe. On May 20, 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh pointed the nose of the Spirit of St. Louis toward gay Paree. The following day, May 21, after being 33½ hours in the air, he landed on the flying field of Le Bourget.

An humble mail pilot, born to the air, Lindbergh wended his way eastward 3,600 miles across the trackless Atlantic. The world went crazy. The impossible had been accomplished, and by a boy. From that day to this, aviation, a dream of the ages, has taken on new wings. Flying stands at last as man's greatest achievement.

In the wake of the Lindbergh flight, the imagination of the world awakened as it never had before. Dare-devils of the air started to equal or surpass Lindbergh's performance. For a time, it was a poor day in the newspapers without a front page story chronicling somebody's attempt to span the Atlantic or the Pacific. There were many failures, yet here within the past week Washington welcomed three dauntless fliers who made the westward passage against Lindbergh's trail. They were Baron Gunther von Huenefeld, Capt. Herman Koehl and Maj. James C. Fitzmaurice. Their epic east-west transatlantic flight from Dublin, Ireland, to Greenly Island, in the Strait of Belle Isle, stands as the supreme aerial effort of 1928. In the plane Bremen, the three companions landed on Friday, April 13, breaking the old hoodoo usually connected with the day and the number.

While the nation fetes the foreign triumvirate, up in Spitzbergen, on a far-off point of the world, Gen. Umberto Nobile, with the dirigible Italia, plans several flights to be made during the next two months in exploration of parts of the Arctic regions hitherto unvisited by man. So the arms of aviation stretch to embrace the universe. The Italia had previously been flown from Milan, Italy, to Stolp, to Vadsoe, Norway, then on to the Spitzenberg Archipelago, where a hangar awaited on the northwest shore of West Spitzbergen.

It was this same Gen. Umberto Nobile who, with Lincoln Ellsworth, accompanied Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, over the North Pole in the dirigible the Norge, the day following the memorable flight of Commander Richard E. Byrd, to that end of the world. The Byrd expedition, which encircled the North Pole for the first time on May 9, 1926, it will be remembered, had along as pilot the late Floyd Bennett, who lost his life recently in a gallant act.

* * * *

SIXTEEN years ago, a flight from New York to Washington made by Harry Attwood, the celebrated Boston aviator, commanded front page attention. Today, hops from Bolling Field to the southermost tips of America are made every day by Army aviators and nothing is said of it. Now, it takes a terrifically outstanding event to command respectful attention. Less than one year ago—from June 29 to July 1, 1927—Commander Richard E. Byrd, in the aeroplane America, established the record four-passenger flight by negotiating the distance from Roosevelt Field to Ver-sur-Mer, near Paris, an air line distance of 3,477 miles. The flight was made in 46 hours and 6 minutes.

So, aviation is on the up-and-up, as the boys of the flying corps say. Momentous events may be dated from the Lindbergh event to Paris. Two weeks after Lucky Lindy hopped off from Long Island, Clarence D. Chamberlin, pilot of the Columbia, with his backer and passenger, Charles A. Levine, flew —June 4-6—from Roosevelt Field to Eisleben, Germany, a record nonstop flight of 3,911 miles, in 42 hours and 31 minutes. Thus, May, June and July of 1927 witnessed three epoch-making journeys by air across the Atlantic—the Lindbergh flight to Paris, the Byrd hop to Ver-Sur-Mer and the Chamberlin jump to Germany.

June boasts another of these transoceanic flights, but in the other direction. Lieut. Albert F. Hegenberger on June 28-29, 1927, navigated the longest overwater flight till then attempted. With Lieut. Lester J. Maitland as pilot, he flew from Oakland, Calif., to Honolulu, a distance of 2,407 miles, in 25 hours and 50 minutes. In this same month an Italian aviator, who had started out in February, 1927, completed his record-breaking flight of approximately 30,000 miles over four continents and two oceans. This was Commander Francesco de Pinedo, of the Royal Italian Air Force.

In August of the same year—1927—Art Goebel won the Dole race from Oakland, Calif., to Honolulu. With W. V. Davis as navigator, Goebel piloted the Woolaroc over that long expanse of sea in 26 hours and 18 minutes.

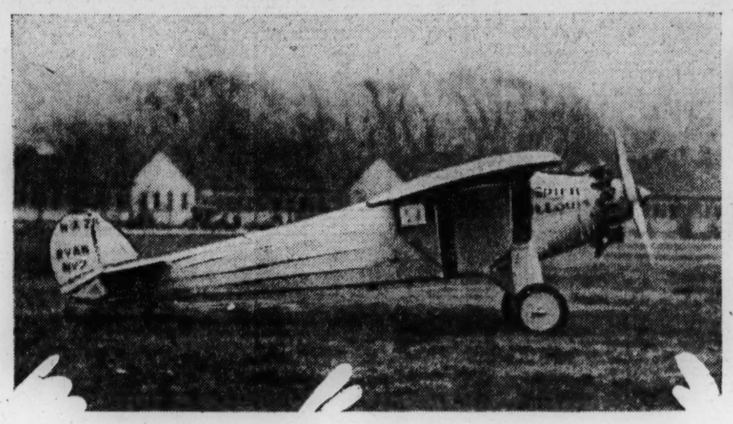

Eleven days after the Goebel flight, which started on August 16, William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee, American round-the-world fliers, left Grace Harbor, Newfoundland, in the Pride of Detroit and completed a transatlantic flight by landing the next day, August, 28, 1927, near London. They had flown 2,400 miles in 23 hours and 9 minutes, and had brought England into the continental nations visited by American birdmen. Later, it will be remembered, they were forced to abandon their contemplated circling of the globe at Tokyo. Typhoons forced them to retire after covering 12,295 miles in 145½ flying hours. Their stupendous enterprise had taken a total of 18 days in accomplishment. They might have attempted a jump back over the Pacific had not public opinion at the time asserted itself. There had been many lives lost during their period in unsuccessful and sometimes futile attempts to negotiate great distances. America wanted no more tragedies.

1927, then, acting under the impetus given by Lindbergh, witnessed aviation's greatest strides. It was on October 10 of that year that Dieudonne Costes and Joseph Lebrix, French aces, began a great adventure which ended April 14 of this year. They were really the first fliers to cross the Atlantic Ocean westward in a single hop. They went from Senegal to Brazil, and became heroes of a 75,000-kilometer round-the-world flight.

* * * *

ANOTHER great achievement which started in 1927, November 17, was the new African trail blazed by the famous long-distance aviator of Great Britain, Sir Alan Cobham, on his 20,000-mile tour.

It was back in 1919 that transatlantic flying first occupied the serious attention of experienced flyers. Though many lost their lives in the turbulent waters of the Atlantic, Capt. John Alcock and Lieut. Arthur Brown made the first nonstop flight across the Atlantic, going from St. Johns, Newfoundland, to Clifton, Ireland, in 16 hours and 12 minutes. Although this flight has been almost forgotten in the hurly burly of present day events, what with the great dashes back and forth across the Atlantic, the Alcock-Brown venture will stand in the minds of aviators as the most thrilling of all rides in an aeroplane. In those days, aviation was just coming out of the dark, so to speak. Only seven years before that time, in 1912, the world's record long-distance flight was less than 300 miles. The altitude records made around 1911 and 1912—some of them out at College Park, Md., by army aviators—had never approached distances of more than 2,000 feet skyward. So when John Alcock and Arthur Brown manned their little bark for the stupendous undertaking of a transatlantic nonstop flight, went out in what would now be considered a frail craft and on a veritable foolhardy expedition, newspaper accounts of that thrilling journey through the air read like the highest form of imaginative fiction. Alcock's description of his experiences over the raging waters were hair-raising. One of the outstanding features of the trip was this: "Because of improper heating facilities, the pilot at the wheel had his ear drums frozen. Since man's sense of balance, according to medical theory, rests in the inner ear, the pilot of this ship, losing his sense of balance, flew upside down. Once, one of the aviators lost consciousness from the cold and wind. There was one hour in the journey when the machine was completely out of control, flying without guidance. Only luck, or good fortune, or Providence, or whatever it was that guided John Alcock and Arthur Brown, ever got them over; so they confessed. At any rate, their names stand high in the list of men who achieved aerial fame.

America's Pride. The Spirit of St. Louis and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh (above), first to fly from New York to Paris. Below—Commander Byrd and the late Floyd Bennett, who flew over the North Pole and later to the French coast.

In that same year, but in a different sort of aerial craft, Commander A. C. Reed, of the United States Navy, negotiated the really first transatlantic flight. He took the seaplane NC-4 across the Atlantic, going from the American coast to Plymouth, England, in 72 hours. This flight, with Commander Reed in charge, was made in May, 1919.

While the ocean has always been a grand objective for birdmen, this grand old continent whereon sits the United States of America is no mean distance to traverse—in a nonstop flight. Lieut. John A. Macready, flying from New York to San Diego, Calif., in May, 1923, made the first nonstop airplane flight across the United States.

* * * *

THIS possibility established, two months later Lieut. Russel Maugham started out to keep up with daylight all the way across the country. He completed his celebrated dawn-to-dusk flight on July 11, 1923. Having seen the sun rise in New York he was in San Francisco to see it set.

In between times, always, the dirigibles took out after the heavier-than-air craft. One of the great flights for the gas-filled envelops was that made by Dr. Hugo Eckener, designer of the dirigible Los Angeles (ZR3), when he piloted this craft from Friedrichshafen to America in October, 1924.

The present year was noted for women entering in serious competition with men. It was Ruth Elder who, on October 11, 1927, made the spectacular flight for Paris, and though she was forced down to the ocean, some 36 hours after the take-off, she gets credit for the longest sustained flight ever accomplished by an aviatrix. Her companion of the air on this voyage was George Haldemann, an aviator who, with Eddie Stinson, set the new air endurance record of 53 hours 36 minutes and 41 seconds. That record, accomplished March 30, 1928, still offers a target for the ambitious.

In fact, they are still "shooting at it"—and hardly a week but some one goes aloft to take down the honors hung up by Haldemann and Stinson; at least, they try.

Not long ago, within two weeks or so, Royal Thomas, a former army officer, remained aloft more than 34 hours in an attempt to break the world's endurance flight

The "Good Sport" Girl Is Sure to Lose

An Interview with Judge CHARLES A. OBERWAGER

Petting and Drinking Womanhood No Longer Stirs Finest Instincts in Men, Charges This New York Jurist—Girls Who Insist Upon Sowing Their Wild Oats Will Destroy Humanity Unless They Revert to Old Standards of Virtue and Charm

By LILLIAN G. GENN.

"THE modern girl, because of her immodesty in clothes, conversation and general behavior, is making the young men dizzy. She encourages them to make advances. She flaunts her sex appeal to arouse them from their lethargy, thinking she will be clever enough to extinguish the fire she has kindled. Her idea of a 'good time' is to indulge in drinking and petting parties.

"It used to be customary for the man to take the initiative in these things, but now it is the 'modern girl' who takes the lead. You will find, too, that it is she who chiefly patronizes the sex plays and reads the books which, parading under the guise of 'art,' are nothing but mere filth.

"The modern girl is not only unfitting herself for motherhood, but she is also undermining the morale of the boy so that he, too, is fitted neither for marriage nor for parenthood.

"We may close our eyes to it all—as so many do—and claim that our young girls fundamentally are the same as they always were. But down deep in our hearts we know that more young women are drinking today than ever before and that more of them are committing sex transgressions. Just how great a number we do not know, because of the dissemination of the knowledge which prevents them from being found out. However, if she was not fortunate enough to escape, is she penitent and ashamed? Not at all. Her one regret is that she was foolish enough to have enabled discovery.

"In short, the modern girl no longer seems to have the regard of former days for the most precious thing she possesses—virtue."

THIS is not the brief of a pessimist or a professional moralist who views the younger generation through jaundiced or resentful eyes. They are the opinions expressed by Judge Charles A. Oberwager, the eminent lawyer, who for many years has served as city magistrate of the City of New York. He has sat on the bench of every court, and his views are culled from actual cases he has handled. He has received the confidences and the confessions of thousands of persons, and in his position as judge he has been able to penetrate their very hearts and discern the reasons for their actions. Nor are the girls in these cases of the ignorant or wayward class. They are, for the most part, girls who have had every educational and social advantage.

Judge Oberwager has not become embittered or prejudiced because of the cases he has been handling. He recognizes the faults of youth and is anxious to help them by pointing out the evils and the vices which they are unknowingly encouraging. He is a friendly and genial man who possesses a genuine passion for speaking the truth. He is frank to the point of bluntness and does not stop to polish his meaning.

"There was a time," he said, "when a refined woman would have deemed it the greatest insult for a man to call on her who reeked of liquor. Now she, too, drinks, and she usually starts at an age when she is unable to control herself. And unless the boy brings a flask along when he takes her out, he is considered a slow number. The girl regards drinking as nothing more than its being the smart thing to do, not realizing the exciting effect it has on the boy. If she herself is not actually swept into the emotional maelstrom that she has created by her clothes and her free conduct, he goes elsewhere. I wish you could see the number of young boys that are brought to court when a policeman rounds up one of these places. Many of them commit crimes, ranging from petty ones to more serious offenses, in order to be able to get the necessary money for the liquor that they give their girl friends.

"Of course, you may say that the boys did all these things before the girls took to drinking, but never was there so marked an increase in the number of adolescents who commit these crimes as today. Neither was there so great a number of mere boys seeking the diversions that belong to maturity. You will find, if you will get to the bottom of it, as I have, that their instincts have been aroused by the modern girl's frank discussion of sex, her immodest clothes and her willingness to pet and drink. The girls do these things innocently. They do not stop to think of the grave consequences."

Judge Charles A. Oberwager, who believes that women dominate men and set the moral standards which men follow.

"But," it was interposed, "why put the whole blame on the girls? It may be a trite excuse, but nevertheless true, that boys are equally to blame."

"It is the girl who originally set the standard," replied the judge. "When young men knew that they could not become familiar with girls without losing their social standing, they restrained themselves. And if they did feel like exercising their manly prerogative of sowing their wild oats, they at least had by that time emerged from the adolescent stage and had had sufficient stamina ingrained in them to be able to resist, or not go too far. Boys, in those days, knew that a girl was modest and held some regard for virtue and they treated her accordingly. Certainly they were not encouraged to indulge in moral irregularities as they now are.

* * * *

"TODAY, more than ever, man must be fortified, because after being closely confined to his office and grubbing constantly for money, his jaded nerves need relaxation. Formerly the girl, in protecting herself, helped the man as well. The attitude of society and of the girl's parents did not permit him to take liberties. But now that society condones anything just so long as the girl is not caught, she sees no reason why she should restrain herself.

"Young girls have always experienced the same emotions that the young girls today do, but they did not let themselves be swayed recklessly by them. And in letting themselves go, they, of course, pull the men with them. Don't think that I am defending the man. He falls because he chooses to fall. But I do say that where a man may act like a roue with one woman you will find that he treats another woman with the respect and reverence he demands for his own mother or daughter."

When the judge was questioned as to whether he preferred the old-fashioned mystery that used to be attached to sex, he was emphatic in assuring the interviewer that he did.

"I can't see where the frank discussion of sex is getting our young people any further," he said, "or that they are turning out any better than those who knew nothing at all. They undoubtedly are not more virtuous for it. I think, in fact, that they have become too cynical and sophisticated and are lacking entirely in reserve."

* * * *

"BUT if the girl isn't a sport," it was ventured, "men will not look at her."

"That is because the girls have taught them to expect generosity. It is they who let down the barriers. They wanted to do the things men do. The trouble is that the girl does not realize that she is lowered in the man's eyes by her generosity. No one believes more than I do in the single standard, but it can never materialize unless the man changes his attitude. In reality he tells himself that he knows he is polygamous by nature, but that woman inherently should not be so. He knows that from time immemorial man has always been condoned for being swayed by the creative instinct and that the experiences that he can carelessly indulge in without harm are the ruin of woman.

"And this is true, because woman is fundamentally different from man. The sooner she awakens to this the better for her, or else she will continue to harm herself. Until the time when we can get men to assume their responsibility for their illegitimate children, when society will not condemn the woman who is caught, when men will be lax in their standards of the women they marry, then perhaps women will not be the sufferers of the single standard.

"Women, since their economic independence, see no reason why they can't sow their oats the same as the men. And so they blithely and carelessly have their good times—only, eventually, to fall into their own traps.

"They don't realize that the man, on the other hand, finding he can obtain the same privileges of marriage without its responsibilities, continues to defer marriage. He finds he can get along very well without marrying, and should he finally decide to take the step, he will take some unblemished young woman—not the one he or any other man has been having good times with. There, again, the young woman loses out with the single standard, for the man still clings to his ancient privilege of sowing his wild oats but of marrying the girl who has not made herself cheap. The girl, therefore, who has been the good sport in the long run loses—and loses heavily. They all find it out, though, when it is too late."

The judge paused a moment and then took up his discussion in another vein.

"Of course, youth has always been, and will continue to be, impetuous and exuberant, and it is a good thing for civilization that this is so. When these energies are directed the right way, it is these young people who, like Lindbergh, do splendid things. But when these energies are dissipated in fast and wanton living, they not only ruin themselves, but they weaken the moral fiber of the Nation."

A typical modern bacchanalian scene for which Judge Oberwager holds the modern girl largely responsible, because of her frankness in sex discussions, immodest clothes and willingness to pet and drink.

"Isn't the accelerated pace of living due to the many material changes?" the interviewer questioned.

"Yes; but I can not say that this is the reason our young boys and girls are going the limit. The parents are chiefly to blame for that. They encourage their children to have a good time. They permit their girls to do anything which will make them popular. They take pride in their sophistication. In fact, their actions are just the same as their children's, and then they suddenly become shocked and horrified when the children go a step further.

"When boys and girls see that their parents care only for money and material success, that they themselves break the prohibition and speeding laws, it is difficult to expect them to have higher ideals."

* * * *

IN SPITE of the fact that the modern young woman has no regard for the social and moral codes, Judge Oberwager is still hopeful of her—or least of her children.

"It is these very girls who are abusing their privileges, who are mistaking liberty for license, who will be effective in turning the tide. It will take more than a generation for that to happen, but the reaction is bound to come. Those children will be brought up as strictly and as virtuously as those of the Victorian age."

"Then you think," it was suggested, "that the women will be the ones who will be instrumental in making this change?"

"It is only the women who can do it," was his prompt reply. "Women have it in their power to make or undermine man. They have spurred men on to achievement. They have helped them to found empires. Women can not only influence the world for the better, but they can practically rule it. Today, more than ever before in the history of the world, women's possibilities are tremendous.

"However, should they continue to cater to the desires of the men they will destroy not only the men but themselves. They will destroy humanity. If any beneficial changes are to be brought about the women will have to make them. It is all up to them.

"You remember the old adage, 'A little child shall lead them?' In the social sense, it is 'the woman who shall lead them.' "

Even Greek mythology recognized woman's power over man. Hercules, strongest of the ancient heroes, was so dominated by his love, Omphale, that he discarded his manly club and became a spinner of wool. From painting by C. G. Gleyre.

Home-Work
by Edgar A. Guest

The plumber, when the whistle blows,
Puts down his tools and homeward goes;
The merchant closes up his shop
And lets the tasks of business drop,
The tailor puts his scissors by,
But no such sweet relief have I.

When I depart the busy town
'Tis not in peace to settle down,
For Crowell wires; "Your copy's due,
When do we get that stuff from you?"
And someone else demands a bit
Which I have promised to submit.

"Write it at home," they say to me,
"Get down to work right after tea."
But little do they know the task
Which they so very glibly ask.
They never hear my baby say:
"Why work at home when you can play?"

Plumbers at home may read or play,
Masons at ease may close the day,
Merchants may frolic, romp and tease
And hold their children on their knees;
When they're at home they're duty free,
But my job always follows me.

Work Progressing On International Bridge

A force of 2,000 men has been assembled for work on the International Bridge to be erected between Canada and the United States at Detroit, according to report. Pier foundations are now ready, it is said, and the first cable connection will be made across the Detroit River within 90 days.

When completed, the structure will be the longest suspension bridge in the world.

Fish Waste Is Basis of a New Industry

Out of the great quantities of fish waste and scrap, formerly discarded as useless, an industry is developing. Many countries now utilize this waste for manufacturing fish meal and fertilizer. Fish meal is used as food for hogs and cattle. The United States leads in its production, followed by Norway, Japan and Great Britain.

Canadian Research

On the ten-acre plot of the Dominion Experimental Farm in Ottawa, the government will erect the first unit of a national laboratory to be devoted to scientific and industrial research work and a central power plant. An appropriation of $750,000 has been made for the first year's work.

Dutch In Ontario

Twenty miles north of Port Arthur the township of Fowler has been reserved by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests for Dutch immigrants. About a dozen families have already settled there and the town will accommodate about a hundred more.

Differences in elevation as slight as six inches are recorded on an altimeter intended especially for surveyors, aviators and others when the use of more elaborate instruments is not practical.

Maine Fishers Like Meat Diet

Strangely enough, the New England Coast fishermen eat comparatively little fish, particularly since motor boats put them and their families in more intimate touch with the meat markets. When a small boat fisherman, of Casco Bay, for example, has sold his day's catch at Portland and is returning to his home on island or main, the chances are that he is bringing back a roast of beef, a leg of lamb or a ham.

In hard winters, when the fisherman's income is small, he and his family eat fish, lobsters, clams—any food he can get without cost other than his own labor. But in the summer, when fish are plentiful and the market is profitable, the fisher folk become meat eaters. Small Hampton boatmen load whole sides of beef into their craft, strips of bacon, boxes of pork sausages and frankfurters.

Cavaliers of the Air

By JOHN J. DALY

record, but he was forced to earth by a leaky gasoline tube. The leak, which ended the record attempt, allowed all fuel to escape from tanks of the plane. He was killed in a crash while preparing for another attempt at the Peterboro Airport last Wednesday.

So long as there are records there will be men to go after them. What seems impossible today may be an accomplished fact tomorrow. 'Twas always, thus, in the history of the world. Aviation, encompassing the universe, offers more for men in the way of adventure than almost any other form of enthusiasm. Of all the flights recorded, however, the one than stands foremost from point of durability and the overcoming of many handicaps is the air trip around the world made by Army fliers, led by Capt. Lowell H. Smith, in 1924. The fliers left the United States on April 6 of that year and came back September 28. It took them 175 days—or not quite half a year—to make the journey. Their actual flying time was 351 hours.

Flights are going on all the time—night and day; so that the man doesn't live who can keep up with them. Only outstanding endeavors are recorded even by the aeronautical societies whose sole business is to keep track of the records, and the records have to do, for the most part, with the striving after new records. For instance, not over much was heard of the flight of the Lockheed Vega plane that recently made a nonstop flight "over the roof of the world." Yet, that was a magnificent undertaking. On April 21, Capt. George H. Wilkins and Carl B. Eielson drove their plane, a mighty bird, from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen, in 21½ hours.

So it goes, daring deeds are being done and the world has little time to record them, save those mighty efforts that make the world stop, look and listen. It will be some time before the populace of the globe gets over the present east-west flight of the two Germans and the laughing Irishman—the flying Irishman, some call him. That was an epic. There will be others, of course, and greater flights in the days to come; but this stands now supreme.

* * * *

LOOKING back over the past, some of the greatest strides in aviation were made right here in Washington—or in places nearby. By this time, a younger generation growing up absorbed in affairs of the moment knows little or nothing of the Wright brothers, and Curtis, and Samuel Pierpont Langley, and a host of others who studied air currents and craft with the ultimate hope of seeing man on a winging, instead of a footing, with the birds.

Down in Kitty Hawk, N. C., the pioneer American airmen were remembered not long ago. There, on a sand reef off the Carolina coast, a stone tablet, marking an event of great importance in the world of aviation, was unveiled in the early part of this month. Its inscription reads:

"On this spot, September 17, 1900, Wilbur Wright began the assembly of the Wright brothers' first experimetal glider which led to man's conquest of the air."

Some three years later, or thereabout, the first flown motor driven airplane was piloted above those same sand dunes by Orville Wright.

In contrast to the endurance flights of today, the journeyings back and forth across the Atlantic in airplanes, that first flight at Kitty Hawk was not much to speak of, in length of time. It lasted, so the records tell us, exactly 12 seconds. The distance traversed was all of 120 feet. The flight ended, too, in a nose dive in the sand dunes. Oh, well, they didn't call them nose dives in those days, because aviation terms had not come into being. It was what some term a swoop in the sand.

Up to 1900 man had spent quite some centuries in an effort to leave the bosom of Mother Earth. His flying togs were not cut to right measure, seemingly, for until the Wrights had a hand at it no heavier-than-air machine was ever successful. Even that day and generation laughed at the idea of anyone getting in a machine and flying away, so that newspapermen who "covered" those early flights of the Wright brothers were looked upon as fiction writers. Even when the Wrights had gone as far as 10 miles in their contraption the world refused to believe stories emanating from Kitty Hawk. The whole venture was looked upon in some quarters as a figment of the imagination.

Only a week or so before the Wright brothers had made their flight, the Langley Buzzard had failed here on the Potomac. The newspapers made such jibes and sport of this spectacular fiasco that the world was not ready to believe truth when truth came to it.

After a long siege of experiments at Dayton, the Wrights finally got their message across—some time in May, 1908—that flying was an actuality.

From 1908 to 1928 is only twenty years—a small span as centuries go. In this short stretch of time most of the great accomplishments in aviation have taken place. Development of the airplane has gone ahead faster than almost any other invention of man, with the possible exception of radio—and it must be remembered that radio had a background, so to speak, in the telephone and wireless. Aviation had nothing to go on with the exception of kite flying and ballooning, and what was learned from the free balloon offered little or nothing to the men who hoped for perfection of a heavier-than-air machine.

* * * *

IT was only as long ago as 1912 and 1913 that the good people of the United States paid admission fees to aviation fields for the purpose of seeing men fly. It sounds strange, but it's a fact. Anyone, of course, knows that all anybody has to do is stand outside an aviation field and see the machine go up—and stay up; but in those days natural curiosity was such that aviators went around the country, with their managers, hiring fields, and charging admission fees to see flights. Half the time, of course, the airplanes—they were then "aeroplanes"—had great difficulty in rising from the ground and many a person who paid admission to see a flight had a morbid idea somewhere in his heart that, before the afternoon wore on, he might be an eyewitness to a death scene.

Whereas men once thought them foolish, the nations of the world, by their representative governments, now bow down to the aviators.

Almost every country on earth has, at one time or another, decorated an aviator. France, England, Germany and the United States have lavished honors upon the birdmen. Only last week, at Le Bourget Field, where Lindbergh made his landing after an air passage from the United States, was unveiled a great stone statue, "Conquest of the Air," by the late Georges Mitchel, French sculptor. This statue will stand as a perpetual memorial to commemorate the attempt of Nungesser and Coli to fly to the United States—and the arrival of Lindbergh in Paris. The memorial, accepted by the French Minister of War, is the gift of an American, Mr. Robert Jackson, of Concord, N. H. Long a devotee of aviation, it was this same Robert Jackson who backed the ill-fated Fonck attempt to fly from New York to Paris.

While the monument was being unveiled in France, at the Field of Le Bourget, over here in America a grateful nation had not forgotten one of its valiant fliers—Floyd Bennett. In honor of the flier who lost his life carrying supplies to the Bremen fliers, when that triumvirate was stranded up on the icy stretches of Greenly Island, a flashing red aerial beacon at Hempstead, Long Island, has been christened the Floyd Bennet Memorial Beacon. The light flashes from the Hempstead water tower, at a point 175 feet above sea level. It was ordered at the request of the United States Government. As Floyd Bennett many times had flown over the village of Hempstead, and over the very site whereon this light in his memory will shine as a beacon for the ships on the sea and in the air, it is a fitting monument to the aviator-explorer.

A busy old world it is, but it still finds time to appreciate valiant deeds valiantly done—and aviators are the men who do them. Their deeds fire the imagination, make most other efforts seem tame and palsied. One of the reasons, therefore, why aviators are heroes in the eyes of the American boy who now has come to a fine appreciation of flying, as one of the great achievements of the age in which he lives.

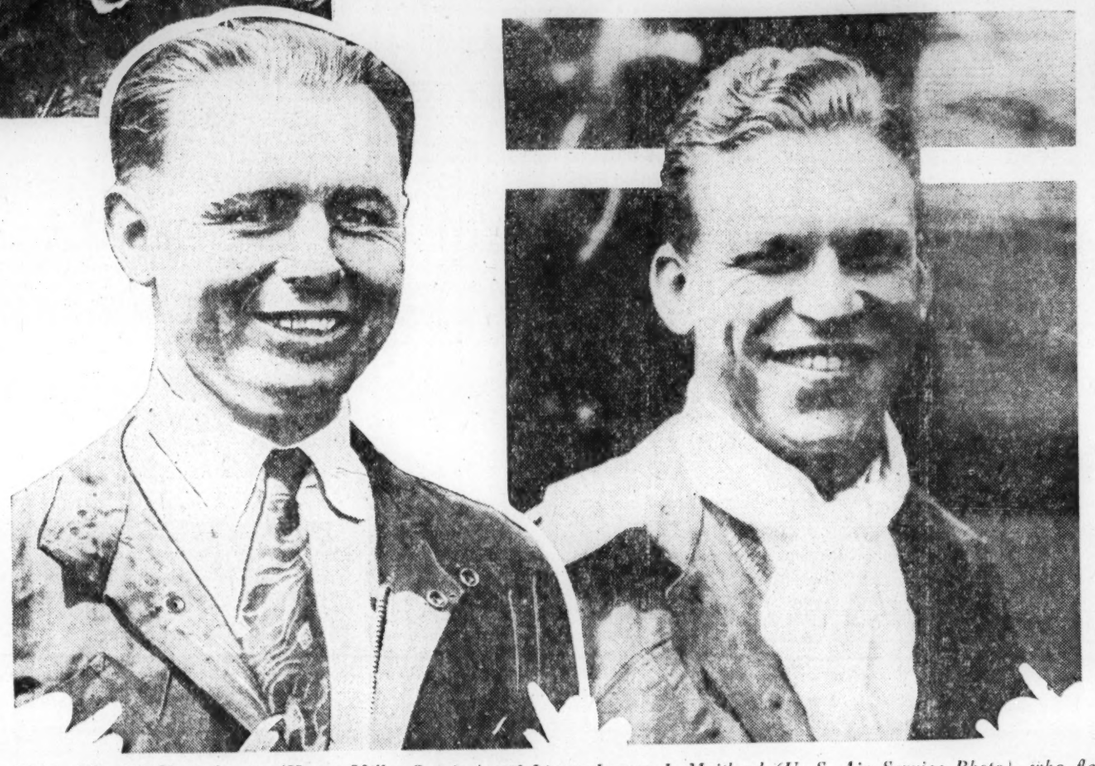

It has been stated by psychologists that Lindbergh is enabled to do what he does because he was a babe in arms when the Wright brothers were flying, and therefore had come to early boyhood and manhood with no fear of flying. The older order of men had always known, deep in their hearts, or thought they knew, that flying was impossible for man. Lindbergh, born at a time when flying had become an accomplished fact, raised when it was almost perfected, and choosing it as his career, had "the sense of the air" almost from the beginning.

If that is so, and it sounds reasonable, boys of today who are coming into young manhood when the two oceans have been spanned, and the North Pole visited not once but several times by aircraft and their flyers, must have some heavy flying ahead of them—around the world, and back again, in a day and a night and a night and a day.

Nobody's Business

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

INCREDIBLE as it may seem, a case has come to light of a prize fighter who willfully distorted the truth in an endeavor to deceive an innocent and trustful manager. The revelation is disturbing, suggesting as it does that there is no depth of perfidy too low for certain characters to stoop to in order to accomplish a purpose.

The case in question is set forth by Mr. James J. Johnston, late manager of 10 per cent of Jack Sharkey and present manager of 70 per cent of Julius Okun, professionally known as Yale Okun. There are no other managers of Yale Okun, Mr. Johnston's 70 per cent representing the entire management, as 70 per cent is all there is of Mr. Okun, if not more.

I knew he was in the delicatessen business because he smelled quite briskly of herring.

Mr. Johnston states that some months ago Mr. Okun went to him and requested him to become his manager for better or for worse. Mr. Johnston was quite willing to do so, and he was in the act of drawing up the contract when Mr. Okun said, "But Mr. Johnston, before I sign the contract with you I will have to have $500 cash to buy my release from my old manager."

"Of course this took me quite by surprise," Mr. Johnston states, "so I said, 'well, who is your manager?'

"Mr. Okun told me the manager's name was Mr. Blotz or Mr. Katz or something of that nature, and I really did not like to distrust him, but I am quite shrewd and something just warned me that I was in danger of being deceived. So I told him to come around the next day and bring Mr. Blotz or Mr. Katz with him, figuring that if he really did have a manager who was asking $500 I probably would be able to get him for $5, cash in hand. This would have been a nice bargain, as Mr. Okun really was worth at least $25.

"Well, the next day Mr. Okun brought around this Mr. Blotz or Mr. Katz. Without asking, I knew he was in the delicatessen business, because he smelled quite briskly of herring. So I got them into conversation about this contract, and by exercising my keen brain I managed to get them apart in their stories, and the upshot of it was that Mr. Okun was not under contract to this man at all but was merely trying to deceive me. I hesitate to say so, but I really have a suspicion that if I had paid Mr. Blotz or Mr. Katz this money they would have gone right outside and divided it up between them.

"Such unscrupulosity makes me wonder whither we are drifting."

Mr. Johnston forgave Mr. Okun, however, and became his manager, hoping by his own fine example of ethics to reform him. But he felt that Mr. Okun really should be punished in some degree for attempting to deceive him, so he devised an unusual test. He told Mr. Okun that he would have to undergo some experiments to prove his durability and courage.

Having explained the purpose of the test, Mr. Johnston took a swing at Mr. Okun's chin, saying, "This is what you would have to stand from Sharkey." He then hit him a hook on the ear, saying, "and this is what Risko would do to you." The final test was a butt from Mr. Johnston's rather solid head, accompanied by the remark, "And you would be sure to get this from Dempsey."

"Under this scientific immunity," Mr. Johnston reports, "I punished Mr. Okun quite severely for attempting to take advantage of my confiding nature, and then I signed him up as my fighter. We have gotten along quite nicely together. He does not attempt to deceive me any more. How could he? The manager handles the money. And, anyway, he knows that if he should try, I would put him through some more tests."

The Great Adventure

By ANNIE KILBURN KILMER

Editor's Note: The mother of Joyce Kilmer, young poet who was killed in action on the battlefields of France, has written for The Post this reminiscence of the Great War, peculiarly appropriate as the American War Mothers' Association meets at the Tomb of the Unknown. The story is a part of her second volume of "Whimsies," now awaiting publication in the fall. She writes as one Gold Star Mother to another.

He was only 7. All his sheltered life he had never been away from his mother, except when she took him to kindergarten in the adjoining block, and came for him within a few hours. But now he was to go, quite alone, to the school at the far end of the avenue.

His mother, standing at the gate, watched him out of sight, and returned to the house rather anxiously looking forward to his return.

When an hour or so later he came back, so happy was she at seeing him safe in her arms again that at first she did not wonder why he returned so soon. It was not until she questioned him that he told her everyone had gone out to play, and he had come home, not understanding the recess.

Of course she did not send him back. She was too glad to have him home again. But he and she never forgot what an adventure it was when he started out, alone, for the first time, to go to school.

Years passed. He was a brilliant scholar, and she shared with him the happiness which his university honors brought him. Less than a month after his college graduation he married happily at 21. Adorable children came. He gained fame and prestige as a writer and lecturer. Three books of poetry were published, one book of essays and an anthology of Catholic verse had been begun when the war came.

Mrs. Kilmer looking at a portrait of her son, killed in France.

He sailed for France after a few months in the training camp. That day he looked into his mother's eyes, and, though the boys were not allowed to tell of their impending departure, she knew. She knew that this was the second adventure which she could not share. Nor could she even watch him out of sight.

Only her heart told her he had gone when, the next morning, he entrained for the sailing vessel. Though she tried to hope, she knew then she would see him no more. He would not come back as in his babyhood from his first day at school. He was gone. And though she wrote and knitted, loved and longed for him, her subconscious mind knew that he had gone forever.

The soil of France covers him. She has only the little National Guard ring, the regimental pin, the little service pin which he gave her, and the Croix de Guerre, the posthumous honor awarded him by France to comfort her sad heart. But she knows that the two great adventures of his young life were when he went alone that first day to school and when he sailed for France.

Days are heavy, and the nights are long—
My boy, now grown to be a man, is gone!
I dream of him—a little lad once more—
And, dreaming, wait for him beside the door.
I see him coming—clasp him in my arms—
Then wake, to find the woe of war's alarms.

Before his lips could utter words to me,
His eyes, so full of baby mystery
Would look into my own, serene and sweet,
And I would clasp him close, his love to greet.

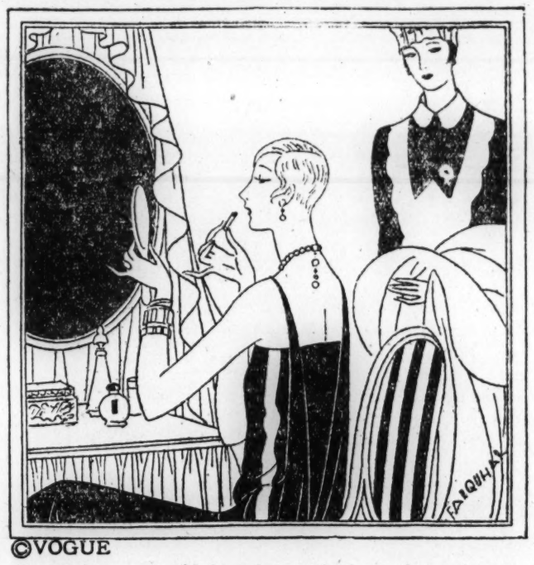

On that last day before he sailed for France,
The same look in his eyes, was like a lance
Through this poor mother heart. For well I knew
Not au revoir was meant, but sad adieu.

Dear Mother Mary, look with pity down
On these, thy daughters sad, who wear the crown
Of martyrdom for pangs they will not own,
And force their lips to smile, that hide a moan.

BEAUTY AND YOU — HOW DO YOU LOOK AT NIGHT? — By Viola Paris

"IF A woman isn't decorative at night, she ought to be invisible." It wasn't a woman speaking; it was a man. And his remarks were made at the close of a very smart party, indeed, where every woman present had had the money, the leisure and, presumably, the desire to make herself as decorative as possible. Else, why had she appeared?

But there were very few women there—and still fewer girls—who couldn't be criticized for some of the things they had overlooked. Here was a lovely dress accompanied by a shoulder flower far from the fresh crispness with which it had started life. Here was a little evening bag fairly bulging, when it should have been trim and flat. If its owner knew she wished to carry her cigarettes as well as her make-up, her change purse and her handkerchief, why hadn't she chosen a larger size? Here was a girl wearing a rhinestone bandeau in her hair, when surely she should have known that bandeaux are completely out of fashion. Here was a handkerchief neither fine enough nor fresh enough for such an occasion. Here, finally, was that inexplicable thing, a woman with a very smart evening dress who had attempted an impossible compromise by throwing over it an afternoon coat!

©VOGUE

Especial care should be taken with the make-up for evening dress.

Perfection vs. Variety.

All of which led to the reflection that it would be far better, if necessary, to have a single evening frock with every accessory perfect than to own a whole group of them, for variety's sake, without enough money left over, or even time and thought, to be perfectly dressed in a single one of them.

Even more important is the effect of perfect grooming; and here a still greater number of women fall short of masculine ideals for them. There is the girl with the rough elbows, when a good soaking in hot oil would have smoothed them, unless they were in bad condition, when she might have tied over them little cotton pads soaked in the oil. But, because she wasn't forced to look at the elbows herself, she probably didn't realize how they affected others.

Hair Cuts and Braissieres.

Hair cuts, too. Nowhere is the line of the hair in back more noticeable than on the dance floor or at the theater. Yet so many women go ragged—or clippered, which is even worse. Speaking of hair leads to the subject of combs. Most of us carry them; some of us forget that they should not be used in public; many of us, bringing them out in the dressing room, reveal combs far from lovely. Yet, for a few cents, one may buy in almost any department store the tiny, brightly colored kind that slips so easily into a little bag of lame or brocade, and that may be thrown away if a tooth turns up missing.

Very few people wear corsets at night nowadays, and these few, of course, are among the older generation. But many of us need to wear a brassiere of some sort. The problem of shoulder-straps may be solved by making them of narrow flesh colored net, or by getting the jeweled or mesh sort that hook on, or by leaving them off altogether. The rubber brassiere of which I have spoken before is, to my mind, the best solution. It is nothing but a strip of rubber, put on wet so that it adheres, and fastened by two ribbons in the back. With many of the evening gowns of the current season, however, none of these brassieres could be worn, because the decolletage in back is too low. In such a case, if support is needed, it should be built into the dress.

Present Arms.

The hands, arms, shoulders and back are all in the limelight when one dances. Yet, so often, the dancer seems to have forgotten to have a manicure that day or to powder her back, or—if she uses a liquid powder on her arms—to choose the sort that won't come off. Yet to be careful of all these little points costs so little time and money, and it means so much. Very few women today neglect the regular use of some satisfactory measure of removing superfluous hair under the arms, but the effect would be much better, with some of us, if we used a bleach, as well. Equal parts of peroxide, lemon juice and ammonia will do the work inexpensively and satisfactorily.

Make-up At Night.

The question of make-up is, naturally, of immense importance. Most skins needs a yellower powder at night than they do by day, though blondes, of course, are lovelier for using a lavender cast. A more vivid rouge, too, may be used at night, and the occasional woman who feels that she can't stand it at all by day has recourse to it under the lights. For almost any complexion, a coral rouge that gives the skin a sort of shell-pink delicacy is most flattering.

Perfume and Jewelry.

Almost all of us use perfume at night even if we don't do so by day. French women, who prefer a simple flower fragrance or a light, delicate bouquet for daytime occasions, frequently permit themselves something more sensuous or more exotic in the evening. One should be cautious, however, about getting a perfume that is too strong and about using too much of any extract. A mere suggestion is much better than an equinoctial gale, especially, as often happens, some of the people one meets will not happen to like that particular fragrance. To the girl with little money I should say, "Buy the very best perfum that you can afford. Economize by using very little of it—none at all by day, if you must make it last a long time."

Jewelry, at night, is much like perfume. A little of it—real, or a very good imitation—is much better than a lot of cheap stuff. Bracelets, of course, are very good at the moment, and the smart woman wears a prodigious quantity of them, though she rarely wears more than one ring and she frequently leaves her earrings at home. If you like earrings, choose the plain button kind unless you can afford something very distinguished. Pearls, of course, are as lovely as ever in the longer or the shorter strings. Flexible diamond necklets set with a huge sapphire, a ruby or an emerald are the sort of thing in which those who have uncensored checkbooks may indulge. The rest of us will stick to our artificial pearls and look almost if not quite as well.

A Look in Time—Wins Nine.

A final word in this; why not make a habit of going over all of your evening things before putting them away, to see whether everything is in perfect order? Metal shoes can be cleaned, satin brushed and cleaned, too. Dresses should be pressed, flowers freshened or discarded, the evening wrap brushed and the fur collar cleaned if necessary. A corner in a bureau drawer should be devoted to evening stockings, evening bag, handkerchiefs, &c., and nothing should be put there till it is in perfect order. Tissue-paper in which to wrap the various articles will keep them so. One's time should be planned, too, so as to include the necessary freshening of oneself, hair-cut, manicure, treatment of elbows and legs and so forth. For the woman of leisure, this should be an easy matter; for those whose time belongs to an employer, it takes a bit of further thought, but the results justify it. For the girl who attracts the longest looks on the dance floor is the one who is as satisfyingly, freshly perfect as a flower.

Block-and-Tackle Trimmer Eases Pruning Trees

The principle of the block and tackle is adapted to a tree trimmer now on the market, with the result that time and labor are saved and the quality of work generally improved, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Both hands are kept on the pole, making it easier to guide, and cutting is done with much less effort. The blade is pulled down by moving a sliding grip to which the tackle rope is attached. As soon as the limb is severed, a spring jerks the blade and the grip back to working position again. It is estimated that at least 20 per cent more power is afforded with this rig, as compared with the usual lever outfit. It is also lighter and quicker in action.

Bicycling Grows On English Roads

Warwick, England (A.P.).—Despite the increased number of motor cars on the roads there are a greater number of cyclists pedalling about than of late years. A feature of the cyclists seen on the roads recently is the number of "tandems" occupied by a girl and a boy and often by two girls.

The purchase by installments has done much to popularize the bicycle again and it is very unusual now for a bicycle to be hired by the day except at seaside resorts.

Bicycle dealers are anticipating a record year and makers, in consequence of the cheaper prices now ruling, have an increased number of orders in hand for single and double bicycles.

BYRD ANTICIPATES ANTARCTIC'S HAZARDS

New York (A.P.).—Some of the difficulties confronting an airplane expedition to Antarctica, such as Commander Richard E. Byrd is organizing, are set forth in a chapter which the aviator has contributed to "Problems of Polar Research," a book just published by the American Geographical Society of New York.

Reviewing the problems of exploration by aircraft in this volume by 31 prominent explorers and scientists, Commander Byrd refers to the experiences of his flight over the North Pole and then says:

"Apparently there would be more hazard from storms in the Antarctic regions than in the Arctic, because the spring and summer storms there sometimes reach great intensity, and not only would it be very dangerous to fly in them, but there would be a likelihood of the airplane being blown about by the winds when on the ground.

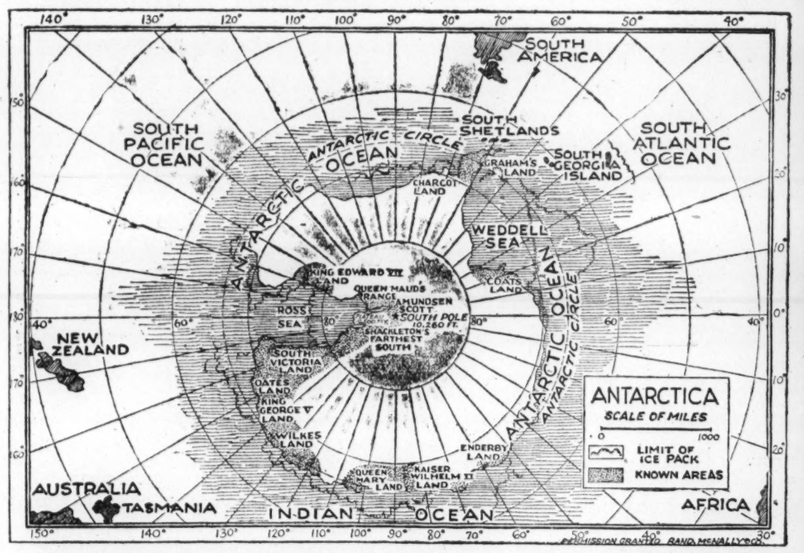

"Skis would have to be used when flying inland even in the summer, because snow seems to cover a large part of the Antarctic continent and the land is probably too rough for landing with wheels. On the routes that may be flown across the Antarctic continent there would probably be many places where planes could land.

"It would therefore seem inadvisable to make very long flights in the Antarctic, it being more practicable, if possible of accomplishment, to advance by bases—say one base every 200 miles. That would decrease the hazard. In view of the absence of life in the interior of the Antarctic continent it would be impossible to live off the country, and, in case of a forced landing 500 miles or more from the base, it probably would be likewise impossible for two or three men to pull on a sledge enough food and other equipment to get back safely.

"For flying around the edge of the Antarctic continent an amphibian type of plane would be desirable."

Farther along in the chapter Commander Byrd writes:

"So little of the Antarctic continent is known, that a base established anywhere on its border would, for the air explorer, be at the threshold of unknown regions. A combination of airplanes and dog teams would be preferable in the Antarctic also. Airships would be of little use on account of strong winds. So far as we know, Amundsen's base at the edge of the ice would be the best location for the main base."

Geographical features of Antarctica, the south polar continent to which Commander Richard E. Byrd will lead an expedition equipped with airplanes for exploring its vast unknown areas, are shown in this map. Amundsen, Scott and Shackleton approached from the Ross Sea, which is cut off by a broad ice barrier. Byrd probably will make a similar approach, establishing his main base on the barrier itself.

Sir Douglas Mawson, the Australian explorer, believes there is much in Antarctica that may be of "direct economic value." Sir Douglas, another contributor to the book, points out that whaling in Antarctic waters is an established industry and that the penguins and seals on the coasts and in the pack-ice zone also offer opportunities for future exploitation. Coal is known to exist over a large area on the continent, he writes, while ores of many metallic elements have been found in small quantities

"Finally," he continues, "the Antarctic continent may have a future as a source of power by harnessing the phenomenal winds which in some areas sweep down as a steady torrent from the cold ice plateau to the sea. There is some possibility, therefore, of the eventual establishment of a sparse and strictly limited population on Antarctic shores. The prospects are yet, however, somewhat remote."

Antarctica, the vast southern continent which Commander Richard E. Byrd plans to visit, is a land of mystery. Its existence was suspected by the early geographers, who placed it on their globes and many of its outlying islands were discovered by the ocean rovers of the seventeeth and eighteenth centuries. The continent itself was first seen in 1820 by E. Bransfield, an Irishman in the British navy, who sighted Trinity Peninsula, Graham Land. Parts of the coast are now moderately well known, but the 5,000,000 square miles of icy interior, crossed by lofty mountains, remain in obscurity except for limited views obtained by Amundsen, Scott and Shackleton on their polar trips. The high central plateau is covered with a glacier of unknown depth.

WOMAN SEEKS LAKE ERIE TREASURE

New York (A.P.).—The skeletons of three ships which have held their secrets for more than 50 years at the bottom of Lake Erie are luring Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, deep sea salvager, back to her watery profession after a dry, calm winter.

The S. S. Lady Elgin, Mrs. Goodman says, is fathoms down in Lake Erie, the vault of 200 eager emigrants and a casket for gold in unknown amount. It was the crack ship plying the Great Lakes during the land-expansion years of the nineteenth century and bore innumerable settlers who were seeking land in the Middle West. Many carried their life-savings with which they hoped to make a new start. The boat finally sank in a storm, and Mrs. Goodman will seek to disclose its secrets this summer.

"I haven't completed all of my plans yet, of course," she explains. "But in a few months I hope to have enough information gathered about the Lady Elgin to warrant going after it. I have located some of the captain's family, and from them hope to get definite information about how clear my right to the salvage might be."

The Brunswick is another vessel that may perhaps have a summer visitor, Mrs. Goodman says. The boat is believed to have been loaded with $200,000 worth of white oak and black walnut logs. The action of the years' constant swirling of water will have had no effect upon the condition of the wood, she believes.

Mrs. Goodman plans to search for these two vessels, along with a third, the Atlantic, by airplane. The sunken hulks appear in the water like huge dark spots, Navy experts say, and by this means she hopes to locate the treasure ships.

Mrs. Margaret C. Goodman

Mrs. Goodman first gained fame as a salvager of lost ships in 1917 when she organized a company that was successful in bringing the Pewabic to the surface of Lake Huron and retrieving $200,000 worth of copper. She had never been beneath the surface of the water before.

The need of money to support an invalid husband and a growing daughter put Mrs. Goodman into the business. Her work as a reporter for a Detroit newspaper took her to an inventor who related his scheme for a diving suit of new design. She became interested, organized the company, conducted tests of the suit and carried the undertaking to a successful end.

Ether Waves Used in Radio to Help Treat Disease.

Medical science is reported at the threshold of another victory in the announcement that ether waves, which have been harnessed for radio, may prove beneficial in the treatment of various diseases, particularly pneumonia. It has been noticed that operators exposed to the waves experienced a sudden rise in body temperature, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Doctors believe that the waves may therefore be utilized to restore normal temperature to a person who has been suffering from such a malady as pneumonia, when the patient is in danger of a collapse after the crisis through failure of the body to retain its normal heat.

The Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

Her Sister-in-Law's Ridicule Betrayed by Bobbie's Mimicry

FROM the rain-streaked window a dreary stretch of soppy lawn.

Helen watching the sullen downpour. No sign of clearing in the leaden sky.

"You gotta stay all night," Bobbie squirmed up on the window seat.

"No, not tonight, Bobbie. We're going back on the six-thirty."

"Uncle Warren says you in't—I just heard him. Wanna play dominoes?"

And he had promised to leave early! Now the rain an excuse. A Sunday at his sister's always a dreaded ordeal. And to stay all night——

"No, you gotta draw!" Bobbie querulous at her distraction. "Aw, don't you know how to play?"

"Who left the bathroom window open?" Carrie coming down the stairs. "Everything on the shelf is soaked. Don't put you feet on the pillow, precious!"

"Aunt Helen 't gonna stay all night, mother! Gee, I got a double six!"

"Nonsense, you can't go home in this! Isn't, Bobbie, not ain't. Drive in with Lawrence in the morning."

"Guess we'd better," Warren scraped out his pipe. "Shame to make him plow through this mud to the station."

"And the car washed yesterday——Bobbie, take you feet off that pillow! Isn't that a beauty, Helen? Oldman had a sale last we-."

"No three, Bobbie? Yes, awfully good-looking," examining the green suede. "How much was it?"

"Six ninety-five. Don't you think that's cheap? Oh, you wouldn't!" bristling. "No one ever gets a bargain but you!"

"Why, Carrie, I didn't say a thing! I think it's very reasonable," not daring to admit she didn't. "Well, just one more game."

Might as well play with Bobbie. Carrie in her most irritating mood. The rain had spoiled their drive—taking it out on everybody.

But Bobbie soon tiring. Peevishly scattering the dominoes.

"Let's put them in the box. No, you'll break the cover—fit them in nice."

"How about bridge?" suggested Carrie. "Nothing else to do."

Helen always shrank from playing with her authority-quoting sister-in-law. Relieved when Warren and Lawrence, settled with the Sunday papers, vetoed bridge.

"My, you're a peppy crowd!" taking up a magazine. "All half asleep."

"Too much dinner," yawned Warren. "Pretty close here—let's have a window open."

"It'll rain in on the curtains. Open the porch door," ungraciously.

Helen exultant. That he should demand air! Her training effective. Sealed windows his family's weakness.

"Stop sliding on the rug, Bobbie. Where's the train Aunt Helen brought you?"

"Aw, that's no good—I wanted a big one. I'll show you something funny."

* * * *

SHUFFLING over the thick-piled rug. Then touching. Helen's chiffoned ankle.

"Oh, you got a shock!" gleefully, at her startled cry. "I gave you a shock!"

"That's his latest," laughed Carrie. "The friction causes a current."

Encouraged, he worked up more friction. Trying it again and again.

"Don't, Bobbie—please!" Helen shrinking back, nervous enough to scream.

"That's enough, Bobbie!" Lawrence came to her rescue. "Find something else to do. No, not on the porch in the rain. Here," tossing him the comic sheet.

A moment's respite. Then Bobbie again wriggling beside her.

"Aunt Helen, read me this funny page," determined that she entertain him.

Patiently reading aloud the inane antics of "Teddy and Freddy."

"Why's he hittin' him on the head?-What's all the stars for? Look, here's one you didn't read!"

"Roddie and his Radio," began Helen resignedly

"Oh, I forgot, the Razor Blade Roysterers are on at 5," Carrie turned to their elaborate super-seven.

But only crackling static rewarded her dialing.

"Huh, bought furniture when you bought that radio," grunted Warren. "Five-hundred-dollar cabinet and a $5 set!"

"We've perfect reception!" she snapped. "Every one gets static when it rains."

Helen still reading comic strips to Bobbie. Wondering why Carrie had ever bought that over-ornate cabinet. Their own set small, but efficient. As inconspicuous as possible—not to clash with their old English furniture.

"Nothing much now, anyway. The Stove-Polish Symphony comes on at 6—Don't pick at that scab, Bobbie! We can always get them. Let it alone!"

"Why, how'd he hurt his knee?" sympathized Helen.

"Roller skating with that rough Jimmy Burke. Now look, you've picked it off—it's bleeding! Come, I'll get the mercurichron."

Howling leave-me-alone protests as his mother dragged him off.

Helen leaned back—a moment's quiet. Her throbbing headache. That heavy midday dinner. A barbarous custom—to dine all week at 7, then at 1 on Sunday.

Now they must stay overnight—to spare the washed car!

Dejectedly turning to the window. Still pouring. No hope of letting up.

* * * *

A SHRILL ring summoned Lawrence to the hall tele-

"Dear, you know I don't want to stay!" seizing the alone-with-Warren moment. "Can't you phone for a taxi?"

"Lawrence'll insist on taking us—not fair to drag him out in this," with a lazy stretch. "Now we're here, might as well stay."

"That's what you always say! And you promised this time you wouldn't."

"Great guns, can't we stay one night without you kickin' like a steer——"

"I brought down this scarf I was telling you about," Carrie back with the antiseptic-kneed Bobbie. "From that little Russian shop on Madison avenue."

"Oh, that's adorable!" Helen really enthused. "What'd you pay for it?"

"What'd you pay for it?" piped Bobbie. "What'd you pay for it?"

Prancing by the desk, holding up the paper knife, paper weight, inkwell. Shrilling with impish mimicry, "What'd you pay for it? What'd you pay?"

"Bobbie, what are you doing?" Carrie reddening. "Stop this minute!"

"That's what Aunt Helen always says!" defiantly.

"You go right upstairs!" brick-red now. "You'll be punished for this."

"Well, that's just what you did when Mrs. Drake was here!" with aggrieved whimpering. "And they all laughed, too. Lemme go! Why can't I do it if you can?"

"You come right upstairs!" jerking him from the room. "No supper for you!"

His protesting wails faded to the remoteness of the room above.

Her face aflame, Helen stared out the window. The men palpably silent behind their papers. Of course they had heard!

Carrie mimicking her—before the Drakes! Probably to everyone else—— To ridicule anyone in the family to outsiders!

Smarting tears. Not daring to turn around.

Stay here all night? She couldn't—not if she had to walk to the station!

Warren always championed his sister. What could he say to this? To mimic her so that even Bobbie——

Blinking back the hot tears. Shrinking behind the curtains.

"Almost 6," Carrie brisked in, elaborately nonchalant. "I'll try ORT now."

Ignoring it! Her usual way out. No apology—never admitting she was wrong.

Again the blare of static. Finally a weak, metallic voice.

"* * * came to you through the courtesy of the Jippem Jewelry Company, the home of Peerless Pearls. Please stand by * * *"

"Last Sunday we got them perfectly. They're really quite good, don't you think?"

"Yes, very," Helen still not turning.

"And don't you like the Frying Pan Four Wednesday nights?" Carrie chattered on. "But I hate the Classy Clothes Cheerios—they're too stupid for words."

"Warren, I think it's letting up. We'd better get a taxi——"

HER voice tense—not to be ignored. Throwing down the real estate section. Warren crossed to the window.

"All right—looks like it might hold up."

"It's a shame to let you go tonight," Lawrence protested. "Well, if you must—I'll get out the car."

"No, no, not in this rain!" insisted Helen, with unwonted firmness. "Warren, quick—phone the garage. We can still make it—I'll get my things."

Escape! Up in the guest room—powdering over her burning face.

Still wincing from Bobbie's shrill "What'd you pay for it? What'd you pay for it?" That Carrie should be so disloyal—before outsiders——

At the window. Gazing through blurring tears down the rain-swept road. The garage not far. Yes, the taxi—soon snorting up the graveled drive.

"Here's the cab!" Warren yelled up. "Ready?"

Running down. A hurried goodby. Grateful for the confusion.

"Sorry we had such a bad day," regretted Lawrence. "Come out again soon."

"Yes, we will—and you must come in. No, we won't need an umbrella."

At last the refuge of the taxi. Crunching over the wet gravel. Splashing along the muddy road.

"Why the tragic mug?" Warren broke the poignant silence.

Gulping back the choking lump. Her gaze fixed on the rain-splashed gardens.

"Huh, take up everything that kid says? Just showin' off. Jove, did I leave my pipe?"

"He couldn't have made that up! That's exactly what she did before the Drakes. Warren, you can't find any excuse——"

"Yes, that was pretty raw. Here it is," still rummaging his pockets. "Carrie shouldn't have done that."

"Then why didn't you say so?" she quivered. "You never take my part!"

"Carrie shouldn't have said it, but she was right in a way," thumping his pipe. "You've an awful habit of askin' everybody what they pay for things."

"Do I?" tremulously. "Dear, do I do that?"

"Never miss a chance! Always pipin' up 'how much?' And they don't like it—nobody does—— what d'you care if they get gyped?"

Helen shrinking back in an agony of self-analysis. Did she ask what things cost?

Guilty memories—— Yes, she did! But only because she was interested—helpfully interested. Her innate economy—not wanting anyone to pay too much. But never again—never! Not after this searing lesson——

"Well, don't take it so hard, Kitten," Warren's hand covered hers. "Pretty rotten of Carrie—pullin' a take-off like that. But you let yourself in for it. Better cut that what'd you-pay-for-it line. Got to hustle now," as they drew up at the suburban station. "Just three minutes to make that train!"

NEXT WEEK—AN INGENIOUS TRAP.

"LOCUSTS" IN 1928 CONVENTIONS, TOO

When men now eligible to vote were 4-year-old babies, some insects laid eggs and died. This summer, in hundreds of places, thousands of insects hatched from those eggs will emerge from the ground at nearly the same time.

Brood II of the "seventeen-year locust," or periodic cicada, is expected to make its debut this year. Authorities say that cicada conventions will be held in portions of Connecticut, the District of Columbia, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia.

Something like 30 broods of the so-called seventeen-year locust are known in this country, and the cycles of their appearance have been tabulated in the territories occupied by each. The general region covered by the different broods together is east of central Kansas, and north of northern Florida.

Of course, writes A. B. Champlain, State entomologist of Pennsylvania, in the June issue of Popular Science Monthly, the "seventeen-year-locust is not a locust at all, but a cicada, one of the bug family. The true locust is a close relative of the grasshoppers, crickets and roaches.

Most insects "grow up" in from less than one, to three or four years. The cicada, however, remains in underground burrows for 16 years, in the middle and northern States, before emerging and transforming into the winged adult stage. In the southern States maturity is reached in 13 years.

Brood II occupies chiefly the more densely settled areas of the Atlantic seaboard. The experience of this territory in 1911 tells us what to expect in 1928. Where the "locusts" swarmed at their best, the purring rattle of their air drums became almost deafening. Strange to say, only the males can sing. Why, no one knows.

Thousands of the creatures swarmed on tree trunks, on foliage, and on the ground, jostling each other to find a comfortable perch.

The periodic cicada measures from one and a quarter to one and a half inches in length. It is black, banded, and marked with some orange on the abdomen, and has six reddish legs. Bright red spots like headlights artistically adorn the front, while four shiny transparent wings contain a network of orange-colored veins.

A National Insult.

Recently there was published in the newspapers a report of the number of bald eagles killed in Alaska during the last year for the bounty of $1 each, authorized by the Territorial government. It seems to me that this shooting of the eagle is nothing less than a national insult. The eagle is the national living emblem. It is stamped on our coins. It tops the staff which bears the American flag. In other words, it stands for what the flag stands for.

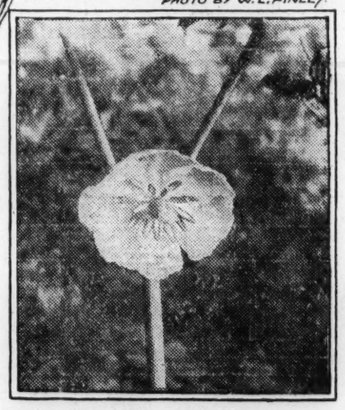

We will not for one instant tolerate desecration of the flag. Why should we tolerate the destruction of this other emblem—this living emblem? Even were there legitimate, economic reasons for reducing the numbers of this bird, such action would still be unwarranted so long as the eagle holds the position to which it has been elevated. But I do not for one instant believe that any economic reason excuses the wholesale slaughter of these great birds. I contend that so long as this bird stands for what it at present does stand for, no man has a right to point a gun at it.

THE MANDRAKE—A WAYSIDE FLOWER.

It is true that in some of its habits the eagle is not above reproach. He is accused of exacting tribute from the osprey. Since when was there a king who did not in one form or another exact tribute from his subjects? He has been accused of not being altogether particular as to the condition of his food. This is a minor charge. I have heard epicures rave over ducks in a condition which to any but a highly educated taste, would be nothing short of disgusting. Grant what faults you will, the eagle is still a worthy emblem. He is an American of Americans. He is a stalwart champion of the very foundation of American life—the home. Year in and year out the eagle, with his mate, returns to the nest with which he began his union. There is no divorce. There is no companionate marriage. The eagles mate for life.

Time was when in the East the eagle was not altogether an uncommon sight. Today it is sufficiently rare to attract attention when it appears. If Alaska's waste salmon are of such value that a bounty must be placed on one of our national emblems, it is high time that we should adopt another emblem, which shall receive everywhere the respect which is its due.

Your Personal Responsibility.

Spring is a beautiful season, but beautiful as it is, it brings with it a menace which is nothing less than terrible—the menace of the forest fire. The destruction wrought by the red terror as it sweeps across the land is not to be computed in dollars and cents. Every one realizes the destruction of plant growth, but few realize the destruction of bird and animal life. There are at this season more ground-nesting birds than most people appreciate. Only the other day I was called up by a fireman, who had participated in putting out a brush fire on the outskirts of the city. He reported a nest with four eggs in it, over which the flames had swept. Whether or not the mother bird was a victim to the flames he did not know. But the nest and the eggs were destroyed. The incident is repeated over and over and over again wherever there is a forest fire, a brush fire or a grass fire in the spring. Then we wonder why our birds grow less.

A very large percentage of these fires start from an unextinguished cigar or cigarette thrown from an automobile. Under no circumstances whatever should a cigar or cigarette be thrown on the highway before you have made certain that it is fully extinguished. It may strike safely in the open road, but it may roll, or a puff of wind may carry it, or even a rush of air from another automobile may send it into the gutter among dead leaves. On motorist, fisherman and camper alike rests the responsibility for the protection of our woodlands from the red terror at this season of the year.

The Tractor and the Pheasant.

From a correspondent in New Hampshire comes the following: "My uncle was plowing with a tractor. As soon as he would start the motor in the morning a cock pheasant would come running from a nearby field and would run along beside the wheel, keeping about two feet from it. He would continue this performance all the forenoon, unless the motor was shut down. In that case, he would run back to the place whence he came. But as soon as the motor was once more started the pheasant would reappear.

"If the motor was allowed to continue running, my uncle could, and on two occasions did, get off the seat, walk up to the bird, pick it up and take it into the house to show the family. On these occasions the bird was put in a cage, fed, kept overnight and liberated in the morning. As pheasants are a novelty in my part of the State, I write to ask if curiosity is as prevalent in all pheasants as in this one?"

One could hardly say that a tractor is likely to have such an effect on all pheasants. Were this the case the pheasants of the country at large would be kept busy. While this is the first instance which has come to my attention of a pheasant being drawn out by a tractor, I have known of several instances in which a ruffed grouse has appeared, and in one or two cases disputed the right of way with the big machine. I know of one instance in which, whenever the tractor started work in a field adjoining a piece of woodland, a ruffed grouse accepted the challenge of the throbbing of the engine. Apparently the bird mistook it for the drumming of a rival.

The Vandal Is Ever With Us.

It is curious how many people have the vandal complex. I have seen many people who looked intelligent, but who were engaged in the most unintelligent business of being vandals. I refer to the despoilers of roadside beauty. The pussy-willow gatherers have had their inning. The mutilated willows hold out their broken and bruised branches in mute evidence. And now all along the waysides the early spring flowers are in bloom. They offer a temptation not to be resisted. The automobiles disgorge their pilferers, young and old. A wonder 'tis that any plants survive. Many of the rare species do not survive. And when these flowers have been picked, when the roadside has been stripped of the beauty with which Nature has sought to clothe it, what have the plunderers? A mass of wilted, pathetic, drooping flowers, which all too frequently are thrown away before ever home is reached. The roadside has been robbed and the robber has no gain. Some of our most beautiful wild flowers need the protection of your friendship quite as much as do some of the rarer species of our birds.

A Naturalist's Question Box.

"Does the clipping of a bird's wing incapacitate that bird permanently? If not, do the clipped feathers grow out, or do new feathers take their place?" inquires the Rev. George M. Whyte.

No, the bird is not permanently incapacitated. In the course of time the wing feathers will be molted, the clipped feathers will drop out and new ones take their place.

"I have been told that the brook trout is not a trout. Can this be true?" asks John L. Gordon.

Yes, it is true. The brook trout is a charr and not a true trout. I find that comparatively few people are aware of this.

Tales of Real Dogs

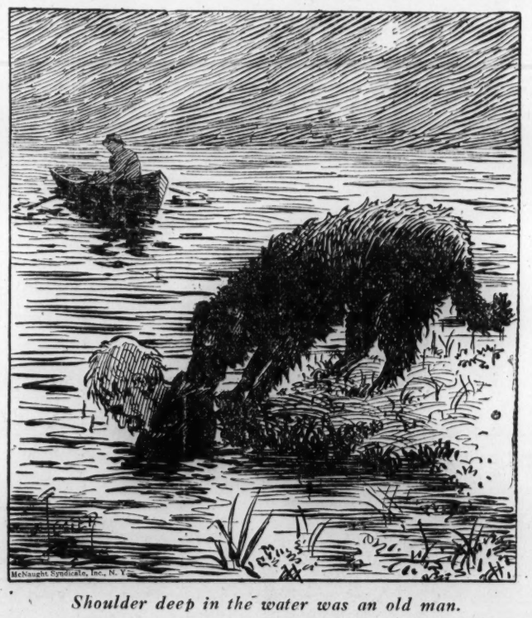

By Albert Payson Terhune

The Nameless Dog That Saved an Old Man's Life

I DO not know the dog's name, nor the name of his owner. Nor, so far as I can find out, does anyone else. He merits, none the less, a place in this series of "Tales of Real Dogs," as well as recognition in the long roll of dogs that have rescued humans from death.

I do not even know to what breed he belonged. All that the newspaper accounts were able to determine was that he was large and shaggy and that he had a most persistently loud bark. Perhaps he belonged to someone or perhaps he was a stray. Here is the story:

On the night of November 5, 1927, Christopher Bauer returned to his shack on Barren Island, New York, for supper. The shack stood on stilts, alongside Deep Creek, near the marshlands which cover so much of that unlovely and ill-smelling region known as Barren Island.

McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.

Shoulder deep in the water was an old man.

Bauer was a fisherman and boatman, by trade. On the side, he made a living by trapping and hunting. On this November day, he had been out in the marshes with his gun, from early morning until the moon arose. He was tired and hungry. Reaching home, he got to work at preparing his supper.

As he toiled over the stove in his stilt foundationed shack, Bauer was vaguely aware that somewhere a dog was barking and howling with stubborn insistence. The noise did not let up, for a minute. When Bauer went to his doorway and yelled to the barker to shut up, the racket only increased in volume.

Bauer knew much about dogs. Every dogman knows there is as much difference in the various tones of a dog's barking as in the human voice's inflections. This bark was imperative and insistent and worried. It increased, rather than died down, when Bauer shouted for silence.

Steadily the barking and the howls continued, all the time Bauer was preparing and eating his heavy supper. Presently, the sound began to make the listener's nerves raw. When he could endure listening to it no longer, Bauer pulled on his heavy boots that he had kicked off, and struggled into his thickest outer clothes.

Then he went down to the edge of Deep Creek, where his fishing boat was moored. The half moon made the misty night visible. Bauer pushed off and began to row in the direction of the incessant barking.

It is hard to judge distance and direction at night. For a long time Bauer rowed aimlessly up and down the creek and the adjoining marsh.

Then, through the drifting mist, he caught a fleeting glimpse of the bank. There, at the water's edge, stood a big shaggy dog, eternally barking. At sight of Bauer, the dog bent far forward once more, and seemed to be trying to pull something out of the water at the brink of the marsh.

Bauer rowed close to the spot. He knew well where he was, for he knew every inch of that dismal shoreline. He knew he was at the verge of the worst quicksand in all the region. Slowly, he turned and backed water, bringing his boat nearer to where the dog's dim figure loomed gigantic in the silvery moon-mist.

Now the verge of the swamp was visible to Bauer. So was the quicksand. From the latter he saw something dark and wavering stand forth against the deceptive moonglow. Closer he rowed, straining his eyes. The big dog ceased to bark, but still crouched above that dark object, seeking to drag it to shore.

The tide was in and the quicksands were at their most dangerous. Bauer pushed his boat up to the vaguely seen dark object above which the dog was crouching. The fog lifted as a swirl of breeze struck it. Bauer saw what the dark thing was.

Shoulder deep in the water and in the quicksand, was an old man of unkempt aspect and in a state of utter exhaustion. His head hung limp on his breast. His strength was gone. Inch by inch the quicksand was sucking him under. But for the persistent clamor of the dog, the old man must have strangled to death there, unseen and his dire plight unguessed.

Apparently, he had been skirting the edge of the creek, when he stepped into the quicksand. There he had struggled weakly and vainly for escape, ever sinking farther and farther. How the dog had discovered him, nobody knows. But somehow the big animal had found him there, and, failing to drag him forth, had given the alarm.

The tide was rising. In another few minutes it must have engulfed the victim. Bauer brought his boat alongside. With great difficulty he drew the unconscious old fellow up out of the clinging and sucking quicksands and into the bottom of his scow.

The dog sprang into the boat after the old man. Bauer paid little enough heed to the dripping and shivering animal. The rescuer's duty, just then, was to get the suffering old man to the nearest medical aid. Fast he rowed, until he came to the shore nearest a house which had a telephone.

There he summoned an ambulance, meanwhile giving such first aid treatment as he understood to the half-senseless old man. The dog stood close by, whining softly under his breath, as Bauer and others worked over the refugee and as they tried to bring him back fully to his senses.

Then, at last, came the clang of a Kings County Hospital ambulance. The old chap was lifted into the motor vehicle, which sped off at once toward the hospital. The dog sprang in pursuit, following the vehicle for some distance. Then he seemed to realize that he could not keep up with it and that his own work was done.

For he halted, in his race and stood for an instant, staring after the vanishing ambulance. Then he turned slowly and trotted off into the night. Nobody knew whose dog he was, nor how he had happened to be close at hand when his services were required for the saving of a human life.

He simply disappeared into the misty darkness, whence so opportunely he had appeared.

Fulton Oursler, the American Novelist, Calls It a Legalized Trial Marriage That Is "Defamation of Idealism" and Bound to Be Exploded Shortly by the Unfortunate Examples of Those Who Essay the Makeshift Experiment

By ISABEL STEPHEN.

"TRIAL marriage! Companionate marriage! A bitter joke. A practical joke. A stupid, silly joke. A joke because it pretends to change things that can't be changed. They ought to be changed—I admit it. But they can't—and you will have to admit that. How can they be changed? By giving the thing another name? Look at yourselves—at you and Bert. You had a trial marriage. Well, what was the result? It was all right for you—but is was all wrong for Bert. What is the difference what kind of marriage you had? That doesn't alter the fact that you couldn't stand living with him and he couldn't stand living without you. Of course, you are free. What about him? He promised to be a good sport, but when the time came he couldn't go through with it. Don't blame him for that. And don't expect your freedom from marriage to help him."

Fulton Oursler, novelist, says: "Companionate marriage is only a flimsy makeshift." (c) Bachrach.

Modern couples rush lightly into marriage, thinks Mr. Oursler, and are as easily parted on the first drop in life's pathway. Their grandparents had their falls, too, but they clung to each other, for to them marriage was sacred and final.

An elaborate feast of old Russia, signifying the seriousness which attended the ceremony as compared with our indifferent, flippant regard for marriage today. From the celebrated painting by K. Makowsky.

ABOVE is an extract from "Poor Little Fool," Fulton Oursler's most recent novel, which is an arraignment of companionate marriage.

"I was greatly impressed by Judge Lindsey when I heard him discuss his experiences in the juvenile court in Denver one day at luncheon," he said, when approached on one of his flying trips to New York City. "His accumulated data on juvenile delinquency were simply staggering, and his theories for handling the situation suggested a series of articles which were later published in book form.

"When I read those published theories, however, I was convinced that while Judge Lindsey was a very able diagnostician, his prescription was just another bread pill with a large infusion of spiritual dope.

"Real love is one force which can not be modified, because it transcends all others.

"When a man and a woman find themselves in love with each other, the first idea is naturally toward a union that is to be perpetuated forever. It is the one perfect fire the man is ever likely to know. If he is not willing to believe the world well lost for the sake of that love, then the element of calculation enters and greatly detracts from that ecstasy.

"With a belief in everlasting love, no man or woman could even consider companionate marriage. There is something fundamental in the union of a man and a woman which is far, far deeper than any mental formula. They can promise to govern their thoughts, but they can not promise to govern their emotions.

"Companionate marriage is a contract in which a man and a woman make a compact which frees each of all financial responsibilities and stipulates that there shall be no children within a certain number of years. It is simply a legalized trial marriage, and is a defamation of all idealism. It drags the finest impulses in man down to the level of the stable and the pigsty.

"My own view is that the modern boy is inferior to the modern girl, mentally and often physically, and that is what causes so much trouble. Boys are under the leadership of their girls. Look at them in the subway. The women are obviously dominant.

"Most trial marriages are really trial honeymoons, not really marriages. If my boy—I have one, 15 years old—were about to get married I'd say to him. 'This is the girl of your choice for 24 hours out of the day. Recollect, you'll see her scrubbing her teeth, combing her hair, doing all the things that you wouldn't want to mar the glamour of the honeymoon.

" 'If you can visualize her and she still survives, it's all right. For the glamour of the honeymoon can be preserved if it is carefully nourished and if you are prepared to see the warts on her neck and overlook them rather than let them stand for the woman herself.'

"In any sort of a marriage contract which even suggests the idea of impermanency either of the parties concerned can say:

" 'I don't have to adjust myself completely to her (or his) personality because I can easily get out of this if I want to—and it won't matter very much.'

"Unfortunately, while two people may fall in love with each other simultaneously, it is very, very rare that two people fall out of love simultaneously—there is always one who falls out of love first— the other suffers.

"When a young couple contract a 'companionate' marriage, the financial arrangements almost always prove a stumbling block. Girls, as a rule, earn larger salaries than young men of the same age. Their promotion is more rapid and their responsibilities as secretaries and trusted employes in small capacities give them a sense of superiority. When these young women reach a certain stage, however, they remain there unless they are very exceptional and attain executive positions.

"On the other hand, the young man advances slowly, but surely. By the time he is of what used to be considered marriageable age he has acquired a salary sufficiently large to support a wife and has made for himself a settled place in the business or professional world.

* * * *

"AT THE most critical period of married life, the first years of adjustment, these young people, then, find that the wife has the superior position and salary, and it is almost impossible for the young husband to escape developing a sense of inferiority.

"To offset this, Mr. Young Husband may become one of those blatant showoffs who are so objectionable, or he may assume an irritating, domineering attitude at home. In any case, the outcome is pretty sure to be a marital smash-up.

"The latent dangers of 'companionate' marriage were first brought home to me when the daughter of my very good friends, the Haldeman-Juliuses, contracted a companionate marriage. They believed, sincerely, that they were taking a grave step.

"This young girl is a dancer. She is very likely to achieve a rapid rise in her profession and arrive at the pinnacle while her husband is still drudging in the struggles which form part of the foundation of any large enterprise.

"I believe in married women working if they want to do so and their working does not interfere with the home life, but I believe that husbands and wives should be equals in every respect.

"In all relationships we must raise and lower our vibrations when-

Ben B. Lindsey, former judge of juvenile court and divorce proceedings in Denver, Colo., and author of the companionate marriage.

ever we come into contact with another personality. Most of us do this unconsciously. Those of us who do not, find themselves out of tune with the rest of the world. Wherever the emotions enter into this synchronizing, exceptional effort is oftentimes necessary.

"It is a pretty difficult proposition, therefore, for the young wife who finds herself the one who is financially or professionally superior to keep in tune with her young husband, who naturally feels that he should be the one who is potentially the better provider.

"You see, I agree that divorce should be allowed by mutual consent," he went on, growing very earnest over his cigarette. "But if two people don't want to live together any more, they can part as the law stands. The remedy would be to change the way of parting, that's all. We should recognize collusion as a condition existing in modern divorce.

"Till death do us part may be an exploded theory, but I believe in idealism in marriage. Companionate marriage automatically destroys that. One definitely forsakes the ideal and does not seek to safeguard one's marriage. It gives something of the psychology of the seducer to all who enter into it."

MR. OURSLER was asked whether he considered the financial problem, the natural jealousy of the husband of his wife's superior position, or the lack of responsibility the husband feels because there is no binding tie of children involved, was the most dangerous rock in the companionate marital bark's course.

Very positively he responded: "Children are legal responsibility, and no legal responsibility ever made or broke up a marriage. Using children as a restraining influence against divorce is just like taking dope to stop a hemorrhage.

"A woman faces the hazard of losing her husband by death just as she faces the hazard of his falling in love with another woman. The husband faces the same hazard of losing his wife by death or by her falling in love with another man. Children don't solve the problem at all.

"Without any doubt, responsibility is good for a man who marries. He wants to feel that he is the head of his home. However, I believe that marriage has a spiritual meaning. It is the atheistic tendencies of the present day which are accountable for the abominable idea that the mating of a man and a woman is no more than the amour of the barnyard.

"The loss of all religious feeling has resulted in the whole idea that life has no more meaning of importance than the jungle struggle for existence.

"The dying away of faith, the cold sterility of skepticism, which has seeped into modern life—these are the things which seem to be symptomatic of decay. However, fortunately, it is the decay of an adolescent stage between the childhood of the race and the coming of a wiser and more rationalistic time.

"This new rationalism will show us a tomorrow as well as a yesterday. In the meantime, we are living in today only—a today in which man is a sophomore to whom his little learning is a dangerous but not fatal thing. The chances are that he will outgrow it. I don't think these experiments will do much harm, though they will undoubtedly cause much suffering.

* * * *

"THE faults of conventional marriage—'old-fashioned' marriage—we all know. Every one can make out a good case against it; but people will continue to marry in the good old-fashioned way. All the preaching and exhortations in the world couldn't kill off 'companionate' marriage. It will be exploded by the object lessons furnished by these marriages themselves.

"That is why I believe that 'companionate' marriage is doomed to failure.

"It is rather pitiful to hear our young—and not so young—intellectuals trying to console themselves with synthetic gin cocktails and Rabelaisian discussions for the loss of their childhood belief in love and life everlasting.

"Their scorn of faith is only a gesture—whistling in the dark. Eventually man will find the now unknown God and the Lost Word and will come back to a belief in his own splendid destiny.

"So far they have found nothing to form a real substitute for the ideals of former generations. Makeshifts will achieve nothing permanent—they never have.

" 'Companionate' marriage is only a makeshift and a very flimsy one at that. That is why I believe it is doomed to failure, for it is not from the class which supplies the great numbers of deliquents that the couples who are testing out 'companionate' marriage come. They come from the set of poor, deluded youngsters who consider themselves very sophisticated and modern—only to find out too late the mess they have got themselves into."

Cincinnati-Born Countess Legion of Honor Member

Cincinnati (A.P.).—The Comtesse de Chambrun, formerly Miss Clara Longworth, of Cincinnati, has been made a member of the Legion of Honor by France, in recognition of literary activities during her 26 years' residence in France or its possessions.

In addition, the comtesse has won a doctorate of letters from the Sorbonne, an achievement, friends have written back, hailed as a triumph in Paris.

The Legion of Honor decoration was first presented in 1802 by Napoleon, while he was consul of the French Republic and is awarded to those who have rendered a distinguished service to the state.

It was conferred upon the American born countess partly for research in defense of Shakespeare against the Baconian theory. In this work she spent many months examining old records in the British Museum. Various notations on manuscripts held to be enigmas were translated by her to the satisfaction of accredited experts. Her completed investigations were put into a brochure and rewritten in French for Paris circulation.

The award includes recognition of the comtesse's other literary activities over a period of 26 years and her services as president of the French Red Cross in Morocco, where her husband, Gen. Le Comte Adelbert de Chambrun, has been stationed for the last eight years.

Her love for Shakespeare was acquired during childhood from her father, the late Nicholas Longworth, sr., of Cincinnati, who, throughout his life, had been a student of the bard.

She is a sister of Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House, and of Mrs. Buckner Wallingford of Cincinnati.

Comtesse de Chambrun.

Youth in Home-School Program Topic of Parent-Teacher Group

Cleveland, Ohio (A.P.).—Four ages of childhood and youth and their relation to a sevenfold program for home and school will be the general topic of the thirty-second annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in Cleveland, April 28 to May 5.

The four ages are defined as preschool, elementary school, high school and college.

The seven divisions of the educational program of the congress are health, worthy home membership, vocational effectiveness, tools, technique, spirit of learning, wise use of leisure, useful citizenship and ethical character.

The part home and school play in the adjustment of each childhood age to each of the educational divisions will be discussed by approximately 1,500 educators and parents who will attend the convention.

Mrs. A. H. Reeve, president of the national congress, who will go out of office at the convention, has announced a tentative list of speakers. It includes: John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education; Henry T. Bailey, dean of the Cleveland Art School; Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr. D. A. Thom, of the mental hygiene bureau of the national congress; Dr. W. E. Blatz, St. George's School for Child Study, Toronto, Canada; Dr. Miriam Van Waters, juvenile court official; Augustus D. Zanzig, of Harvard University; Dr. Randall J. Condon, superintendent of schools, Cincinnati, and Dr. Robert E. Vinson, president of Western Reserve University.

Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs.

The only choice made by the nominating committee for the presidency is Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, of Austin, Tex., wife of the superintendent of public instruction of Texas. Mrs. Marrs has been vice president.

"Feather-Duster"

By STANLEY JONES

"—EIGHT, nine, ten!" murmured my companion, as the referee's arm rose and fell over the prone Black-tights. The crowd surged to its feet, and he turned to me, keen brown eyes squinting in the alert, birdlike manner that he had.

"That's what happens when a boxer loses his head and thinks he can knock out a tough slugger!"

"Yes," I assented, "he had it won, hands down, till he waded in there. Kind of hard, though, with 30,000 wild animals yelling 'knockout!'"

O'Sullivan nodded. Inch by inch we edged out in the swarm of excited voices and shuffling feet. A breath of damp air met us. Pavements glistened and street lights pearled mistily along Madison avenue. Coat collars snapped up against the chill fingers of February fog as we stepped into O'Sullivan's car.

He had taken the house next to mine, in White Plains, and we are just getting acquainted. As we streamed smoothly north, tires sucking greedily at the oozy pavements, I settled back in comfort. What a lean, humorous profile he had—and wasn't that a slight inward curling along the edge of the right ear?

"You've had the gloves on a bit yourself, haven't you?"

His full lips quirked pleasantly up at the corners.

"A bit, in the old days," he nodded. Sobering suddenly, his alertness relaxed into reminiscence. "But it was as a youthful manager that I came within an ace of sitting on the world with a second Jim Corbett under my wing."

I expressed incredulous interest. "All right," he said, flicking the long car deftly round a maundering taxi. "It's a long yarn, but we've got a good drive ahead. This last bout tonight brings it all fresh to my mind."

He took a long, contemplative pull on his cigar, let it plume away over his shoulder into night behind us. The tiny cowl light etched the lines about his mouth, threw up his fresh, ruddy color. He was, I observed, one of those remarkable men who somehow hold a sunburn all winter. He looked fit—wholesome as a hard muscle.

"Well," he began, "as a kid I was always able to take care of myself. You had to be in Greenpoint, in order to live! A gang of us used to fool 'round a gym there a lot, and somehow I drifted into the booxin' game.

"I never went to college, but my wits were pretty sharp from havin' to depend on 'em, and after a year of barnstormin' around and gettin' this permanent wave"—O'Sullivan tapped his eagle nose, which was hinged slightly to the left—"I got wise an' became a manager.

"It was slow startin', but I knew the game, and I had my share of brass. I finally got three aspirin' young men, one black boy, one Swede, and a harp, to sign my book. The first was a likely middleweight, who couldn't leave his gin alone—the other two were only fair pork-an' beaners. However, I pushed 'em around in the tall timber circuit, and we scraped along somehow. But all the time I had my eye skinned for a real find, of course, a money-maker.

"Well, sir, one rainy afternoon I was sittin' in Chris Hinkle's place, figurin' up my profits an' decidin' I'd better take on a side-line of plumbin' when in comes a letter from Greenpoint.

"The horrible scrawl was Pop Farrar's, a queer old duck who'd always taken a fancy to me, though he hated to have any one know it. I used to run his paper route for him, an' many's the bat side of the head he give me, an' many the half dollar too, immediately after.

"The letter ran,

"You cheap, prizefightin' blatherskite.

"Since you're in the lowdown business, refusin' to go to work, I am through railin' at you. More, I aim to help you, lackin' in brains as you always have been. I've got the lad, right here in Greenpoint, who will be the makin' of you both. A nephew of mine, just down from Newfoundland. Young—an' senseless like all such—but a born boxer, Danny! May the Lord forgive me th' lies I've told him about yerself, but come over this week, an' look him over. I'm keepin' him under glass for you.

POP.

"Next day I hotfooted over. Pop was sittin' in his busted rocker, blinkin' at the sun with his fierce old eyes.

"'Humph,' he grunts, 'took yer time, didn't you? Sit down while I tell you about the lad.'

"Then I met him. Well, sir, an even 6 feet, scalin' about a hundred an' seventy, and straight as a lance. Not over 19, I should say, an' clean lookin', all through. The whites of his eyes—which is a good gauge—were clear as a china cup. He walked, too, kind of on the balls of his feet, springy as a bantam for all his heft. Generally, a man who walks like that can handle his body pretty well. His face was good an' solid, with a mouth that looked as though it could take a punch as well as a kiss, an' blue eyes well set in under his brows, as a pug's should be. He looked pretty sweet, but, of course, I couldn't let on. An' I'd seen birds that had all the machinery before, yet couldn't lick their own aunts. It's the heart, an' the brain, an' the instincts that count.

"We talked awhile, then old Pop suggests that we adjourn to the barn, and spar a bit, just to get a line on young Tim. That was his name, Timothy Ryan, an' a fine name for the game, you'll agree.

"We kicked the old harnesses aside, and pulled on a pair of musty 12-ounce pillows that I used to train with.

"A week later, under the name of 'Kid Farley,' the youngster joined my stable. I put him to work, right off the bat, in a little gym in downtown Brooklyn where the others got into shape. An' I studied him, a lot closer than he knew. He was a likable lad an' quiet spoken. He wanted to make money, an' buy an interest in a fish cannery run by an older brother in Newfoundland. Though don't get the idea from this that he didn't like to box. He did. Lord, the gift he had for it!

"Only one thing worried me. He wasn't keen about punchin' the sandbag; just used to kind of worry it and bat it around. And you know, as well as I do, that crowds have much use for a heavyweight who can't sock as I have for a straw hat in December. The kid had the muscles, he was strong an' his timin' was poetry in motion, yet the more I thought about it, the more it occurred to me that I'd never seen him even topple a sparrin' partner. He could jar you till your back teeth felt like they had grown together—but still——

"One day I decided to test him. I got a big thug named 'One-Round Cassidy' into the gym when no one else was around. I slipped him a five-spot which looked like a wing of the U. S. Mint to him, and told him to double-cross the Kid and keep his mouth shut on the result. I got them to boxin', and ordered them to go easy, with a wink at Cassidy.

"Well, they were just pawin' about lightly when Cassidy fixes his eye on somethin' behind the Kid. Cassidy half drops his dukes, an' the Kid stops, turnin' his head to see what goes on. Wham! goes Cassidy's right, and the Kid drops to the mat. I was peepin' through a crack in the door, an' it looked to me like night had fallen. But he shook his head, fixed his glassy eyes on Cassidy, an' clambered unsteadily to his feet. Then Cassidy had a real fight on his hands. The youngster boxed him, though, after one wild rush. His face got a hard, set look, and he calmly set out to shoot Cassidy as full of holes as a woodpecker does a dead limb. He did, too.

"When I came in, whistlin' careless like, Cassidy was feelin' his way around, both eyes shut, his ugly mug a smear of red.

"'Take him off, Dan,' he mutters through thick and swollen lips. 'I done my stuff, an' he's still here!' Kid Farley gives him one final smack across the nose with the flat of his glove.

"'Next time you want to spar like that,' he says, 'step down to the docks, Cassidy. You could teach 'em a thing or two!'

"The two of us had dinner in a little chop-house on Fulton street. When the rice puddin' had been polished off, I sat back an' lit a cigar. I looked at him through the smoke.

"'What was Cassidy tryin' to prove this afternoon?'

"He told me, an' I got as indignant as a hen whose only chick had been mauled. 'The big tramp,' I said, 'why didn't you flatten him, Tim?'"

"He looked kind of confused, then embarrassed, like a boy who has been caught doin' somethin' he's ashamed of. A beautiful flush spread over his face. He frowned at the tablecloth for a minute, started to speak, stopped, and finally stammered.

"'I'm—I'm afraid you're goin' to be awful sore at me, Dan, but I've got to let you in on somethin'. I tried—thought I could get by without your gettin' wise, maybe, but I've been pretty miserable over it. And—and, now I'll open up, and you can let me out, if you want to. I wouldn't blame you much.'

"There was real trouble in his Killarney eyes, an' I said, 'Go to it, son,' kind and sympathetic.

"'Well, I've been—been feelin' that you was wonderin' if I could punch, as well as box, Dan, for some weeks. I know what it means in the game.' He paused, then slowly laid his two hands, palm down, on the table-cloth between us.

"'Look at 'em,' he says, with a kind of a catch in his voice, 'ever see such things hung on to a fighter in your life?'

"I leaned forward, squinted closely, and my heart sank till it hit the floor. Those hands were one of the tragic jokes of old Mother Nature. The wrists were thick and strong. But the hands—I've seen their likes on men who paint, and write. Long, slender fingers that you could see between even when held close together. The two middle ones extendin' a full inch past the others.

"Tim closed one hand into a fist. Knuckles rose, sharp and delicate as the teeth of a fine saw. I could almost make out the thin bones through the skin. Hands that were strong, sure! Each little muscular pad developed to the limit, but never in this world designed for smashin' and maulin' and punchin', bone on bone. Why, my own brown fists, lyin' there beside it, looked like bear's paws. I could punch a hole through a door without hurtin' 'em. Suddenly I realized what the Kid was up against, for a fighter's hands are the head to his spear.

"He read my eyes, and honestly, I thought he was going to blub right there in the restaurant. His cheek muscles hopped and hot tears welled in his eyes. He glared at the offendin' hands.

"'You see, Danny,' he said, miserably, 'one smack too hard an' they're gone! An' then you'll throw me over, if you don't now.'

"'Go on with you,' I tell him, tryin' to grin it off. 'We're goin' to make a champ out of you, son. Jim Corbett had maulies as much like yours as your own! An' did pretty well, considerin'.' Which wasn't quite the truth, but which was worth it for the effect.

"'Son,' I says to him, after a long silence, 'you feel that you've got the stuff to win a title, except for the ability to punch the jaw off a Tom Sharkey, don't you?' He considers this a minute, then nods slowly.

"'Well,' I continues, 'then we'll just naturally have to get the people used to a new kind of a champ. We'll box our way into it.'

"For another three months I groomed Kid Farley with all I had. We worked on those doggone misplaced mitts of his to crowd every bit of protective muscle aboard. I even had him squeezin' balls of newspaper when he's going to sleep at nights. We soaked 'em in brine, an' I padded 'em with yards of bandage before each trainin' set-to. And he got faster an' faster—man, he was a sweet boxer! An' he was careful, mighty careful.

"Then I took him up to Danbury for the first scrap. A big, hairy Pole who shifted hides in a shoe factory, with a face that'd haunt your dreams. But he was slow, an' the Kid made a monkey out of him in six rounds. Cool as a veteran, too.

"Next week he took on 'Slugger Morey,' a crate smasher with something of a rep on the docks in Brooklyn. The 'Slugger' was no set-up, with a puzzlin' crouch an' a right-hand wallop that sizzled. He was kind of bald an' looked like the father of the fresh-faced Kid when they stepped into the ring. But he chased a tantalizin' shadow when the bell rang—until he ran out of wind. An' then he saw more gloves than he'd seen in all the rest of his life! He was tickled to death when it was over.

"I won't recite every fight we had for the next two years, but Kid Farley met 'em all, gettin' better an' better, an' the newspapers began to take a lot of notice.

"Till finally, to make a long yarn shorter, we worked ourselves into line for a match with Jimmy Mason. That isn't his name, and I can't tell you the real one because of a promise I made a good many years ago, but it doesn't matter. Jimmy Mason was king of the heavies. Not so good as the line which just preceded him, but a hard, square fighter and tough as a keg of nails. He laughed off our challenges for a year, while the Kid was carefully mowin' down the other contenders, an' without a knockout to his credit on the books, save one fluke in Boston.

"This went on 'til Kid Farley, in a slashin' twelve-round go, gave 'Sailor Thomas' the lickin' of his life. And the 'Sailor' had held Mason to a draw. That brought things to a head. After six weeks of bluster, Mason and his rat-faced manager, Andy MacClary, signed articles callin' for fifteen rounds, to a decision, on June 15. That was six weeks off, an' the Kid an' I were tickled pink.

"I rented one wing of an old, ramblin' inn, up at Harland, in the Catskills, and arranged for board with Dennis Burns, the old bicycle racer who ran the place.

"'Tis nice an' quiet here, Dennis,' I says, watchin' the carpenters stretch the canvas over the new outdoor ring. 'You'll have no guests, save the newspapermen, this early, will you?'

"Dennis sniffs the perfume of the fresh pine planks in the ring floor. 'None,' he says. 'Nor would I take 'em in, for they're not conjoosive to rest for a young fighter. Ye've th' place to yerselves, Danny, except fer th' school marm who's been here a month.'

"'The who?'

"'Miss Evans, an' she's a brick. I'll interjooce you at supper—she minds 'er own business.'

"'Hm,' says I, 'that's real nice of her. The Kid is 100 per cent proof, an' I never could see anything in 'em——'

"'Hah,' blats Dennis, like a scornful goat, givin' me a dig in the ribs. 'You couldn't, eh? Seems to me I recalls a small blonde in Newark that stood you on yer silly head all of one summer, me bhoy. Until Chet Harris saved you from suicide by cuttin' you out an' marryin' the girl——'

"'Dennis,' I says, pleadin', 'don't—if you want us to stay at your rattrap of a place—let that get around. Ev'ry man gets like that once or twice in his life.'

"'Well, if it's that gineral, ye needn't go to blushin' like a bride,' he chuckles, 'an' I'll do me best fer an old friend.' He starts inside, then comes back. 'Say, here's news, Danny. One of th' bhoys just back from th' village tells me that Mason's pitched his camp up here on Sugar Hill, two miles west, again. He gets in to start work tomorrow.'

"'No,' says I, 'is that a fact?' Dennis nods. 'He trained there two years ago. Natives 'round here still gab about th' way his gang cut up. Now, with th' champeen an' th' challenger within spittin' distance fer six weeks—' Dennis throws up his hands an' th' door slams behind him.

"'Lord,' I says, 'the Kid'll hit the roof when he hears there's a skirt under the same roof.' Then I figures that any girl who'd be teachin' school in Harland would be safe enough. Probably tryin' to keep out of the sight of men.

"Well, sir, I don't know if you have ever observed this fact about red-headed girls, but I have. Nine times out of ten they are either simply marvelous, or else they are simply terrible. Almost never can you merely say, 'Oh, she's not bad lookin'.' No, they either have pale, piggy eyes, with pink lashes, an' the unbecomin' kind of freckles—or else they make you want to throw your hat in the air, loosen your collar, an' holler 'Hooray.'

"That evenin' we were joshin' along to the clatter of knives an' forks, the Kid handin' it out hot to 'Tiny' Smith, a big, rough lumberjack who fought along Mason's lines. We were all laughin', and as for 'Tiny'—he didn't care what came his way, as long as several pounds of meat and potatoes came with it. All at once I noticed 'Tiny' 'gapin' over our heads. He gives me a smart kick on the shins. I turns. So do the others. And a dead silence fell on the long table—the breathless kind that nothin' less than one of nature's wonders can shake down.

"I can describe a fight for you, but the words with which a beautiful woman is reduced to paper are beyond me, despite the fact I'm Irish. 'Tiny' said, later on, that her eyes had the softness of black velvet an' the depth of a Canadian lake—which was pretty good for any man, let alone 'Tiny.' Jack Martin, the welter, whispers, 'Man, look at that hair, like a pile o' copper in the sun.' An' it was. Harry Spencer—son of old 'Cotton' Spencer—a wild, lovable younster who thought the sun spun 'round me and the Kid, did better than the rest of us.

"'Small, an' dainty, an' kind of chiselled, without the hardness that word implies,' he murmurs, afterward.

"As for the Kid, he just looked, all eyes, an' I could see the breath come a little faster through his lips. When he turned 'round again, he rolled his eyes up in mock anguish, but he didn't fool me. I guess I took in all the things the others did, not overlookin' the clean, fresh pink of her skin, an' the tiny dustin' of freckles down the straight little nose. When I say that Madge Evans could get away with freckles on her nose, you will have a faint idea of just how good she really was.

"Well, the rest of that meal was finished in whispers, but the boys did an awful lot of lookin'. An' afterward Dennis introduced her, an' we sat on the steps, with the May breeze soughin' through the pines, lookin' (according to Dennis), 'like a bunch o' gorillas 'round a pink angel.' But he was there himself. An' Miss Evans was quite composed, an' not at all in proper awe of the comin' world's champion or his handsome an' distinguished manager.

"Next mornin' strange to say, all hands were up bright an' early, with none of the usual grumblin' about turnin' out in the middle of the night. But we ate our ham an' eggs alone, for Miss Evans, Dennis remarked, left every mornin' for school at seven sharp. It was a long drive, an' her horse was no Man o' War.

"But she was home by five, an' after supper—when she wasn't readin' or correctin' papers—she used to sit around an' visit. She could stand us all on our ears, too, when the kiddin' started. We loved to hear her laugh—she had no polite titter, but a full, delighted whoop. Just the way a youngster laughs. She'd throw back her head, close her eyes till all you could see was the long dark fringe of lashes, and let it first bubble, then fairly burst from the round white column of her throat. The boys were always schemin' up ways to make her laugh, an' it wasn't so difficult, once we got acquainted, except for the Kid.

"You see, his experience with women had all been one way—they had chased after him, from shop girls to society matrons. He had always been kind of scared of 'em. But this girl went the other way. I suppose she figured he expected her to fall like a ton of coal off the Woolworth Buildin', and decided not to. Women are mean that way, you know!

"I could see it workin' in his mind like yeast. He buckled into his trainin', an' once when Miss Evans happened home as the boxin' was startin' he like to cut his sparrin' partners to ribbons for her benefit. Just showin' off, as a youngster will, you know. But all she said that evenin' was:

"'Do you have to beat up your friends so badly to get into condition, Mr. Farley?' And he turned peony red, for he had put on a whale of an exhibition, one to warm your heart. It began to make him fretful, I saw, an' he didn't tear into his food as he should have. I was worried.

"Jim Mason, over on Sugar Hill, had managed to meet her, too. Jim was, as I have said, hard as nails, but not a bad fellow with men. And he had a big red automobile—those were the days when every automobile was red, and carried a brass bulb horn the size of a slide trombone. He and his rat-faced manager, Andy MacClary, used to come wheezin' along past our place an' take Miss Evans for a spin.

"'Say,' I took it upon myself to tell her, 'you've got a lot of nerve to go out with those birds. MacClary's so crooked that if he fell over he'd rock himself to sleep! And Jim Mason is no choir boy, either. Of course, it's none of my bus——'

"'Thank you, Mister O'Sullivan,' she darts, an' me just havin' taught her to call me 'Dan' two evenin's before, when the boys were in the village. 'I'll pick my own company if it's all the same to you! May I ask, by the way, what choir you sang in yourself? Mr. Burns didn't mention that to me at all.'

"Off she stalks, cheeks flamin' like poppies, an' her firm little chin in the air.

"Four weeks slid by, an' Kid Farley looked like a million dollars, physically. He had those long, band-like muscles, flexible as a strikin' serpent, strong an' tireless. It was a beautiful sight to watch their play beneath the satin skin, an' the sports writers used to fill whole columns with reports as to how he was shapin' up. They all agreed that he'd be the best heavy since Bob Fitzsimmons' day—if he packed a knockout punch. Most of 'em', after watching him step around, allowed us better than an even chance to snag the title, unless he fell foul of Mason's bone-crushin' wallop. An' that's one thing that didn't worry us a mite. They could see, however, that Kid Farley had somethin' on his mind. So I cooked up a big yarn about an offer he had recently received to go in as partner in a tremendously wealthy cannin' concern up north. I let it be understood that he was goin' through with the fight at great financial sacrifice, an' naturally, it worried him a little.

"Durin' the first week in June, he got so silent that even Harry couldn't snap him out of it. So, after a day or two of serious meditation, I decided to put it up to him.

"'Tim,' I says, careless like, 'let's take a stroll along the ridge trail. It's cool there.' When we had gotten half a mile out, I flopped on a mossy bank. The Kid stood moodily, hands in his pockets, lookin' at the leaf mold he was turnin' up with the toe of his boot. He had the trouble look of a boy who has got somethin' wrong with him, an' don't know what it is, or what to do about it. But I knew, or thought so.

"'Tim, I says, pickin' out each word slow an' easy, 'you an' I've hit it off pretty well for three years, haven't we?' He nods, shootin' a quick glance at my face. I goes on.

"'You've had no reason to question my judgment or my knowin' what was good for you, have you, son?'

"'No,' he answers. 'You've been my best friend, Danny.'

"'Well, then, with the chance to sit on Easy street for life less than two weeks off, would you trust me enough to give me one more promise, Tim?'

"I looked at him hard, an' I think he guessed something of what was in my mind. But the results of the last three years were before his eyes, an' he hesitated only a second.

"I think he imagined, blindly, as a youngster will, that an older man can clear up his difficulties simply because he has seen a bit more of life. He even seemed a trifle relieved by givin' me his word, as though it would put some of the burden on my shoulders from now on.

"I forget just how I put it, but I told him what a disturbin' factor a pretty face was apt to be to any man, let alone one in our present situation. An' I could see that he was impressed. So I finally spiked him by askin' him not to see Miss Evans again till after the fight, even to the extent of eatin' his meals in our rooms. After that I told him I didn't care what he did—even if he wanted to go so baffy as to marry the girl. Though, if you'd seen her, you'd have wanted to go just that baffy yourself.

"Kid Farley knit his brow, snipped his strong, white teeth through a handful of wintergreen leaves, an' finally stuck out his hand.

"'O. K., Dan,' he grins, an' adds an old Irish clincher to it, 'an' may this hand wither away if I break me word.

"For the next two days neither Kid Farley nor myself set eyes on Miss Evans. If she noticed our absence from the dinin' room she remarked it to nobody. I told the other boys that we were goin' over our plans, an' wanted quiet. Trainin' went on, harder an' faster, with everybody steamed up an' jumpy as the big day drew near. I had to import new sparrin' partners, but the Kid had them eager to quit after two or three sessions. An' the same sort of reports fitter out of Mason's quarters, save that Andy MacClary swears his man is offerin' rewards to a partner who will last six rounds, an' nobody has claimed it yet. You know, all the usual bunk that is broadcast before every big fight.

"On the fourth evenin' I had to go down to the telegraph office. Well I remember that night. Soft an' still, just a few puffs of warm air carryin' the scent of honeysuckles an' sweet fern across the fields. The peepers 'all tryin' to outpipe one another in the high grass where the brook widened out into a silver sheet to catch the moon an' stars. A faint haze, shot with fireflies, hung just low enough to change familiar scenes into the purest romance. I sighed—rollin' a cigarette by the gate—without knowin' why, save that it all kind of brought a lump into my throat, somehow. Suppose it's the unreality of such times, an' knowin' they can't last? I don't know now, any more than I did that night, but it hits me like that.

"As I leaned there, sort of drunk with the beauty of it all, I heard a small voice from the stone wall to my right.

"'Good evening, Mr. Sullivan; isn't this glorious?'

"She was in white, soft clingin' stuff, with a dove-gray scarf ripplin' down across her shoulders. The moonlight simply bathed her, seemin' to touch a thousand tiny sparks of light from her hair, leavin' her eyes blacker an' deeper than ever. She sat, light and straight as a flower on top of the old wall, smilin' at me kind of mockin', with a dimple playin' hide an' seek in her cheek. I must have been gapin' like a greenhorn, for she says, lightly, 'No wonder you look as though you'd never seen me before. If I weren't such a lady—and above such thoughts—I'd be tempted to accuse you, and Mr. Farley, of deliberately trying to cut me.

"I moved up beside her, still gapin', an' as I looked into the pure beauty of her face my heart kind of swelled up till it reached my throat, where it stuck. I couldn't say a word, but my eyes must have given me away, with the moon in 'em, for Miss Evans suddenly grew serious an' looked off down the road. An' so bright was the light I could see somethin' beatin', right fast, beneath the white satin of her throat, when she turned her head.

"'Cut you?' I whispers, leanin' closer. 'Never in all my life have I seen anythin' half so lovely as you are this minute, Madge.' An' that speech came straight from the heart. But the man who couldn't have made it, or a better one, must have lacked eyes entirely.

"I was accompanyin' it with the natural gesture of tryin' to take her slender little hand, as it rested on a stone atop the wall beside her. There's no tellin' what might have happened had I not stepped on a round rock—naturally havin' no time to notice the earth with an angel before me—an' fallin', literally at her feet. That cracked the spell, an' Madge tipped back her head an' whooped joyously, rockin' back an' forth as I floundered up, brushin' the grass from my knees. But I couldn't laugh, somehow, though ordinarily I can have one on myself with the best of good humor.

"'I never expected,' she says, eyein' me demurely beneath her long lashes, 'to have so standoffish a man as yourself at my feet, Mr. Sullivan. But I guess I have the rock to thank for it.'

"Before I could answer, the sound of voices came to my ears, down the walk from the house. An' without thinkin' why, unless it might be some wild notion of sparin' the Kid's feelin's, in case it were he, I said, 'See you later, Madge, if you will,' an' slipped off through the goldenrod an' down the road. I looked back, an' there she sat, one little hand at her throat, surprise an' a kind of a hurt look strugglin' on her face.

"O'Sullivan narrowed his keen eyes on the dark ribbon of road ahead. Small knots of muscle stirred along the lean jaw as he clamped solidly on his cigar. The humorous brackets vanished from the corners of his mouth.

"'What I am tellin' you now,' he said, slowly, 'is the inside story of a great fight. If you look back in to the newspapers of that date, you will merely find the announcement that the impendin' heavyweight battle between Jim Mason, champion, an' Kid Farley, challenger, had been postponed due to injuries suffered in trainin' by both principals. This is what hapened, an' 'tis known to not more than a dozen people today.

"Harry Spencer tells me that after I left, he an' the Kid are loungin' on the steps. Harry pickin' out a few chords on his banjo, an' the Kid experimentin' with his fluky tenor. The rest of the boys, even to Dennis Burns, had got hold of an old hound an' gone off coon huntin'. Well, Harry says that after awhile he looks up an' sees Kid Farley strainin' his eyes at somethin' white down the road. His face was kind of twisted up, an' his knuckles showed white on the porch railin'.

"'What's up, Tim?' askes Harry, startled.

"'Oh, nothin', I guess,' replies the Kid, his voice a bit strained an' unnatural. He steps slowly down on to the grass. 'Go ahead, give us "Apple Blossom Time in Normandy"—I'll be back soon.' Off he saunters down the walk, straight an' springy as a saplin'. Halfway to the picket fence he turns an' calls to Harry, 'Where's Dan?' Harry tells him I've gone to the telegraph office, whereupon he squares his shoulders an' goes on.

"Harry tinkles out a few more chords, then, kind of uneasy, gets up an' strolls after the Kid. Harry was no fool, he had a pretty shrewd head behind his gold glasses. An' he idolized the Kid, an' me along with him. Well, he gets down near the road, an' there he sees the Kid talkin', dead serious, with Madge Evans, beside the wall. She was smilin', he says, but seemed a bit uncomfortable, an' kept glancin' off down the road. As he was about to butt in, she said somethin', an' they moved out through the goldenrod an' onto the road. The moon was as bright as day, as I said, an' they were walkin', step by step, the Kid holdin' her arm.

"Harry felt uneasy, he coudn't have said just why, an' was kind of skulkin' along in the shadow of the stone wall, debatin' whether or not to make it a crowd an' earn the Kid's displeasure, or to light out after me. All at once he hears a distant roarin' an' snortin', an' a white beam of light shoots up over the hill ahead. As he listens, the headlights of a car stare over the crest, an' down it swoops.

"The Kid an' Madge step to one side, an' the headlights pick 'em up. Down thunders the car, an' grinds to a coughin' stop about twenty feet off. Two men were in it. Harry says he could almost hear Andy MacClary whisper, so quite was it when Jim Mason shut off the motor.

"There was dead silence for a minute, then Jim and Andy get out.

"'Hello,' says Jim, over polite, walkin' up to the two. Harry says his shadow, in the moonlight, looked as big as a house. Andy snickers, 'Why, it's the Queen, Jim.' Jim nods, smilin'.

"'Why, so it is, an' the Kid himself, as they say.' He plants his great fists on his hips, an' looks hard at Madge under his thick brows.

"'I thought' he says, in a voice that had a file in it despite the slow drawl, 'that the Queen told me she wasn't goin' out with anybody, especially me an' Mr. Farley, until we had kept our little date on the fifteenth. An' here I just happen by——'

"Kid Farley steps up, lips smilin', but two chill blue fires in his eyes. He speaks soft, too, but with an edge on every word.

"I guess I can explain that, Jim. I wasn't aware that Miss Evans was tellin' anybody what she was goin' to do or that it was anybody's business but her own. I butted in on——'

"'Sa-ay,' an' Mason's voice rose a pitch, 'when I want you to——'

"'——an' I took it upon myself to tag along, uninvited.' The kids voice rose, too, just high enough to keep itself heard above the other's. 'I guess that's about all, an' now get into your little red automobile, Jim, an' take the company along.'

"'I'll get in when I get good an' ready. But before I forget myself, I want to tell you one or two things. You're young yet, an'——'

"At this point Harry saw that trouble was about to bust like a thunderstorm, so he lights out across the fields an' arrives, sobbin' for breath, in the telegraph office.

"'Quick!' he gasps, tearin' at my arm. 'May be—too late! Tim—and—Mason—up th' road goin' to be trouble!'

"I'd heard enough, but my mind simply went numb. We legged it across the fields, stumblin' through blackberry tangles, pantin' like wild things. Then I saw the white headlights layin' along the road, an' two dark figures weavin' in an' out.

"'God,' I sobs, clawin' my way over the wall, 'stop 'em, why don't they stop 'em?' I floundered onto the hard road somehow, an' slogged toward them. My lungs were on fire—I tried to shout, but only a hoarse croak sifted out.

"Jim Mason was well over 200, an' the Kid was no lightweight, but they shifted about like ghosts in the unreal light. As I drew near, straining, I saw Andy MacClary step in an' try to catch Mason's arm. Without even lookin', Jim gave him a backswipe that flopped him like a straw man. Then he rushed the Kid, swingin' hard with both hands. But the Kid, white-faced, dances back, sidesteps, an' counters with a one-two that stops Mason dead. While he glares, the Kid darts in an' bobs his head back with two lefts that smacked like a double-barreled shotgun. Then he's away again, just out o' reach. Again the champ jumps in, but not quite so fast, an, this time he gets in close. His back was toward me, but I could see the quick shift of his heavy shoulders, an' the smash of the big fist over Kid Farley's heart. His guard was a bit high, for Jim had worked him around so the headlights were in his eyes, an' down he went. I thought Mason would be on him, then, for he was a famous rough-an'-tumble fighter, but it must have looked too easy.

"'That,' he says hoarsely, 'is a man's punch. 'Tis useful in prize-fightin'.'

"The Kid rolls slowly to his hands an' knees, pressin' his left arm to his side. It was a killin' blow, that last one. I took my eyes off him for a flash as a girl in white sank down beside the road, holdin' her hands over her face. When I looked back, they were at it again. I knew Jim Mason would never get another such opening. The Kid was hobblin' a bit, round an' round, but showin' his dazzlin' speed with his hands. By that time we staggered weakly to the car he was pretty much himself. If I could have shouted then, or even spoken * * *

"I caught a glimpse of the Kid's face, chalk-white, set with two blazin' eyes. Almost crazy he looked, but cold, as a man must be to fight with his brains as well as his body. An' he circled Mason like a terrier circles a mastiff, worryin' the life out of him, jabbin', jabbin', jabbin' at him. Then in a flash, came the rarest bit of drama I ever saw, or heard of, between fightin' men.

"Perhaps it was mere bravado on Mason's

"Anyway, I was amazed when he suddenly drops his arms, sticks out his rockbound jaw, an' snarls, 'Let's see what you got, Feather-Duster!'"

The Ford Tri-Motor Transport

By MERRILL HAMBURG.
Secretary, Airplane Model League of America.

This is the twelfth of the series of airplane model articles that Mr. Hamburg is writing for readers of The Washington Post. It gives you the plans for the great Ford Trimotor Transport, the all-metal ship which carries twelve passengers. It dominates the transport field just as the Curtiss Army Hawk, described last week, leads in the pursuit class. You may enter these ships in the local contest, and later in the national contest, to be conducted June 29 and 30, by the American Boy Magazine, at Detroit. You can stay at home and still enter the scale model contest! All you need to do is box your model and ship it to the judges. (You will find out where to send it in coming issues of The Washington Post). Start now to win these great scale model prizes—a trip to the Pulitzer Air Races at Los Angeles, $500 in cash prizes, a trophy, and 33 medals! Join the A. M. L. A., the national organization of model makers, headed by Commander Richard E. Byrd, to be eligible for these prizes. A two cent stamp, sent with an application to Merrill Hamburg, Room 49 Washington Post Building, will bring you your card and button.

A GIANT three-motor, twelve passenger, metal ship—that's the original of the scale model that readers of The Washington Post can learn to build from this article. The plane is about as different from the Curtiss Hawk described last week as day is from night, but like the Hawk it stands foremost in its field.

Building scale models is not at all the same thing as building flying models. The "flying sticks" you have learned to make if you have followed The Post's series are designed to stay in the air the longest possible time. Scale models, on the other hand, should be exact copies on a small scale, of man-carrying ships. They don't have to fly a foot!

Since the two types are so unlike the things you have learned in constructing flying models won't help you very much when you try your hand at scale models. You don't have to bend every thought toward keeping your plane light; you don't have to worry about balance; you don't have to follow a definite, detailed process step by step. Instead, you will sacrifice everything to appearance; you will concentrate on dimensions to get them exactly to scale; you will rack your brain for ways to make your model a tiny image of the original.

Your own ingenuity will be your greatest asset in scale model building, for this article attempts to give you little more than the dimensions you need to build a 24-inch wingspread model of the Stout all-metal plane. A few hints are included to start you thinking, but the greater part of the problem is left for you to solve. You are "on your own" in building scale models, and that's why they are fun to make.

ASIDE from the fun, you're going to learn a good deal about airplanes. You're going to get a new understanding of the theory of designing ships. You're going to get better knowledge of wing shapes of streamlining, of the "why" of struts and braces. You're going to be able to start at the propeller and name every part of a big ship all the way back to the rudder.

Take one of your flying models and compare it to the picture of the trimotor accompanying the article. They aren't very much alike, are they? The fuselage of the flying model, you notice, is a single slim stick of balsa that runs from propeller to tail, while the fuselage of the big transport is deep and wide. Now look at the position of the trimotor's wing. It is far forward, right up near the nose of the plane, while the wing of your flying model probably is nearer to the tail than the propeller. Those are the chief differences, although you will see others as you look—differences in respect to motors, landing gears, wing shapes, and so on.

While you have been examining your model and the picture, you have seen (possibly without knowing it) why scale models don't fly. The wing of your flying models must be far back to balance the ship. The wing of a man-carrying ship must be far forward to support the motors. You might move the wing of your scale model back, of course, but as soon as you do that your model no longer looks like the original.

Now that you have your task well in mind, put aside your flying model and concentrate on the picture and the drawing. From them you can learn all you need to know to enable you to build an accurate copy of the trimotor. To make it still less complex, if you need more help, The Post has arranged with the Airplane Model League of America to furnish you with scale-size drawings. They are the exact size of the model you want to build to enter the national contest, and they show top, front and side views of the ship. You can use any part of these drawings as a pattern, or template, in constructing your entry.

* * * *

EXACT cross sections of the wing, at several points along its span, are also shown in the drawings—a very valuable aid, because the Trimotor's wing tapers down, both in chord (front to rear dimension) and thickness, toward the tips. Two photographs, together with a printed explanation of several details, are added helps. Moreover, all measurements are given in inches—you can make your parts the same size as the drawings, which show the whole plane reduced down to fit the 24-inch wing.

The sheet of drawings can be had by sending 20 cents to Merrill Hamburg, A. M. L. A. headquarters, American Building, Lafayette Boulevard at Second, Detroit, Mich. Since the 24-inch rule will hold for the contest, the District of Columbia miniature aircraft tournament committee will conduct in May, as well as for the contest to be held in Detroit June 29 and 30, under the auspices of the American Boy Magazine, you'll find the sheet worthwhile if you plan to enter either meet.

Whether you use the printed drawing or not, you're going to have fun building a scale model of the Trimotor. It is a great ship, modern in every detail. Every part of it is made of metal, from landing gear to wing-tip, with the exception of one or two that have little to do with the structure of the plane. The framework for the fuselage, the ribs for the wings, the frames for the elevators, stabilizer, fin and rudders, even the "skin" which covers the whole—all are made from duralumin. The propellers are steel, the motor parts are made from several different alloys, the controls operate by means of steel wire cables. Yet this metal plane can carry fourteen persons through the air at 120 miles an hour, and its cruising rate is 100 miles an hour!

Before you begin reproducing it, get every detail clearly in your mind. Examine the drawings, look at the pictures, find other pictures of the plane in magazines and rotogravure sections. Then start.

You can start anywhere you like, because there is no set way to construct a scale model. If you decide on the fuselage, check with your drawing to get the exact length—the side drawing gives that to you. The top view gives you the width of the fuselage, and the picture shows the general shape.

As for materials, take your choice. White pine, balsa or any easily carved wood will do for the fuselage, or you can build it up from flat wood, steaming so you can bend it as you wish.

* * * *

TOOLS? Use any that fit your purpose. A sharp knife will carve your wood, pliers will bend your metal (if you use metal), a small block plane will smooth the surfaces and some fine sandpaper will finish the job.

While you are working, remember the skin of the trimotor is corrugated metal, with the corrugations parallel to the flying direction. You'll get the idea if you look carefully at the wing in the picture. Remember that this metal covering is burnished, so your plane will have to be bright silver in color when you've finished it.

It isn't necessary to go into too much detail with the inside construction of this plane, but it is interesting to know that the cabin is divided into five separate compartments. Farthest forward, just behind the center propeller, is the control cabin, containing two seats for the pilots and two sets of controls. You enter this cabin through a door from the observation compartment, just behind. This is a small walled-off part of the fuselage with windows in the upper half of it. Farther back is the main cabin, equipped with wicker chairs for the passengers. Behind the main cabin is a washroom, and still farther back is space for luggage.

The door, as the picture shows, is at the rear of the main cabin and on the right side of the ship. There are five windows on the left side of the plane and four on the right.

In the sheet of drawing supplied by the league the airfoil section of the wing is shown. If you want to study this wing section further send 10 cents to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Washington, D. C., and ask for Report 244. It contains all the details for the Gottingen 387, a modification of which is used for the trimotor, and also of the Clark Y section, which is used on the Curtiss Hawk.

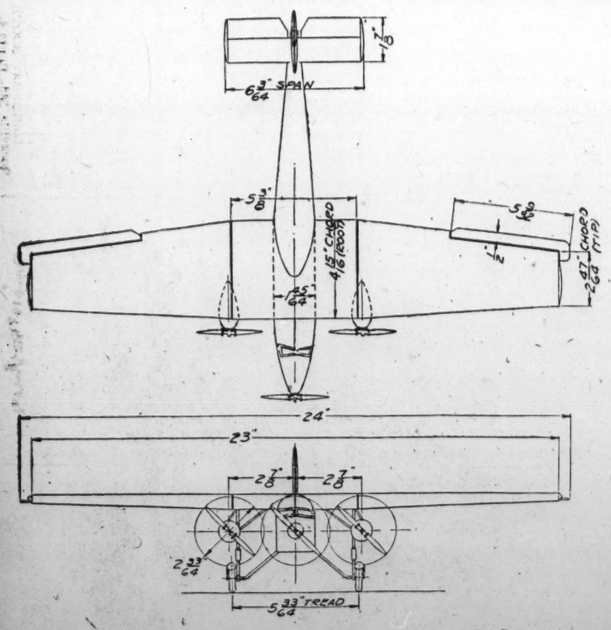

If you are not an experienced builder the report won't help you very much, but if you are, it will help you lay out your own templates or patterns for the ribs of your model. If you use the report remember that the trimotor wings differ from the Gottingen 387 in that the lower surface of the wings is flat, while the camber on the upper surface is increased from .1536 of the chord to .2000. This gives a thicker wing section.

* * * *

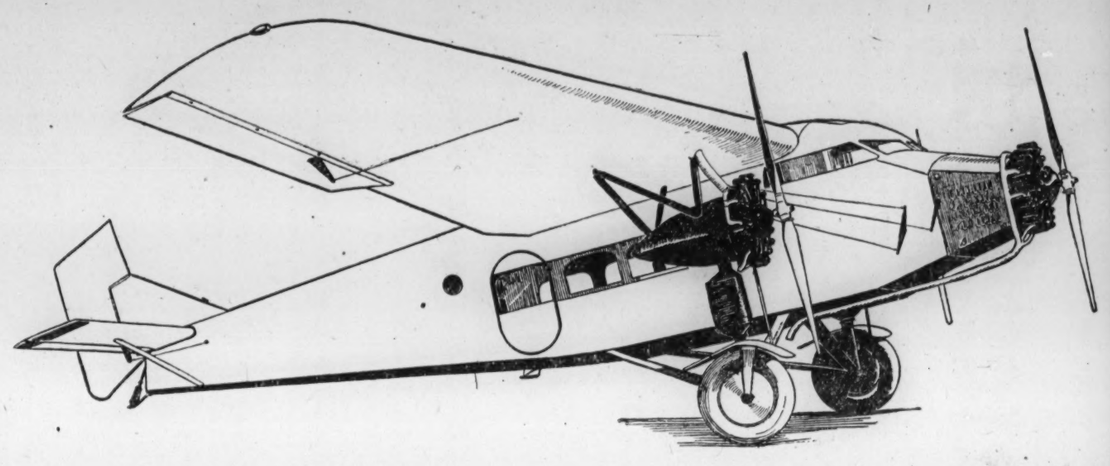

NOTICE, in the photographs and drawings, that the landing gear, struts are streamlined, like the shock absorbers, the motor supports and the nose of the ship. The fairings behind the two wing motors are also designed to cut down wind resistance. You'll be interested to know that the shock absorbers attached to the wheels are oleo cylinders, while the tail skid shock absorber is a compression rubber spring.

It's a good idea to work with other builders when making scale models. Sometimes one builder will hit on a way of reproducing a part that will be the despair of every one else. That's why it is worth while to join a club. (A letter on how to organize and conduct a club will be sent to any one who asks for it, inclosing a 2-cent stamp.)

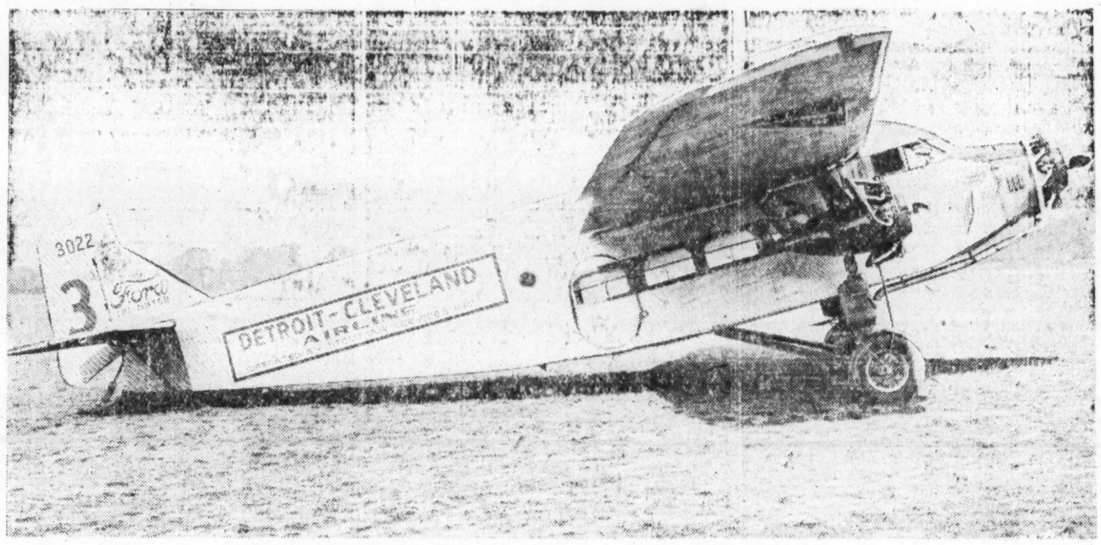

Next week you'll get the details of the contest to be held at Detroit in June. Watch for them. You'll want to know all about it, because maybe you'll be Washington's representative at the national tournament!

Build your scale model of the Ford trimotor to the dimensions given in this drawing. It will give the exact proportions of the original, scaled down to fit the 24-inch wing prescribed by the rules for the national contest. Use your own methods and your own materials to reproduce it. Your model doesn't have to fly.

If you can build a scale model to look like this ship, the Stout trimotor, you have a chance to win one of the prizes or trophies in the National Airplane Model Contest even if you can't go to Detroit. The plane is the big 12-passenger, all-metal transport designed by William B. Stout, president of the Airplane Model League of America. Its three motors and its dual controls have made it safer than a motorbus.

One of the Ford trimotor transport planes now in service.

Auto Without Gear Shift.

All gear shifts may be eliminated from automobiles if the design of a new motor demonstrated in Philadelphia recently is universally adopted, says Popular Science Monthly. One pedal feeds gas to the motor. Instead of being geared to the rear axle, this motor drives an electric generator, which supplies power to an electric motor to turn the rear wheels. Great flexibility and rapid pick-up are claimed by the inventor.

Cuba Starts Drive On Cigarette Bootleggers

Havana, Cuba (A.P.).—Cuba's protective measures against the introduction of foreign tobaccos, which make the price of American cigarettes almost prohibitive, have given rise to a lucrative trade—that of the cigarette bootlegger.

The clandestine introduction of American cigarettes is carried on in great volume, and because of this the government has inaugurated a drive against the cigarette-runner, arresting many and imposing heavy fines on those found guilty.

Purchase of a pack of American cigarettes formally declared and bearing federal revenue stamps makes a deadly dent in a dollar bill, whereas the bootlegged cigarettes is only about a third of the price with the duty on.

Just as many Americans exchange addresses and telephone numbers of their favorite bootleggers in alcoholic beverages, so do Cubans exchange views on the latest and best purveyor of the costly American tobacco product. But government officials say that they are going to make this a hazardous business and have started their drive on the clandestine cigarette salesman.

Nerve Messages Heard.

Recent discoveries have revealed human life as a wonderful electric power plant and system of transmission lines. Two experimenters in psychology at the University of Iowa, Lee E. Travis and Theodore Hunter, report in Popular Science Monthly that they have listened to messages flashed over the network of nerves in the human body, translating the impulses of nerve currents into sound waves that human ears can detect. Dr. Ralph Waldo Gerard, assistant professor of physiology in the University of Chicago, has completed tests which indicate that the origin of nerve impulses, and of thinking itself, is a heat producing process—just as the source of electric currents over power wires lies in the boilers of the generating plant.

Dr. Carl Voegtlin and Dr. Floyd De Eds, of the United States Public Health Service, have perfected a radio vacuum tube instrument which measures electric changes inside single living cells. They have found, for example, that when a living muscle cell contracts, its electric voltage decreases; when it relaxes, the voltage increases.

Life Rafts Made of Kapok.

Mattresses of kapok, a floating floss resembling cotton, will soon be used on some ocean liners in place of the usual lifeboats, reports Popular Science Monthly. Rafts made of four or more of the mattresses will be easier to handle than lifeboats, because they will not be swamped by huge waves, it is said. Capt. Warneck, of the French navy, suggested this use of the down obtained from tropical trees.

Aviation Cadets Are Organized to Teach Million Boys to Fly

Dallas, Tex. (A.P.).—To teach 1,000,000 boys how to fly within the next three or four years in the aim of the Aviation Cadets of America.

Members of the Dallas Flying Club organized the Aviation Cadets of America last August, and already squadrons of boys are being formed in half a dozen cities.

More than 150 high school students in Dallas are taking a two-year flying course at Love Field under officers of the Ninth Air Corps Reserve. Additional classes are being recuited here and also at Los Angeles, Tulsa, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Waco.

A two-year flying course is offered the students. The system of training has been drawn up by Maj. Joseph H. Noyes, commander of the Ninth Air Corps Reserve. The lessons are taken from the Army air service manuals and from information issued by the Department of Commerce.

Boys must be 15 years old, successful in a rigorous medical examination, recommended by two responsible persons and given consent of their parents to go into aviation. Every boy is given an equal opportunity. In the Dallas classes newsboys and sons of millionaires are comrades in the quest for knowledge of aeronautics.

The two-year course calls for 208 hours of instruction, which covers such subjects as nomenclature, theory of flight, motors, airplane construction, instruments, aerial navigation, meterorology, aerial photography, theory of radio, buzzer practice, map sketching and reading, close-order drill and Americanism.

Col. W. E. Easterwood, jr., national commander of the Aviation Cadets of America, and Capt. W. H. Scott, secretary of the organization, plan to visit every large city in the United States, with the view of forming the squadrons in which they hope to enroll 1,000,000 young men.

"FEATHER-DUSTER"

part. Perhaps he wanted to show off. Or, perhaps he figured to draw the Kid within reach of his murderin' hook again. Anyway, I was amazed when he suddenly drops his arms, sticks out his rock-bound jaw, an' snarls, 'Let's see what you got, feather-duster.'

"I jumps forward with a yell. Too late. All the crazy Irish we'd kept in hand for three tough years swept before the Kid's eyes in a red flood.

"A kind of a sob breaks through his lips. Mostly rage. An' with it flashed the right, round an' up, driven like a steam piston by a hundred an' eighty pounds, runnin' wild.

"Well, sir, did you ever hear the kids at Halloween smack a stockin' full of flour on the sidewalk? That's the way that wallop sounded. An' Jim Mason crumples up an' he falls backward for the first time in his life. A man's got to be hit pretty hard to fall that way, you know. I remember yet wonderin' if he were dead, so still he lay, with the headlights white on his face.

"I looks up at a low moan beside me. An' there's the Kid with cold sweat runnin' down his face, squeezin' his right between his thighs.

"'Let's see it, Tim,' I mutters. 'Twas worse than I feared even. Both middle knuckles jammed back nearly an inch, here flat puffs, swellin' as we looked. Meanin' broken bones beneath, an' the remainin' two bashed up for good measure. I tries to straighten the fingers out gently, but now they're all the same length, an' they won't straighten either. I'd fooled with enough varieties of busted hands to know that they never would again, too. We were through."

O'Sullivan sat back, relaxing with two or three long pulls at his cigar. He had eased the car to a stop before his handsome white colonial house. It was late, but the upstairs windows still glowed orange. I smoked silently. Presently he inspected his cigar and sighed. He went on, nodding slowly, eyes dreamily fixed on the white house and beyond.

"Yes, we were through, but 'twas a gorgeous exit. The world's champion knocked stiff by a man who was not supposed to be able to crack a plate!

"That night, I'll never forget it. One long nightmare. Andy MacClary telephones an hour later that Mason's jaw is fractured in two places. I tells him our little difficulty, an' that I think we'd better get together an' frame up our stories so they click. Which we did, while the Doc was shakin' his head an' doin' what he could with the Kid's smashed beetle of a hand. Andy gives it out that Jim had slipped as he was crankin' his car an' been smacked by the crank, an' I allows Kid Farley had hurt his hand slaying' a new sparrin' partner.

"The burstin' of my bubble," said O'Sullivan, "left me with no heart for the game. So the Kid an' I hit for New York early next day an' wound up our connections inside of a month, while he was takin' treatment. But to this day he shakes hands with his left."

"What became of him?" I asked eagerly.

"Oh, he's a well-to-do canner now. We get together about eight times a year, when business brings him down from Newfoundland. Did I tell you how he got a start?"

I shook my head.

"Harry Spencer was pretty much all heart, even if he was old 'Cotton' Spencer's son. An' the old man worshiped him—when he wasn't tearin' his hair over him. Anyhow, within a week he saunters in, real embarrassed, an' hands me an envelope.

"Openin' it after he left, on his orders, out flutters a check for 20,000 bucks, drawn to my order, an' signed by old 'Cotton' himself. A little note, in Harry's jagged hand, reads: 'Leaving for South tonight. The Governor seems in earnest about me learning the cotton business at last. The inclosed is one of the terms of the agreement reducing me to a working man, Danny. Split it 50-50—it's a ridiculously low price for a ringside seat to the grandest fight ever staged! Write to me, both of you, and good luck. Harry (the worker).'

"Well, we split," concluded my companion, smiling, "an' Tim buys out the whole cannery, instead of part."

"And what," I made so bold as to ask, "did you do with your share, Mr. O'Sullivan?" He shot a quick glance at me, threw back his silvery head, and laughed.

"Two things. I got into the automobile business just when it was startin' to pay. An' I got married."

As his laugh shattered the suburban quiet, the front door of the white house opened. Framed in the golden square was a girl, white-skirted, with a sweater of singing yellow. Slim, rounded, with smiling eyes that I knew to be soft as black velvet and deep as a lake in Canada. Crowned by a mass of glorious copper hair which seemed to spark 'round the edges, like an aureole, from the light behind her.

"I heard you, Danny," she accused, with a throaty little chuckle. She peered forward, trying to penetrate the curtain of darkness that hung between us. "You come in here and don't make any noise. I've just got young Tim to sleep."

"All right, hon," replied O'Sullivan, in a stage whisper. He looked at me, nodded toward the vision. "Like to meet her?"

"Would I?" said I, fumbling at the door catch. "Would I?"

Asks Court to Double His Jail Sentence

Colberg, Pomerania (A.P.).—An exceptional prisoner was Paul Horn, aged 23, who objected to the court's sentence for his assaulting and robbing a woman on the seashore as inadequate and appealed to a higher court for a more befitting punishment.

When the public prosecutor demanded a sentence of five years penitentiary, the prisoner cried: "That is all rot; my crime calls for at least ten years." Nor would the court's ultimate decision of six years and three months penitentiary appease him. He insisted upon filing an appeal with the words: "Ten years is my limit—that settles it."

Split Star New Mystery of the Heavens

Whether Nova Pictoris, First Observed by Earth Astronomers Three Years Ago, Has Been Rent in Twain by Internal Explosion or Wrecked in Collision With Another Astral Body Is Big Puzzle Now Engaging the Attention of Our Star-Gazers

ONCE again the old saying, "There is no new thing under the sun," appears to have an exception. Reports from Cape Town, South Africa, state that astronomical circles are deeply interested by the discovery that the star Nova Pictoris, first seen in South Africa in 1925, has split in two. The La Plata Observatory in Argentina recently informed the South African Observatory that the star presented a strange appearance. Astronomers at the latter station resumed observations and confirmed the opinion that the star had split.

Dr. Spencer Jones, astronomer royal at Cape Town, says that this phenomenon, the first within historic times, is really the result of a collision and not a true split in Nova Pictoris: "There are two stars now and there were two stars before, although we did not know that. The rarity of the happening gives it its great significance. The outburst occurred three years ago."

Information received from the Union Observatory at Johannesburg confirms the fact that the astonishing division of Nova Pictoris is an event of almost unparalleled importance in astronomy. Experts infer from the latest information that through some terrible explosion beyond man's conception the star actually burst asunder into two pieces, which are whirling apart at terrific speed.

* * * *

THIS star, the Nova Pictoris, which has upset all the calculations and beliefs of astronomers, was discovered by R. Watson, a telegraph operator in South Africa, in 1925. While on his way to work one morning before 6 a. m., Watson gazed at the familiar heavens and noticed, some 10 degrees south of the brilliant star Canopus, a star almost half as bright as our own pole star where before there had been no star at all.

Watson knew his stars and lost no time in notifying the Royal Observatory at Cape Good Hope that a new star had appeared in the sky. His observations were promptly verified by the observatory.

How does a new star come into being? it will be asked. That in itself is something of a mystery. The theory generally believed is that new stars are merely old faint ones which for some reason have suddenly burst into brilliancy. This seems to be the case with Nova Pictoris, for upon photographic plates in the Harvard Observatory, in the exact position of the nova, a faint tenth-magnitude star had remained unchanged in brightness since 1890, when it was first photographed. The outburst of light which raised the star to the brightness which Watson observed must have been a very sudden one. After discovery the nova continued to grow brighter for about three weeks, when it shone as a star of the first magnitude. It was then fully 4,000 times brighter than it appeared on the older Harvard photographs. Since that time it has slowly faded, though it is still a fairly bright star.

* * * *

THERE have been new stars which greatly exceeded this remarkable outburst—some that have increased their brightness by as much as 60,000 times in several days. Such tremendous outbursts of light can not be regarded as the outcome of orderly evolution; they result from a gigantic catastrophe. This conclusion is upheld by the quality of light, made on the spectograph, that a nova emits, which shows that the stellar atmosphere is strongly disturbed and in a very abnormal condition.

The nature of such a catastrophe is still uncertain. It has been suggested that the outburst might be due to the collision of two dark and comparatively obscure stars; for such a collision would, of course, produce an incalculable amount of energy in the form of heat and light. Stars are unbelievably massive bodies, as compared to terrestrial standards, and they are traveling through space at velocities which range from a few miles to 40 miles a second.

Our own sun, which is extremely ordinary, both in mass and brilliance, is 300,000 times as large as the earth and, attended by its planets, is rushing through space in the direction of the constellation Hercules at the rate of 12½ miles per second, or 4,000,000,000 miles every year. Think what the result would be if it met in head-on collision with another star of equal mass, traveling at an equal velocity.

Another explanation which seems more probable for the outburst of a nova is the result of a dark or faint star encountering a cloud of meteoric matter, or "star dust." The rush of the dark star through such a cloud would generate heat by friction, just as a cold meteor is heated by its passage through the earth's atmosphere. The surface of such a star, to a depth possibly of from ten to a few hundred miles, would be heated to an extremely high temperature. This rise in temperature would be very rapid and might transform the surface of the star into an envelope of highly rarefied gases, brilliantly luminous. This envelope would expand as the temperature raised, but expansion tends to cool a gas, and in a very few days a balance would be struck. The star would reach a maximum brightness, depending upon the amount of gaseous material, and would then much more slowly fade until it sinks almost to its original insignificance.

Another theory is that a nova bursts into brilliancy due to conditions within itself. It might thus be conceived of as being brought about by an internal explosion, similar in form to an earthquake but on a scale immeasurably greater. The effect again, it is argued, would result in the pouring out of an immense volume of gas which would form an envelope similar to that described above and highly luminous. Unfortunately, at present, our information is too meager to say which of these theories, if either, is correct. It has been, however, satisfactorily proved that a gaseous envelope surrounds the nova at the time of its outburst and that this envelope expands and then gradually cools. In the case of Nova Aquilae, for example, such a halo was detected by the late Prof. Barnard. Observations made at the Lick Observatory, both visually with the great telescope and spectroscopically, proved that this halo increased steadily in diameter and at the same time slowly faded.

The information regarding the formation and appearance of new stars is full and exhaustive as compared to scientists' knowledge and deductions of the conditions which led to the splitting in two, so recently, of Nova Pictoris. This, the youngest star studied by man, by its peculiar behavior has done more to puzzle astronomers in its three short years of visibility than any other. The more conservative of the astronomers deny the belief that Nova Pictoris has actually split in two, although the report is confirmed by the observatory in South Africa, at which point this particular star can be best studied. This opinion is given by one noted British authority, while another admits that it is a very extraordinary phenomenon and, so far as known, entirely unprecedented.

Those authorities doubting a split in the Nova Pictoris hold to the idea that another new star has been discovered inside it, so close, in fact, as to appear to have been caused by a split. There is much in favor of this theory were it not for the fact of the strange appearance of the two segments, which show signs of unusual disturbance, and their close proximity.

Another astronomer advances the theory that the star has not split suddenly. Probably it has been coming about for months or years and had not split into two portions sufficiently far apart, until recently, to be seen with a large telescope. It is quite reasonable to suppose that in a few years it will be possible to see the split with a small telescope and perhaps later with the naked eye. It is common for new stars to develop envelopes of gas gradually, but never to split in two.

The first thought of explanation for this strange breaking up of the Nova Pictoris is internal combustion, an earthquake type of disturbance on so great a scale as to split the star in two segments. This would not necessarily be the result of one grand upheaval, but rather of successive ones along the weakest line of the star's crust. In dealing with these hypothetical forces it should be remembered that the amount of energy which could be sent forth by internal combustion on this vast star is so great that it might easily shatter the star in fragments as a chicken breaks its shell. Stars are in a constant state of gaseous combustion, creating energy on a scale undreamed of and wholly unappreciable by man.

* * * *

A HARVARD authority states that while it is possible that the star has split there are two other possibilities to be considered.

"It may be," he says, "that the star has always been a double one, but that the second part has never before been observed. When Nova Pictoris was first observed, in 1925, it was so brilliant that no faint companion star could have been observed. The brilliance of the star has now faded, so that it might now be possible to see a faint companion star previously invisible.

"The second possibility is that the second object now seen is not a star but the condensation of gas near the star. The new star is surrounded by an envelope of gas, or a nebula. Some violent commotion took place which caused its brightness when it was first observed. It is now possible that in some part of this nebula condensation is taking place in such a way as to resemble a second star."

Dr. Edwin M. Frost, director of the Yerkes Observatory, Williams Bay, Wis., states that he believes it easily possible that the nova may have been accompanied by a darker star which only became visible after the nova sank to the sixth magnitude in brilliance. He says:

"From present information I should not infer that the companion had separated from nova at the date of the explosion but in the normal progress of evolution. My colleague, Prof. Van Briesbroeck, an expert on double stars, shares my views."

Another thought is suggested by a statement made by Sir Oliver Lodge some months after the discovery of Nova Pictoris. In referring to the new star he stated that the force of gravity is so great on it that a match would weigh 50 pounds and that a $5 gold piece would weigh a ton. In a body with such a terrific centripetal force it is easy to believe that should some overwhelming upheaval or collision with another body rend it asunder, the new centers of gravity immediately established in the two major separate segments would be of such strength as to attract the fragments nearest them and so form only two distinct pieces with a definite division between them—this, of course, assuming that the two major segments were of approximately equal size. If inhabitants of the earth were to be placed upon a planet with such a force of gravity, they would not only be unable to stand or sit but, if they reclined, the very weight of their own bodies would crush and flatten them to the thickness of paper. In other words the weight of the human body on such a planet would be comparable to the weight of a skyscraper on the earth.

Regarding the reluctance of the scientists to admit the possibility of Nova Pictoris breaking asunder, the theory of the relation between our own earth and the moon should be recalled. While there are many who oppose this view, the theory that the moon was once part of the earth and was parted from it countless ages ago by some tremendous internal upheaval remains the popular belief of our day.

At the time this separation is thought to have taken place it is believed that the earth was spinning so swiftly on its axis that the length of a day was only about four hours. This swift turning of the earth is thought to have thrown off its fragment, the moon, which has been slowly receding ever since. It is now known that the earth is revolving a bit slower each day and that the length of each day is about 1-240-millionth part of a second greater. The continuance of this action, it is believed, will result in the moon first ceasing to recede from the earth and later being attracted to it, until the two collide and again become one. The necessary time which must elapse before such a collision could take place would, of course, be billions of years. As our earth may have thrown off the moon, so perhaps has Nova Pictoris been subject to an immense internal upheaval which divided the star in two separate segments.

* * * *

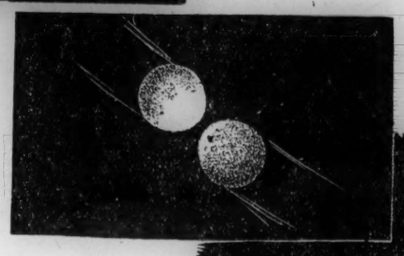

WHILE we think of this so recently observed splitting in two of Nova Pictoris as an event of today, it is within the realm of possibility that the actual breaking up took place at about the time that Columbus discovered America. It is not certain just how far from us this new star is, but it is almost certain that it is at least hundreds of light-years away.

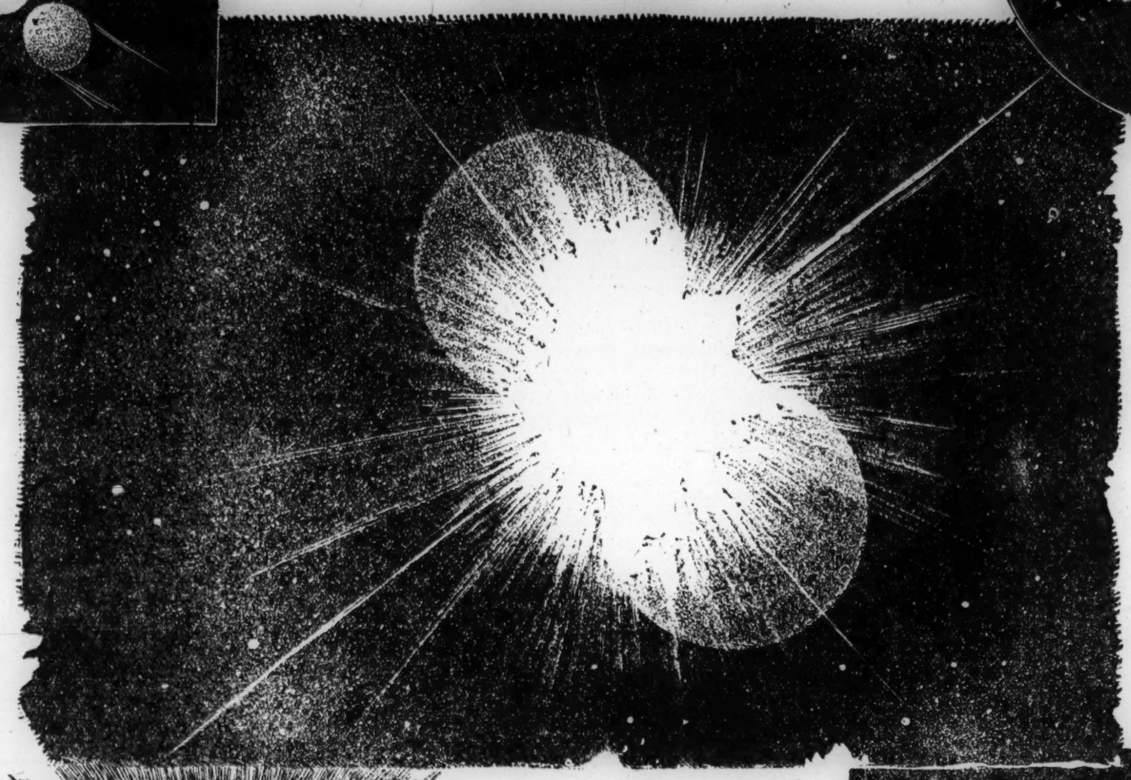

A "light-year" is convenient unit used to measure interstellar distances; roughly, it is 6,000,000,000,000 miles, or the distance which light travels in one year. And so perhaps this discovery which is so new and startling to us is ages old and regarded as ancient history by the inhabitants of other planets whose world is situated much nearer to Nova Pictoris than our earth is. Anyway, careful consideration will force us to admit that it isn't a very strong exception to the saying that "there is no new thing under the sun."

(Copyright, 1928, by the Chicago Tribune.)

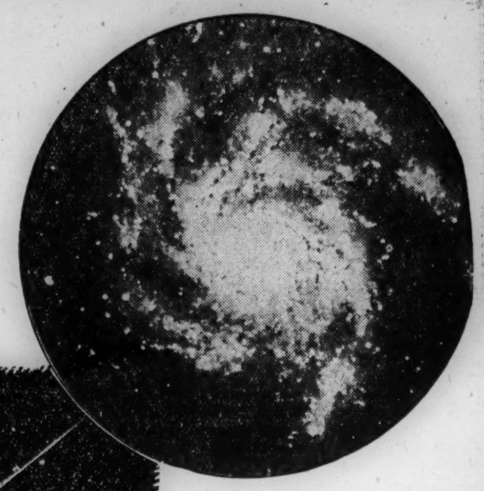

One popular theory of accounting for the splitting of Nova Pictoris is that the nova and a dark star have for years been approaching each other at a terrific speed. The dark or faint star, because of its lack of brilliance, has not been observed (above and at the right).

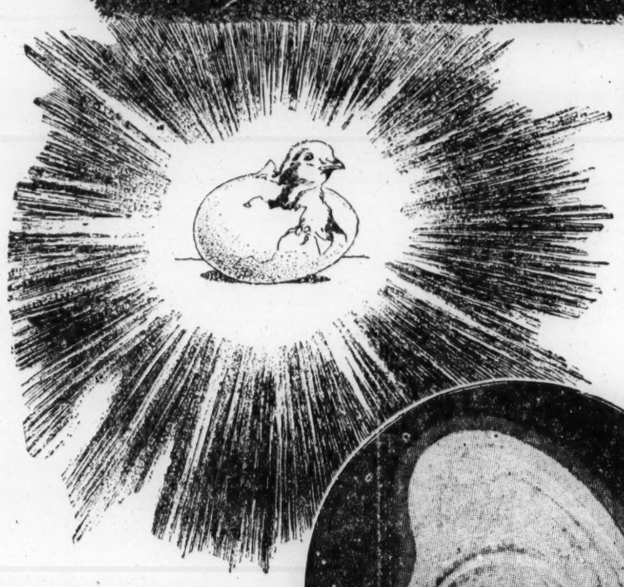

The above collision of the nova and the dark star might easily have caused the latter to have become bright, appearing as a split in the nova. At right they are shown drawing apart.

The luminous spiral nebula shown above is common to all stars. Some scientists believe the present apparent split in Nova Pictoris is caused by the separation of some of this nebula from the star.

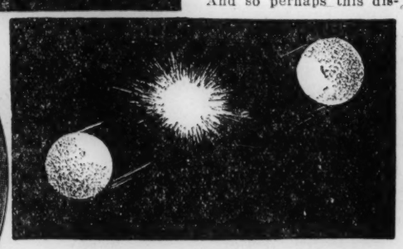

Illustrating the great internal forces at work within a star which might as easily disrupt it as the chicken breaks its shell.

The Moon is supposed to have separated from the Earth by internal upheaval and centrifugal force. Some believe the splitting of the nova to be from similar causes.

In future years Nova Pictoris and the other star may separate sufficiently to appear in the above manner, perhaps leaving fragments of each, due to the collision, which will be seen for a time as a new star.

The Son of God

By REV. W. RUSSELL BOWIE, D. D.
(Rector, Grace Episcopal Church, New York)

IN what sense was Jesus the Son of God?

I believe the answer is that Jesus was God's Son in the fullest and most final way possible for us to conceive, and I believe also in this further fact that men were never so ready as now to find God in Him if only the teachers of the church would give them the chance.

The pity is that teachers of the church have so often made belief is Jesus as the Son of God seem incredible because they have made God himself so alien and unreal. God has been represented as some unintelligible power, an abstruse substance so remote from our human life that, if Jesus were the Son of God, He could become man only by a miraculous birth and could show himself as divine only by marvels which constantly expressed his difference from us.

But what was Jesus' own teaching concerning God whom He called His Father and ours?

God is the infinitely loving Spirit who is forever reaching through to expression in the lives of all His children.

Jesus was God's supreme and perfect Son because in Him that divine love which alone dignifies and redeems human life attained its perfect and unhindered expression. When men looked at Jesus and knew that the things of the spirit are more desirable than the things of the flesh, that goodness is worth striving for and worth winning, and that love alone can lift men out of their own selves and make a world where men may dwell together in glad fullness of life, they knew that they had touched the very glory of the meaning of God.

Save Eggshells

Some day when you're making a dish that does not require the yolk and the white of eggs separate, blow out your eggs through a pin hole and let the children have the whole empty shells.

With a shell for each of them they can have an eggshell race such as Marion Caddell describes in the current issue of Child Life Magazine.

"Each player," she says, "takes possession of one and marks it with his initials. Then the shells are all placed at the same starting point on a polished floor, and each player proceeds to blow his shell toward the boundary line, which previously has been drawn at the opposite end of the floor. There is much confusion and a great deal of fun in this game. The winner is the one who first gets his shell over the boundary line. Prizes may be arranged, according to the order in which the shells arrive."

The Best Foods Are Cheapest

There has been a lot of nonsensical talk on food economy by the old-fashioned cooking teachers. These good folks love to point out the fact that the cheaper cuts of meat are just as nutritious as the tenderest steak. They are—but it takes three hours to cook neck and three minutes to cook tenderloin. The same principle applies to navy beans as against canned beans—or to wheat in the whole grain form as it comes from a threshing machine as against a prepared cereal made of whole wheat, but which is ready to eat directly from the package instead of requiring a half day of cooking. If one has much time and a little money, of course, he can save a few cents a day by spending hours in cooking. But if his time be valued either for work or for leisure, the nut meats or canned soup or prepared cereal or tender steak may be the truest economy. It is the economy of a specialization of labor which prepares food on a large scale with fewer hours of human labor than when it is done on a small scale.—Physical Culture Magazine.

Mid-Season Fabrics Shown in New Colors.

Paris (A.P.).—Several new colors have appeared in the advance dress models for late summer and early autumn.

A rich dark blue which looks as though the sun's rays had toned it down is shown by several important dress houses. It is more faded than navy blue, but deeper and richer than powder blue or nattier. There are many dinner dresses of lace in this new shade, and it is frequently shown in satin, with bias incrustations which give a two-tone effect.

Another new color is made possible by a new heavy silk fabric of satin finish called lunasol. The color, called "Light o' the Moon" by at least one dressmaker, is a compromise among silver, mauve and pale green, with some of the qualities of each, but without being exactly like any of them. It is essentially for satin materials and artificial light.

One house stresses a new tawny tan shade, the color of a lion's mane, which is shown in many variations of coat and dress ensembles.

The same dressmaker has several all black street costumes for fall, and some of his finest new evening models are all black combinations of silk and tulle. There apparently is to be no let-up in the popularity of black.

Paris (A.P.).—Most of the new silk coats have self collars. When fur collars are used, they have the air of being detachable, as separate scarf collars. One of Drecoll's silk coats has a stand up collar of black caracul of exaggerated height. The coat has graduated tiers like triple-decked pockets. The sleeves are two-tiered bell shape.

Paris (A.P.).—The short cape of flannel which is thrown around one's shoulders between games is considered an important accessory for the tennis courts. Lucien Lelong prefers white flannel and adds scarf ends which make the cape easy to anchor. One Lelong model has the scarf on the right side only. The other forms a lapel.

Paris (A.P.).—A silk fabric with two faces, one plain and the other printed, is a favorite for light-weight serviceable summer coats. Paul Caret uses the material in crushed raspberry shade for a straight line coat with loose bands which pass under an indicated belt to reappear in narrow, gathered panels on the skirt of the coat.

Paris (A.P.).—Panels which almost, or actually do, touch the floor are a favorite way of giving importance and length to evening dresses. Worth has such a model in almond green satin. The panels are at either side and drag several inches on the floor, like small trains. Each is looped once at the hips with a slightly bouffant effect.

Paris (A.P.).—Printed satin is one of the achievements of the new season. Drecoll uses navy blue satin with a small white flower design for the blouse of a two-piece costume. A navy blue cheviot skirt of straight wrap around pattern, goes with the blouse. Wide bias revers of white satin on the neck of the blouse are worn outside the matching cheviot jacket.

Paris (A.P.).—Although the effect may be that of a straight silhouette, costumes now being shown usually have flaring fullness when their wearer is in motion. A Doucet model of black crepe morocain with incrustations of sky blue crepe de chine has a jabot drapery at the right side of the front which relieves the plainness of the skirt and allows fullness.

Beach Ensembles Made of Tub Silk.

Paris (A.P.).—Three piece suits of wash silk shirtings are shown here for mid-summer country and resort wear. Stripes, small plaids and tiny checks are the most common forms, although printed shantung and plain colored shantung are widely shown.

One piece shantung dresses are usually designated as "beach frocks" and are especially popular in pale pink and blue. Deauville sandals in beige, gray or matching shades are worn with the dresses.

Brightly printed sunshades and hats of the color of the dress, or natural straw with a band of colored chiffon or ribbon are the proper accessories for beach dresses.

Newest Scarfs Match Hats

Paris (A.P.).—Scarfs used to match the dress under the coat. Now the smartest scarf is the one that matches the hat and is sold by the milliner, not the dressmaker. One house specializes in scarfs of geometrical design. Another milliner prefers pastel polka dots.

BYRD'S QUICK WIT SAVED BATTLESHIP

Long before Commander Richard E. Byrd, famous aviator who is now preparing to reach the South Pole by air, became known as a world hero, he demonstrated the courage that has made him famous. Three times he saved drowning men, and for his heroism he was awarded the famous Congressional Life Saving Medal.

One of these rescues, described by Fitzhugh Green in the June issue of Popular Science Monthly, took place off the Virginia Capes one raw, dark morning in early April.

His ship, the U. S. S. Delaware, was testing plane pontoons in a seaway. A spring nor'easter came striding down the coast and put an end to the tests. As the pontoon gear was being hoisted aboard, a seaman lost his balance and fell into the boiling sea alongside.

Dick Byrd was standing near the rail when it happened. "Man overboard!" some one yelled. But Byrd, quickwitted, shouted the right words first:

"Hold that winch!"

The officer of the deck did the thing he was trained to do. He sang out: "Away starboard lifeboat!" Correct but futile; for the man in the sea was drowning. Moreover there was no lee for the whaleboat on either side of the man-of-war.

After that first shout Byrd was quiet. He scarcely moved. Then suddenly, like a trained acrobat, he peeled off his coat and kicked off his shoes. On the armored counter he poised for a dive. As the quarter deck steadied at the top of a giant upward heave, he went over.

His thin, wiry body curved out and down. Cleanly he slipped through the face of a big green wave, and was presently out the other side not 10 feet from the drowning man.

"He's got him!" screamed an excited sailor from the upper deck.

Byrd had; and neatly he held the lucky devil until a lifeboat coxswain eventualy hauled the dripping pair over his gunwale.

On another occasion Byrd's quick wit probably saved his ship and her entire crew from being blown up. In the quartermaster's "handling room" some high explosive shells had broken loose. The entrance door was jammed. A massive loading slug had broken loose first and wrecked it. At that moment a hand fell heavily on Byrd's shoulder.

"Man in there, sir!" It was the gunner's mate. "Hurt. Can't get him out account them shells."

Byrd dashed back up a ladder and into a turret above the "handling room." Looking down, he saw a dozen black bodies plunging to and fro with terrific momentum whenever the ship rolled. They were the shells. The injured man had crawled to a beam overhead. He could hold on only a little longer; then he must fall and be crushed by the steel projectiles.

Thinking quickly, Byrd passed word back to hand down all hammocks and mattresses close at hand. In ten minutes he had ingeniously and effectively smothered the projectiles from above!

SEVENTEEN years ago Fisher pre-visioned the closed car as the ultimate vehicle of popular use. Guided by that vision, Fisher—through year after year of improved design and engineering—finally achieved the strong, safe, comfortable and compact body of today. How fully and how practically Fisher recognizes the responsibility of its unquestioned leadership is at once apparent in the surpassing comfort, value and beauty of the cars equipped with Body by Fisher.

ON THE club-house veranda after those 18 holes—the best you've ever played! As you watch the other players trooping across the links, call the steward and order a bottle of "Canada Dry."

In its cool crystal depths, there's a flavor and tang which picks you up—cheers you—puts zest in you—and brings you to your evening meal with an appetite sharpened by this delicious beverage.

For "Canada Dry" is a dry ginger ale, made from finest quality Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients. It does not contain capsicum (red pepper). It consequently has no bite or unpleasant after-effect. It is mellow and the ingredients are blended under laboratory methods which insure purity. Because of this unequaled purity, it is really good for you in hot weather.

The NEW FORD BUSINESS COUPE

An unusually good car for the business and professional man because of its Beauty

Safety
Comfort
Reliability
Low first-cost
Economy and Low up-keep

Here is a photograph of the new Ford Business Coupe. Top covering and rear quarter are of long-wearing heavily coated leatherette. Rear deck has a luggage space of 14 cubic feet and the opening is 35 3/8 inches wide. Large parcel shelf behind seat is another convenient feature.

THE new Ford Business Coupe has been specially designed to meet the needs of business executives, salesmen, physicians, and the thousands upon thousands of other men and women who use an automobile for its practical utility in their daily work as well as for pleasure in their hours of leisure.

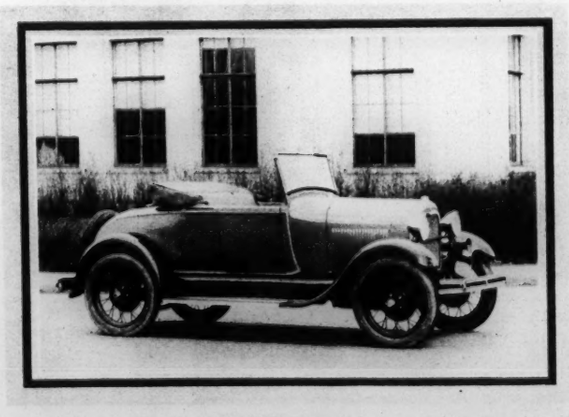

You will like its low, trim, graceful lines—its beautiful colors—its snug protection from all kinds of weather—the generous seat room—the unusually large luggage space provided in the rear deck—the rich simplicity of its finish and full-nickeled appointments—its alert speed and quick acceleration.

Security in driving is another feature you will appreciate in the new Ford Business Coupe because of the safety of the steel body, four-wheel brakes and Triplex shatter-proof windshield.

Long trips over rough roads and long hours at the wheel are made easier because of the restful tilt of the deeply cushioned seat and the easy-riding comfort of the new transverse springs and Houdaille shock absorbers. The economy of 20 to 30 miles per gallon of gasoline means a considerable saving in the cost of running this car for your own use or the use of your business.

But greater even than this beauty and these details of operation, comfort and convenience is the mechanical reliability which is such an outstanding feature of the performance of all the new Ford cars.

This reliability means a great deal to every motorist and is of special importance to men and women who drive a car many miles each day the whole year through. It is the direct result of the simplicity of mechanical design of the new Ford and the enduring quality which has been built into every part.

The new Ford Roadster is another good car for business use. Top may be raised quickly and easily. Furnished with rumble seat if desired at slight extra cost. Your choice of a variety of colors.

For the low price of the new Ford is not due to cheapness of material or construction, but to established Ford methods of manufacturing and production which cut many dollars off the price you would ordinarily have to pay for a car of this kind.

Every purchaser of a new Ford shares the benefits of the Ford policy of selling at a small margin of profit—of owning the source of raw materials—of constantly giving greater value without increased cost.

Because of this policy, the new Ford is not just a new model—not just a new automobile—but the advanced expression of a wholly new idea in modern, economical transportation.

The new Ford Business Coupe sells for $495, which is the same price as the regular Coupe and the Tudor Sedan. The Roadster sells for $385, the Phaeton for $395, and the Sport Coupe, with wide substantial rumble seat, for $550.

All of the new Ford cars are furnished in a pleasing variety of beautiful two-tone color harmonies.

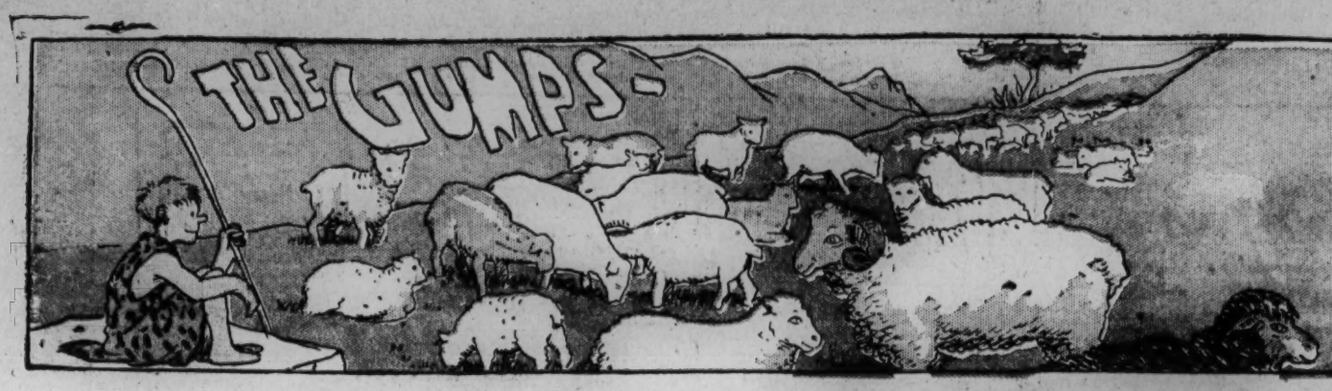

The prices given above are F. O. B. Detroit. They include four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers, mechanical, internal expanding-shoe type four-wheel brakes, Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, gasoline gage on instrument panel, windshield wiper, dash light, mirror, combination stop and tail light, theft-proof coincidental ignition lock, and high pressure grease gun lubrication.

TOMORROW?

YES, TOMORROW WILL DO.

I NEVER DID SEE FOX TERRIERS SO SCARCE, HENRY.

WELL LET'S KEEP WALKING AROUND I KNOW WE'LL SEE A FOX TERRIER SOON.

IT'S A WOMAN I MET LAST WEEK AT A RUMMAGE SALE. I INVITED HER TO CALL ON ME AND SHE'S BEEN HERE SINCE TWO OCLOCK WAITING FOR ME TO ASK HER TO STAY FOR DINNER. SUCH NERVE! SHE'S GETTING READY TO GO NOW. DON'T YOU DARE OFFER TO TAKE HER HOME IN OUR CAR OR—

SH-HH! SHE'S PHONING NOW!

HELLO! HELLO! HELLO! HELLO! BUCKLYN?

YES, BUCKLYN, I'M AT THE BUNGLE HOME.....IT'S ON SUNKEN HEIGHTS TERRACE. THE THIRD HOUSE FROM THE CORNER.....HOW LONG?.....ALL RIGHT, I'LL WAIT.....AND HURRY.

IT WONT BE LONG NOW.

I'LL FIX DINNER AFTER SHE LEAVES.

THE MOMENT THE DOCTOR SAW ME HE TURNED TO BUCKLYN AND SAID, I WASH MY HANDS OF THIS CASE, UNLESS THIS POOR WOMAN IS IMMEDIATELY RUSHED TO THE HOSPITAL. WELL BUCKLYN HAD BEEN THROUGH THE SITUATION SO OFTEN DURING MY OTHER OPERATIONS THAT HE REALIZED—

THERE'S THE DOOR BELL. I'LL ANSWER IT.

IT'S YOUR HUSBAND TO TAKE YOU HOME. SO SORRY YOU HAVE TO RUSH AWAY. DEAR.

NOT JUNGLE! BUNGLE!

GLAD TO MEET YOUR ACQUAINTANCE BANGLE. IF I HADN'T TOLD OUR MAID THAT I'D RUSH RIGHT BACK HOME TO SEE A MAN WHO'S TO CALL FOR ME I'D....

OH SIT DOWN FOR ONE MOMENT, BUCKLYN, GIVE ME YOUR HAT.

BUCKLYN, YOU KNOW WHAT THE DOCTOR TOLD YOU ABOUT DISCUSSING THE BOLSHEVIKI.

I DON'T CARE. IF ANYTHING GETS MY GOAT IT'S THE IDEA THAT ARE WE GONNA LET OUR COUNTRY BE RUN BY A LOT OF BOLSHEVIKI? ARE WE? I SAY NO! BUT YOU ASK ME IF—

THERE'S THE PHONE!

I'LL ANSWER IT.

IT'S FOR YOU, MR...? I FORGOT YOUR NAME AGAIN. THIS PARTY ON THE PHONE ASKED FOR DOGGY.

THE CALL MUST BE FROM THAT OUT-OF-TOWN CUSTOMER YOU EXPECTED TO CALL YOU, BUCKLYN.

OH, YES. WHERE'S YOUR PHONE, AH GEORGE?

HELLO.....WHO..... OH, YES OF COURSE I REMEMBER YOU.....WHAT DO YOU WANT TO SEE ME ABOUT?..... WELL ALL RIGHT.....I'M AT THE BUNGLE HOME..... SUNKEN HEIGHTS TERRACE. THIRD HOUSE FROM CORNER.....COME RIGHT UP.

? ? ? ? ? ?

LETS SEE. I DIDN'T CATCH THE NAMES OF THESE TWO GENTS. MR.....AH WHAT'S YOUR NAME AGAIN?

FISH! JOE FISH! I BROUGHT THESE OTHER BOYS WITH ME FOR THE RIDE.

NICE FLOORS HERE! HAVE WE GOT ANY MUSIC?

JAZZ?

WELL BOYS JUST MAKE YOURSELVES AT HOME AND—

THERE'S THE PHONE! WE TOLD OUR WIVES WE WERE COMING HERE.

I'LL ANSWER THE PHONE.

TELL THE GALS TO GRAB A TAXI AND RUN UP HERE, PHIL!

TEE HEE! YOU BOYS DARED US TO COME HERE AND SO HERE WE ARE.

THERE'S THE TAXI DRIVER BLOWING HIS HORN AGAIN. ED, YOU PAY HIM, WILL YOU?

IT'S RIGHT NEXT TO THE POLICE STATION. GO TO THE BACK DOOR. ASK FOR OSCAR. TELL HIM I SENT YOU. ALSO GET SOME GINGER ALE.

AND I SAID TO HER—

IN THE DAYS OF AULD LANG SYNE

LISTEN, HORTENSE, LETS HAVE SOME MORE REAL PEPPY DANCE MUSIC.

SUCH CRUST!

GO IN AGAIN AND ORDER THEM TO LEAVE!

A PARTY AT YOUR HOUSE? AND WHO'S THROWING THIS PARTY?

I DON'T KNOW. I ASKED THEM FOUR DIFFERENT TIMES TO LEAVE. WHEN I ORDERED THEM OUT THEY GOT HARD AND THREW ME OUT OF MY OWN HOME. YOU'D BETTER GET HELP. LOTS OF IT, BECAUSE I FOUND OUT HOW FAR ONE MAN CAN GET WITH THAT CREW!

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., MAY 13, 1928.

HOW TO WIN JUNIOR POST CLUB EMBLEM

Splendid Essays in Flag Contest Are Received by The Junior Post

Dear Post Boys and Girls:

Three cheers for the Red, White and Blue!

This is the sentiment that comes spontaneously to my mind as I read the fine essays and poems on the Flag which are submitted by our young people in the special Flag Contest. Please remember the rules in connection with the contest. That makes it so much easier for your editor.

I am happy to say that my mail has grown over so much bulkier since The Junior Post came into being. Come right on, Post Boys and Girls. You can never send me too many letters, stories, poems, drawing and other material for The Junior Post. We need such a lot of it, too. The Sunday Editor, who keeps a friendly eye on our welfare, says that "The Junior Post eats up an enoromus amount of copy." He is right, too. You would be surprised to learn how many words of copy are set for The Junior Post each week. That is why it is so important to have your work come in neatly written, well spelled and punctuated, and with plenty of spacing between each line, and, above all, if not typewritten, written in ink.

Try not to make your stories too long unless your are junior high or high school boys and girls, when you can compete for the 1,500 word story prize each week. I am sorry to say we are not able to award this prize each week because the material sent in is not always up to the mark for such a reward. What's the matter, high school boys and girls? Are your lessons so hard that you can not find the time to write good stories.

My, how the winners of the gold membership pins last week liked them! Each week three or four of them will be awarded to boys and girls who have won bronze membership pins first.

Now as to the membership pin blank in The Junior Post. If you have had a story, poem, drawing or other contribution printed in The Junior Post or on The Washington Post Boys and Girls page since November 15, 1923, when The Washington Post Junior Writers Club was formed, you have a right to one of these pins. Fill it out and put in the date on which your contribution appeared. Otherwise, the pin will not be sent to you, for every application blank for a pin is carefully checked before the pin is sent to you.

Please remember also that all your work must be original. The poems must be written by you, not copied from other people's work. The information for your stories may be gleaned from books, but they must be retold in your own words and in your own manner of telling even so. Now as to junior artists. Tracings are not original work. The theme, that is the story of the picture, must be yours, and the same is true of cartoons. By the way, we need more cartoons. So sharpen your pencils, young James Norths of tomorrow, and get this wonderful practice and win some prize money in adidtion.

EDITOR THE JUNIOR POST.

P. S. We could use some good snapshots made by members of The Washington Post Junior Writers Club. A gold membership pin will be given for the best one used each week.

A Narrow Escape.

(Honorable Mention.)

In walked the new boss with a few friends.

"Is it safe to go down?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," answered Jimmie, "but the cable is pretty old and weak."

He pulled the lever. Down, down hurtled the cage into the mine. Jimmie had made up his mind that he was not going to work there any longer unless they put a new cable in place of the old one. The cable had been patched time and again.

Half an hour passed. Suddenly the earth shook. The lights went out. Water began pouring into the mine from a main broken by the earthquake.

Through the speaking tube Jimmie heard some one shout, "The water's coming in. Get to the cage, quick!" The men climbed in. "Hoist away," came a shout. Crack! The cable was caught. "I can't!" was the reply.

The water rose. It came to the floor of the cage, then up to the knees of the frantic men. Jimmie pulled at the cable, but could not start it, even with the help of Mike, his best friend. The water rose higher yet.

Then some one noticed that a monkey wrench had fallen into the pulley of the cable. They would have to lower the cage to get it out. Down it went. The men thought that the cable had broken. Then the monkey wrench dropped out, and Jimmie reversed the lever. The cage shot up.

When it reached the top, and the men were all out, the new boss, wet to the skin, rushed to Jimmie to find out why the cage did not start and why it had to go down farther and scare them all.

When he found out what had happened, he ordered a new cable put in right away and promoted Jimmie to the place of chief engineer for saving him and the men from drowning. Jimmie always took care that the monkey wrenches were where they belonged and that the cable was good and strong.

And twined them in my flowing hair.

The M- Day Pageant of Bryn Mawr College.

(Honorable Mention.)

The morning of May 5 I started with my aunt to motor from Wilmington to Bryn Mawr College to see the Elizabethan May day pageant, revels and plays.

The country was beautiful, with the fruit trees all in full blossom and with the sun shining brightly. Later in the afternoon it grew very hot as it shone down on us watching the revellers on the green.

Before the pageant began we had luncheon served under the trees, where we gazed at the gray stone ivy-covered buildings of Elizabethan architecture, with the pennants floating from their towers, and were filled with the appropriate spirit with which to view the long procession.

It soon appeared, of gorgeous heralds in black and gold, archers, outriders and men at arms, escorting Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, with other great lords and ladies; the Oxford worthies; Robyn Hood and Maid Marian, with all Robyn's merry men from Sherwood Forest; then the gaily decked May pole, drawn by oxen, and surrounded by fantastic dancers and jesters and chimney sweeps and clowns.

They all circled the green, escorting Queen Elizabeth to her throne, hailing and doing her homage. The great May pole is put in place and the dance begins as the May queen is crowned.

In and out they weave, forward and back they foot it as they sing and bow with streamers flying. A merry sight of milke maydes, shepherdesses, village folke, fairie children, woodland satyrs, gipsies and fooles.

Then began the plays—"Robyn Hoode," by the sun dial; "The Old Wives' Tale," in the hollow; "The Woman in the Moon," in the cloister, and "St. George and the Dragon," on Pembroke Green.

The students of the neighboring schools refreshed us with cooling drinks before we started home, leaving a beautiful picture long to linger in our memories.

The Merest Chance.

(Honorable Mention.)

The athletic field was packed, as usual. It was even more packed than usual, for this was the day of the races for Atalanta's hand.

She hadn't wanted to be wooed in this fashion, but the old man put his foot down. "She" was beautiful, of course; and she was, besides, the swiftest sprinter in Greece.

The boys running against her really hadn't a chance, and were to have their heads removed. One, Hippomenes, had a chance, but his was the merest. Moreover, Atalanta disliked him, making it more "men."

The races began, and after all the other poor fellows had lost their heads Hippomenes stepped up.

He looked very confident, but that is man's way. The people cheered and some one yelled enthusiastically:

"Hold that line! Hold that line!"

He was immediately stepped on.

They were off. Atalanta took the lead, but Hippomenes calmly dropped a golden apple. Haughtily, Atalanta picked it up, and lost half a yard. However, she gained immediately.

Hippomenes dropped another apple. She glared at him, but paused to pick it up, anyway. Such is woman's way.

The people were frantic. She was a yard behind. They yelled, they cheered, they wept and prayed—while Atalanta gained.

The runners neared the goal—the girl in the lead. Hippomenes dropped a third apple. Would she pause now? Atalanta told him what she thought of him, and—'ray!—reached for the golden fruit. When she looked up he was waiting for her at the goal. And, with a resigned sigh, she fell into his arms.

Sounds in a Forest at Night.

(Honorable Mention.)

Have you ever walked through a forest at night and heard the many strange sounds that in the daytime we would never notice?

Walk through a body of woods late in the night, and you will hear many weird noises. Just back of you will come the sound of rustling leaves. You turn quickly, but there is nothing to be seen.

A bird or squirrel will move in the trees, and it sounds as if all around you things are moving.

A rabbit runs past you, and the crackling of the twigs made you think that many feet are passing.

The trees whisper far above you, and you wonder why they sound so loud.

A long way off an owl calls to its mate; a bird twitters low, and the sound is magnified; a bat flys by and the whirr of its wings sound like the rushing of many winds. Altogether, a forest is not a pleasant place to walk at night.

Mother's Day Poems

To Mother.

(Awarded Gold Membership Pin.)

Radiant as a rose in June,
A jewel, a priceless stone;
Without her you can never make
That wonderous place called "home."

Her eyes are as the twinkling stars,
Her lips, Diana fair,
Could not excell their ruddiness,
Surpass her locks of hair.

Her tender smile is haven for
Her children in a storm;
Her arms caressingly hold you
When with the world you're worn.

No matter what you do or say,
No difference, large or small,
Your mother's love is true love—
Most treasured of them all.

Mother's Day.

(Honorable Mention.)

Once again we come to the day
When tribute to our mothers we pay.
The mothers who are rewarded in heaven,
The mothers who mend for three and seven.

The one ever ready to help in time of trouble,
Morning, noon and night—even if they are double.
Our lunches, our lessons or our play,
When we take them to mother she knows the way.

This day we wear red flowers with delight,
For all things are rosy, happy and bright.
Our darling mothers are with us today,
In our trouble, our laughter or play.
The white flowers we wear through love,
For the mothers who have gone to heaven above.

For through each shining day
We miss her who has passed away.
So with pleasure our flowers we wear,
As tribute to mothers both here and there.
And may this day we always keep Until our eyes close at last in sleep.

"Mother."

(Honorable Mention.)

You were the best pal I ever had
I loved you with all my heart;
Whenever I was in bad
You always took my part.

Whenever I needed a helping hand
You were always at my call;
By my side you'd always stand,
The most helpful friend of all.

You showed me the road to success,
The path on which to make my career;
Ah, I can never express
My thanks to mother, so dear.

My Mother.

(Honorable Mention.)

There's a person who loved me more than my worth,
Loved and cared for me since my birth.
Kind and true as one could be,
Always taking care and watching over me.
'Tis no other than my "Dear Mother."
This one dear person old will grow;
I must shelter her from rain and snow.
It would only be right to do my part
And keep her name close to my heart.
The name of no other than my "Dear Mother."
She will always be right close to me;
I will care for her and serve her food
As she did for me in my childhood;
To care for no other than my "Dear Mother."

Mother, the friend of all,
Who answers to every call;
One who helps us when in need,
Shows her love with every deed.
Knows what's best and cures our ills,
Helps us up our steepest hills.
When in trouble, to her we go,
For what's right she will know.
So 'tis mother who's our best friend,
And this tribute to her I send.

Jane's Birthday.

(Honorable Mention.)

One morning Jane awoke to find it raining hard outside, and it was her birthday anniversary.

Her mother came in and said, "Happy birthday."

Jane was 8 years old.

"It's not very happy," declared Jane, looking out of the window at the rain. "I don't see how I'm going to have a birthday party."

"Oh, we will manage that somehow," said her mother. Then she went out of the room.

She had made a birthday cake, but decided not to tell Jane about it.

After breakfast her mother told her to call some of her friends up to come to the birthday party, and most of them accepted.

They set the table, and her aunt bought same favors for the cake.

They all came to the party. They had ribbons hanging out of the cake, with favors attached to them.

They played games and ran races.

The rain had stopped by now. At 7 o'clock they all went home.

Just before Jane went to bed she said, "It was the best birthday party I ever had."

"I am glad you liked it," said her mother.

Junior Post Editor's Letter Box

Henderson, Ky.

Dear Junior Post—I am a little girl eight year old. I live two miles from Henderson, Ky. I go in the car with my father to Henderson to Center Street School.

We have a long green lawn and shrubs around the house and two red birds have been working all day making a nest in a little Juniper tree that my mother brought from Washington, D. C.

We get The Washington Post every day and enjoy the Junior Post on Sunday and the funnies.

I thought I would write this letter to the children of the Junior Post. Yours truly,

MARTHA AGNES WATSON.

(Glad to hear from you, Martha. Write to us again. Editor Junior Post.)

Dear Editor—I received my badge from the Junior Post last Monday and I am very proud of it.

I wear it to school almost every day so that my school chums may see it. They all think it very pretty.

I have had only one story to appear in The Junior Post so far, but I am going to try to send something to The Junior Post every week, for I enjoy reading it very much.

Thanking you for the badge. Yours truly, MARY MUNDAY (age 12).

Route No. 4, Alexandria, Va. Lee-Jackson High School.

405 Tenth street northeast,
April 11, 1928.

Dear Editor: I have been reading the Junior Post since it was started. I enjoy it very much, but I have a few suggestions to make. I have noticed that many of the contributors are girls. My idea is to encourage the boys by publishing things that boys like, such as new games, tricks and things to make and do.

Very truly yours,
D. H. JARVIS (age 12).

(Come on, boys, send in your games, tricks and puzzles. We will welcome them.—Editor, Junior Post).

Dear Editor: I'm afraid it's hopeless to try to get rid of me. I'm bent on winning a prize, and, if at first I don't succeed, I'll try, try again. For every week I'm going to send something in to the simply topping Junior Post, which, by the way, is simply marvelous, and the best paper ever published.

Very sincerely yours,
CYNTHIA HATHAWAY.
5016 Moorland lane, Bethesda, Md.

Dear Editor: Through one of the sisters at St. Bernard's I got to reading one of your interesting Junior Posts. I wish to let you know that I think it is extremely interesting, and after reading the first copy I am also reading those following. The Junior Post, as it is called, contains not only facts and articles that prove interesting to children, but it has many facts written by children that I think are very instructive and educational to grown-ups. I would also like you to know that I am editor in chief of a school paper and I gained many ideas from your paper that helped make ours a success.

SIDNEY DE RANITZ.
St. Bernard's School, Wauwatosa, Wis.

Dear Editor: I am a reader of the lovely Junior Post and like it very much. I get so much enjoyment out of it. I think that I, too, must help it to give enjoyment to others.

I send a wish that the Junior Post might prosper. Sincerely,
BLANCHE M. HUGHES (age 13).

Dear Editor: I thought I would write you a letter to tell you how pleased I am with the Junior Post. I enjoyed the Post Page for Boys and Girls ever so much, but I enjoy the Junior Post ever so much more. I think we can keep "our" paper ahead of the other junior papers throughout the country, and I am going to try and help you. With best wishes to the Junior Post, I am, your faithful reader,

JUANITA BERNICE B. GRAHAM.

Dear Editor: I would like very much to join the wonderful paper called the Junior Post that you have been kind enough to have a part in for the children. It is a nice and interesting paper. I read it every Sunday. Yours, sincerely,

THELMA WHIPP (age 12).

Dear Editor: I am a little girl. Our school is bringing poems from the Junior Post. The teacher reads them to us. We are making a spring book out of them. I like the Junior Post very much. Every Sunday it becomes more interesting. Sincerely yours,

MARIE RITTENHOUSE (age 7).

Dear Editor: I have been reading your page every Sunday for several months and think it it is just fine.

I live in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. The apple trees are beautiful this time of year. Wish all The Post boys and girls could see our apple blossom festival at Winchester May 3 and 4. Come. Richard Dick Byrd is going to crown "Queen Shenandoah."

Now to the most important. How can I join your happy family? Please let me know. A friend of the Junior Post. ELEANOR TAYLOR (age 11).

Junior Book Reviews

In "Half Pint Shannon" (D Appleton & Co., New York) Paul L. Anderson has told an unusually interesting story of a young chap and his battle to make good at school.

Faced with the choice of earning his way or leaving Lockport, his school, "Half Pint" sets to work with a will, in a garage. How he makes a success of his job and also wins a star place on the school baseball team are incidents that make a rattling good story.

"The Odyssey of Boru," by J. Allan Dunn (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York), is a story about a dog, and every lover of animals will be interested in reading this book. It is a very beautiful story for children who are fond of dogs and their happenings.

The author makes one feel that a dumb animal can be most grateful for love and kindness. Boru remembered to the day of his death the pretty mistress who had loved and petted him so many years before that.

Two books have recently come from the busy presses of the Century Co., New York, which will be welcomed by boys and girls. The one for boys is "Knights of the Wing," by A. M. Jacobs, and it tells the thrilling story of airplane development. The reader is taken by the author literally into an airplane of the imagination and there he gets the big thrill of "stepping out in mid air" and experiencing the magnificent thrill of dropping by way of a parachute. The inside of an airplane factory is described and the flight of Lindbergh to Paris and Lieut. Maitland to Hawaii is followed in detail.

In "Gipsy Fortunes," by Dorothy Greve Jarnagin, the Century Company has prepared a feast of good reading for girls. The story has a lovely Southern setting, and opens on a high note of prophecy—Gipsy Glasgow, class prophet, predicts wondrous things for her classmates. Strange to say, many of these prophecies come true in unusual episodes, and that is the theme of the story.

Some one has said that every young American should read and enjoy and remember the facts in "Alexander Hamilton," by Howard Hicks (The MacMillan Co., New York), and he is right. It is a most fascinating book telling the story of one of our great founders of the republic. It will be remembered that George Washington was very fond of and a real admirer of Alexander Hamilton, whose vivid, varied life was to end so strangely on the dueling field. Hamilton's political career began when he was only 17 years old, at an age when boys nowadays are in high school, and from that time on he was seldom out of the public eye.

I will never wash the dishes;
I will ne r cook nor sew;
I will neither dust the furniture,
Nor to the market go.
Instead, I'll have some servants
When married I'm to be,
And I shall lie around in ease,
With countless luxuries.

A little girl of ten, one day,
Was contemplating thus:
To have a very fine big home
O'er which she needn't fuss.
But don't you know it's true, my dear,
That money can not buy
The happiness and peace of mind
We gain through sacrifice.

FUDGE.
(Honorable Mention.)

2-3 cup cocoa.
2-3 cup milk.
2 cups sugar.
1 tablespoonful sirup.
10c can of marshmallow.
Vanilla.

Cook cocoa and milk, stirring constantly. Add sugar and sirup. Cook until soft ball forms in cold water. Take off stove and beat in marshmallow and flavoring.

TOMATO PERFECTION SALAD.

1 level tablespoonful Sparkling gelatin.
¼ cup cold water.
1 tablespoonful of onion juice.
2 cups tomatoes, fresh or canned.
Few grains of salt.
1 tablespoonful mild vinegar.
Few grains cayenne pepper.
1 cup cabbage shredded.
½ cup celery, chopped.
½ green pepper, chopped.
Nut meats if desired.

Soak gelatin in cold water 5 minutes. Heat tomatoes with onion juice and seasonings for 10 minutes. Add soaked gelatin and vinegar, and when gelatin is dissolved strain.

When mixture begins to thicken, add vegetables, and turn into wet mold. When firm unmold on lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise. If ripe tomatoes are used simply squeeze the juice from them.

SPONGE CAKE.
(Honorable Mention.)

6 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Rind of ½ lemon
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt

To the well beaten egg yolks add sugar, beat until very light, then add lemon juice and rind. Mix well and carefully fold in flour, which has been sifted, and then mixed and sifted with salt again. Beat this well.

When well mixed add slowly to the stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix by cutting and folding together quickly but lightly. When well mixed put into an ungreased pan having a tube in center, or into small gem pans. Bake in a moderate oven until it shrinks and is a delicate brown color. Turn from pan and stand on cake cooler.

CHOCOLATE DROP COOKIES.
(Honorable Mention.)

½ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
1 egg
2 cups flour
½ teaspoonful soda
¾ cup sweet milk
2 squares melted chocolate (each square 1 ounce)
½ cup chopped nuts

Cream the shortening and add the sugar gradually. Add the well beaten egg. Sift flour once before measuring. Mix and sift flour and soda together and add alternately with the milk. Add the melted chocolate and then the chopped nuts. Drop on a baking sheet and bake in a modefate oven for 15 minutes. This amount will make three dozen cookies.

Betty.

(Honorable Mention.)

At 1 o'clock Betty Ross started on a picnic with her friends. Her mother had said that she could not go in swimming because of a bad cold she had.

This was a great disappointment to Betty, because she loved to swim.

When Betty and her friends arrived, some of the girls were in swimming and others preparing to do so.

When the girls saw Betty they called for her to come in. She told them what her mother had said.

Then one of the girls said:

"I don't believe the water will hurt your cold. I'll lend you a bathing suit, and no one will tell your mother."

Betty took the suit offered her and started to go in, when she felt a queer feeling.

It seemed to say "should I go in?" Betty struggled with this question for a moment and then decided not to go in.

Despite the efforts of her friends she stayed on the shore and gathered sticks for the fire.

That night when Betty got home she was a happy girl even though she had not gone in swimming.

Why I Like Lindbergh.

(Honorable Mention.)

If Lindbergh had been like many boys of his age he would have been elated, so to speak, when he succeeded in flying across the Atlantic Ocean.

Lindbergh was not like most young men. He did not get arrogant. He was only a "bashful, shy boy."

Some people say that he will not live long because he is so careless in his stunt flying. But I do not think so, because his excellent skill in jumping and controlling airplanes shows he is not as careless as some people say.

The first person he asked about when he came on land after his long sea trip from France was his mother.

Owing to his skill in jumping he has saved his life several times.

I think everybody who knows anything about Lindbergh likes at least one of his qualities, even if they don't say so.

LOUISE SCOTT (age 12).

My Turtle Farm.

(Honorable Mention.)

One of the most interesting animals of all to me is the turtle.

In fact, they interest me so much that I have what I call a turtle farm in my back yard.

Last fall, before they buried themselves for winter, I had nine turtles of all shapes and sizes.

Another very interesting thing about the life of a turtle is the way they bury themselves each year.

Just about the middle of November, when the weather begins to get cold, the turtles will bury themselves deep in the ground for the rest of the winter.

Then along about this time of the year they slowly, but surely, come to the top of the earth.

Right now I have two turtles that you just can see a spot on their backs, and the others are still deep in the ground.

On a turtle farm you have your favorites just as in other hobbies, and I have mine.

The largest turtle I have I have named Hickory, because he is so hard, and always fighting with the other turtles.

Then I have one named "Reds," because he is redheaded, a very unusual thing to see a redheaded turtle, and last little Lindy. He is named this because he is so fast in moving around, just like Lindy.

I think most any boy would enjoy having such a farm, and he could have one if he would only devote the time to it. DALLAS SHIRLEY (age 14).

Youth.

(Honorable Mention.)

My, but I wish I was young again
In those happy and carefree days.
When there wasn't any sorrow or pain
Nor any bills to pay.

When you didn't have to set the clock
To wake you at break of day,
And didn't have to darn your socks
Before you could go on your way.

Those days were full of joy and fun,
All care was thrown aside
Then, life had just begun,
But now age can't be denied.

The Adventures of Aloysius.

(Honorable Mention.)

"Ouch! that was a close one," said Mike, as several machine-gun bullets shot over his head.

Michael Aloysius McNutt and Sir Hopkins Hoptoff were two soldiers who fought together in the last great war. One came from Ireland and the other from England, both being very brave—in time of peace.

"Let's go into that dugout there until the bombing stops," said Hopkins.

So they went into the entrance just in time to hear a doctor say to a few other doctors grouped around a wounded soldier.

"I will now show you how to cut out half of this man's collarbone, saw off his left leg, amputate his right hand and take out three of his ribs, and still have him live—maybe."

"This is no place for us," said Mike. "We'll try another one."

The next dugout they came to was deserted, so they entered, but no sooner were they inside than a loud explosion was heard above their heads and a great quantity of mud from the ceiling fell upon them.

They rushed outside to find that a shell had fallen on the roof of the dugout and a large German bombing plane was above their heads.

"Shall we retreat?" asked Hopkins.

"Retreat where?" answered Mike.

"I don't know; maybe we'd better go back to headquarters."

When they arrived at headquarters they were greeted with the joyful news that they were to go to a small village named Remions for a three days' rest.

Early the next morning a long line of Army trucks arrived in Remions, crowded with soldiers.

After Michael McNutt and Sir Hopkins Hoptoff had found a dwelling in an old deserted stable a soldier came to tell them to report at headquarters at once, for they were needed at the front.

"This is a heck of a three days' rest," said Mike.

"And a heck of a war. Why not desert?" suggested Hopkins.

Mike acquiesed to the plan, so they left the barn and crawled through cornfields until they were no longer in sight of the village. Then, leaving the fields, they walked through a long forest.

It was nearly night when they came to a clearing in the woods, and in it they saw a small castle, partly in ruins.

Walking across a dry moat, they entered a doorway leading into a hall.

Then they walked up a flight of stairs, at the top of which they saw a long corridor with numerous small rooms adjoining it, and into one of these rooms they walked.

"Hark—do you hear somebody talking?" asked Hopkins.

"Yes, I do. Keep quiet, and we'll listen," whispered Mike.

The voices that they heard came from an adjoining room, but they were speaking in German, and as Mike and Hopkins could not speak that language, they did not understand what the talking was about.

Mike thought it best to try to capture the speakers, for they might be spies and have valuable papers.

So he and Hopkins crept out into the hall and into the next room, where they saw two Germans bending over a paper.

"Hands up!" yelled Mike, "and surrender, or I'll put you where I can visit you every Decoration Day!"

The two spies were so taken by surprise that they did as was commanded without offering any resistance.

"Let's tie these spies up and leave them here until we take this paper back to headquarters. Then we can come back and get them," said Mike.

"Yes, but what about our plan to desert?" asked Hopkins.

"Oh, that's all off. Just for this, perhaps we might get a reward—maybe a Croix Du Gerry!" said Mike.

So, after Mike put the paper away in his pocket, he and Sir Hopkins left the castle and began their journey back through the woods.

At dawn they found themselves in a small village at the edge of the forest, but it did not look like Remions.

All the houses were of different architecture from those of Remions. Nobody was to be seen on the streets except a dog, which was already beginning to bark at their approach.

"Look!" exclaimed Hopkins, pointing to a house across the street. "Do you see the German flag on the roof of that building?"

"Yes," answered Mike, "this must be a German town, and here comes a sentinel. Let's hide in that barn."

As the sentinel passed by he saw a khaki-colored object moving around inside the barn.

"Who's in there?" he yelled.

"It's only us horses," was the reply.

As the sentinel walked in to investigate, the two friends ran out a door and into the street, not stopping until they were well into the woods.

"What shall we do now?" asked Hopkins.

"Keep walking until we reach Remions," answered Mike.

When they reached Remions that evening, they first went to headquarters, where, after they had delivered the paper to the general, they were questioned as to their whereabouts the last few days, and how they had obtained the paper.

"Well, general," said Mike, "you see it's this way: Yesterday, Hopkins and I were out in the fields picking daisies when, suddenly, we heard a noise, and there, not more than three yards away, were a dozen or more Germans marching toward us. We didn't have time to escape, and they took us prisoners.

"We were carried through a long forest into a village, where they imprisoned us in a stone jail. About 10 o'clock last night we decided to escape, so I took a piece of hardtack and broke two of the bars in the window, then we crawled out and saw ten soldiers guarding us.

"So, with my bare hands, I killed all 20 of them. I saw a paper on the ground and picked it up. We ran all day and reached here tonight."

"Yeah? Well, look at this," said the general, as he handed Mike a translation of the paper he had taken from the Germans. The paper ran as follows:

"The Wiennerwurst Laundry, to Gen. Von Hindenbrug. Three shirts washed and torn, 35 centimes; 2 collars pressed and ripped, 40 centimes. Total, 75 centimes."

"I guess it won't be long now," said Hopkins, with a sigh.

"As long as you two guys returned, we wont shoot you like we ordinarily do deserters, but you will have to be sent to prison for two weeks for deserting and three days for lying to me," said the general.

"Who suggested that we desert?" asked Mike, after they had been put in prison.

"You did," answered Hopkins.

"I didn't!"

"You did!—w—well maybe you're right. I guess I did, but who was it that told that story to the general?"

"Well, I guess I did," said Mike.

"Then you're just as much to blame as I am," said Hopkins.

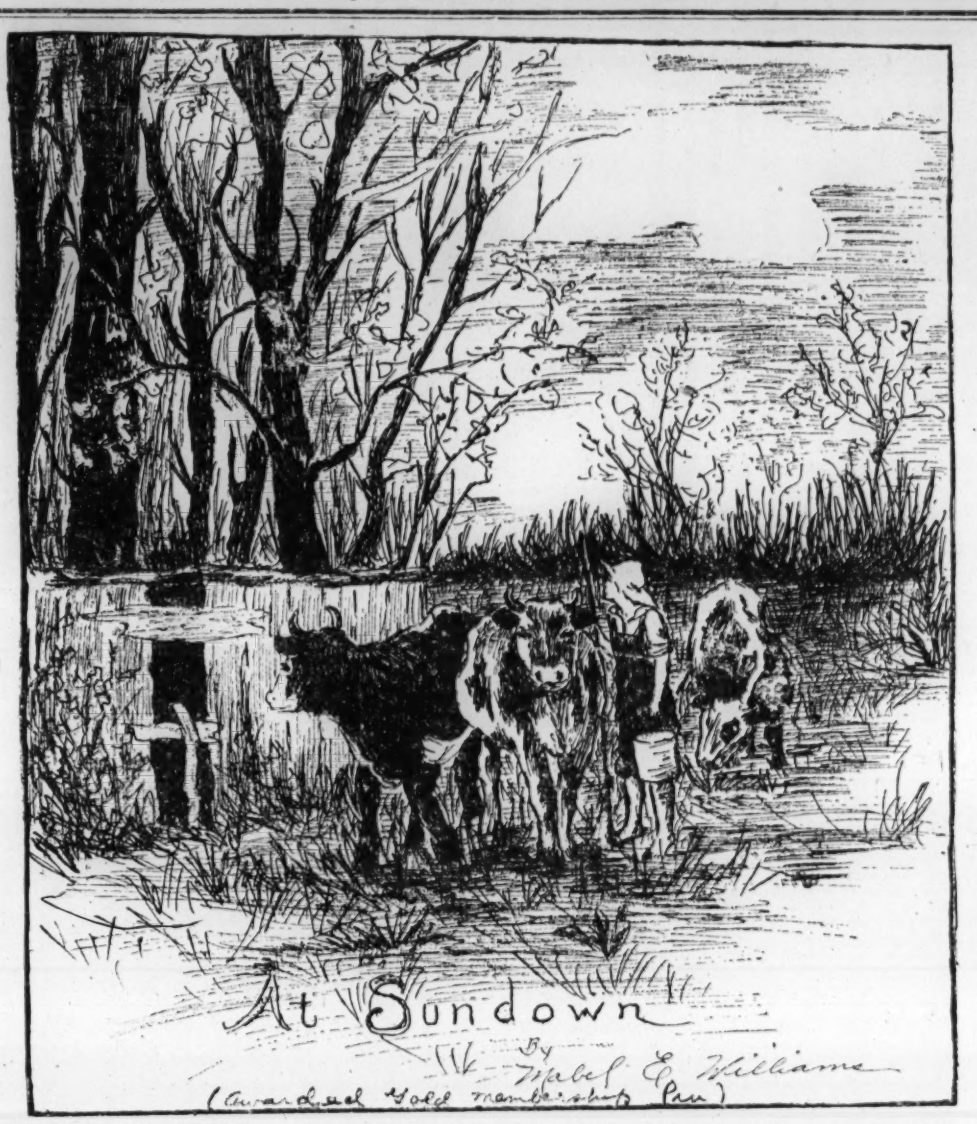

"I'm not!"

"You are!"

"You're crazy! You are!"

Thus was the end of a perfect friendship, and they lived unhappily ever after.

The Planet Neptune.

(Honorable Mention.)

What is considered as the greatest and most extraordinary achievement in mathematical astronomy is the discovery of the planet Neptune.

There were two men who independently undertook the task of discovering, if possible, the cause which theory showed was due to the gravitational attraction of another undiscovered planet beyond Uranus, the outermost planet of our solar system then known.

These men were John C. Adams, a graduate from the Cambridge University, and Urbain Le Verrier, an eminent French astronomer.

After two and a half years of tedious and laborious calculations Adams accomplished his great task and took his papers to the Greenwich Observatory in England, but the astronomer, Airy, had very little confidence in the man's communications, so he gave little attention to the matter.

Le Verrier also completed his work at about the same time as Adams did, but he forwarded his manuscript to the director of the Berlin Observatory, Galle.

This astronomer discovered the unknown planet thirty minutes after he received the communication from Le Verrier, close to its computed position.

The planet Neptune is 36,000 miles in diameter, 2,792,000,000 miles distant from the sun, and with its one satellite, or moon, makes one complete revolution around the sun once in 164 years.

Within due time the astronomer may learn the position of the poles and equator of Neptune, but this may require a century of observation, or even several centuries.

Diary of a Horse.

(Honorable Mention.)

I was born in far-off Arabia. It is there that many of the world's best horses are born and bred.

I can not remember my early life there, but one thing I do remember is the day that my master tried to put a bit in my mouth.

It hurt my mouth dreadfully to feel that iron bit in my mouth.

Angrily, I kicked him. Astonished at my sudden behavior, he picked himself up and, limping toward me, looked me over critically. That showed that he didn't approve of my sudden behavior.

When I was shipped to America to be sold, I felt sad, indeed, to leave my brithplace, but my friends encouraged me, and told me I would get used to it in time to come.

When I finally got to America I was sold to a man as a beast of burden. He was a farmer that would whip you at the slightest mistake.

I got tired of this cruel treatment and ran away from the farmer. My next master found me in the morning in his shed.

Horses judge people by their looks, and I judged that this man had a kind heart.

He tried me out to see if I could run very fast, and was delighted to see how fast I could run.

After months of training, he entered me in a race that gave $2,000 to the winner.

My master told me he had confidence in me and was sure I could win. I did win, and am known as a famous race horse.

Even though I sometimes have a longing for Arabia, it is soon overcome when I think of my fame in America.

Diary of a Clock.

Monday—Here I am in a big dark box with a lot of other toys. I wonder where I'm going?

Tuesday—Here I am in a place where, if the person has a number that a wheel stops on, they can have me or any thing they want on the stand. My, but a funny game.

Wednesday—Some one has taken me, but I do not like the lady, as she winds me up so much I shall get sick soon.

Thursday—I am in another house where a girl is going to give someone a party. I want a party if I can get one. I wonder what they are made of. Oh! Its a game for a lot of children. My, but this little boy likes me and he will keep me on his table.

Friday—My, but its dull here and I guess nothing ever happens. (I would not have said that if I could have looked into the future.)

Saturday—Well, I see by myself its late, so I will go to bed, as George is in bed. Some one is breaking in. I must tell George. I will ring and wake him now. Buzz, buzz. At last he woke up and told his father. The man was a bandit and a reward was given to George.

Sunday—Well, I was given a new coat of paint and look fine. I guess I will go to sleep now. So long.

Slow but Sure.

(Honorable Mention.)

A Hyattsville youngster had been permitted to visit a girl friend on the strict condition that she was to leave there at 5 o'clock.

She did not arrive home until 7 o'clock and her mother was very anxious. The youngster insisted, however, that she had obeyed orders and had not lingered unnecessarily on the way.

"Do you expect me to believe," said her mother, "that it took you two hours to walk a quarter of a mile? Now, young lady, tell me the truth."

"Yes, mamma," sobbed Gertrude. "Norman gave me a mud turtle and I was afraid to carry it, so I led it home."

A Little Girl.

(Honorable Mention.)

Once there was a litle girl.

One time when she was walking down the steps she fell with her doll in her hand.

Then she told her mother.

Her mother said, "We will take it to the doll hospital."

So they took it to the hospital.

They left it there and went home.

The next day they came back.

It was all fixed.

They went home and the litle girl never broke her doll again.

Ain't It Funny?

(Honorable Mention.)

Ain't it funny? Ain't it funny?
Life's so doggone queer!
One day's rainy, one day's sunny,
One has sorrow, one has cheer.
But we jes go right on livin',
Some a' stintin', some a' givin',
Some folks happy nigh to bu'st,
Others look like "Gloomy Gus,"
Ain't it funny?
Ain't it funny? Ain't it funny?
When you think about it all!
Some folks poor, 'n some have money,
Some with big hearts, some with small.
All 'a travelin' Life's highway,
Passin' on with each new day,
Some 'a walkin' 'long as tho'
They dont care whether they get there or no'.
Ain't it funny?
Ain't it funny? Ain't it funny?
How time jes goes driftin' on!
Jes like cake that's spread with honey,
Sickenin' 'fore it's half-way gone.
Yet, the memory of some hours
Lingers on, like faded flowers;
Tho' Life's hard, it must go by,
'N none o' us don't want to die.
Ain't it funny?

Why I Love Animals.

(Honorable Mention.)

Every one loves animals. Let me tell you about my little dog.

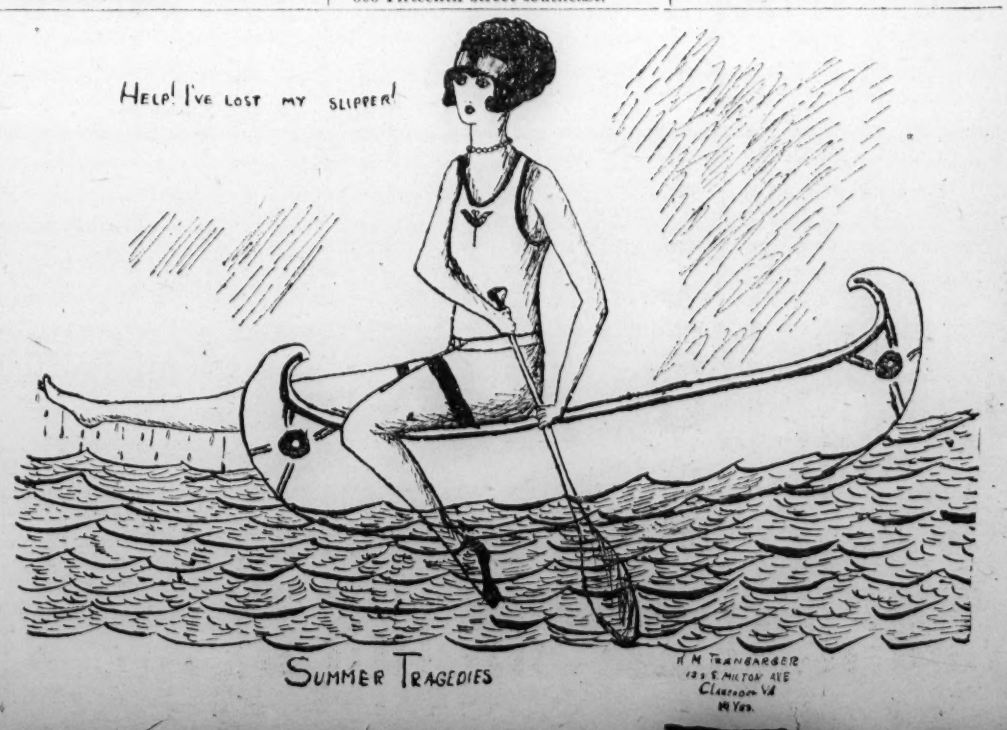

Her name is Trixie, and she is very smart. I have a little doll, and Trixie sleeps with her—in fact, mother says that Trixie loves the doll better than she does me; but I don't think so. My dog sits up and begs for her dinner, and when she wants to go out to play she scratches on the door.

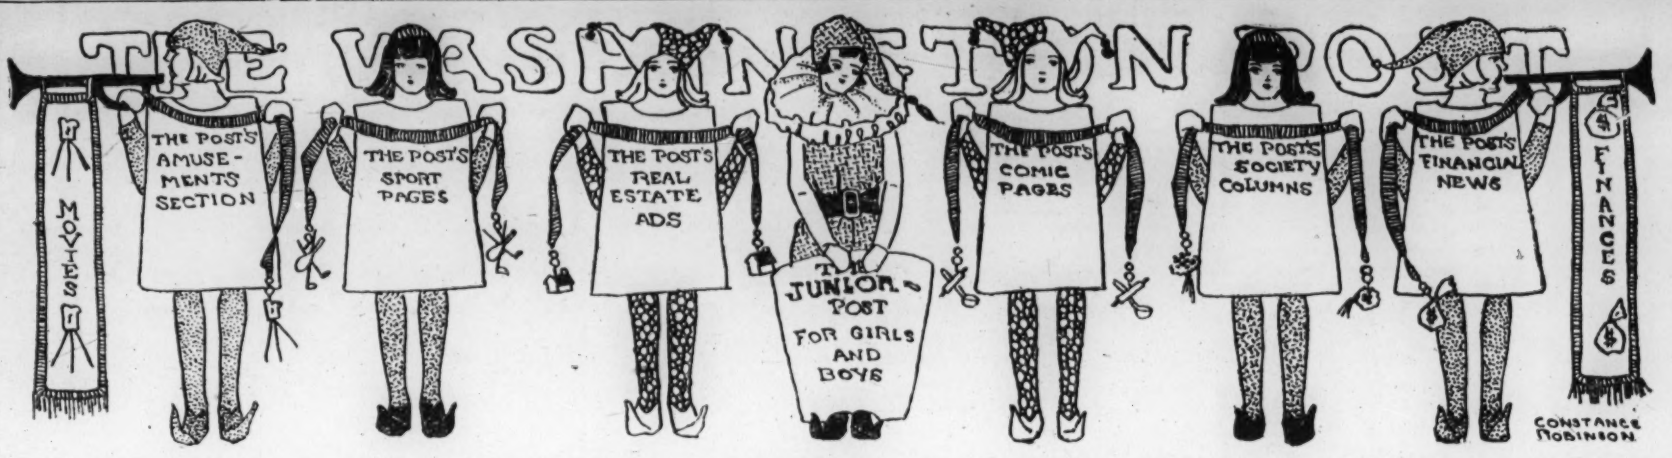

Trixie loves candy, of course. But we tell her that she must lick the candy instead of biting it, and, although most people won't believe it, she really does just as we tell her to.

Trixie greets all of our friends when they come to see us, and even if she is very tired at night, she will not lie down until every one has gone to bed.

Now do you wonder why I love my little dog?

Mother

(Honorable Mention.)

Just as the sun arose over the rippling waters of the Atlantic Ocean a black speck was outlined against the sky.

As this speck came closer it shaped itself into the form of a large steamer. If you were on board this ship you could not hear yourself to think, as the list of passengers were emigrants coming to America for the first time. As the ship approached the Statue of Liberty the foreigners each burst out in his native language.

About two hours after the ship had docked, the benches in the waiting room of Ellis Island were crowded to capacity with emigrants waiting to be examined for citizenship papers.

One member of this group was a huge, jovial Swede, who between mouthfuls of food was talking in a jolly tone.

When his turn came to be examined he put up his lunch, walked confidently into the office. He passed the examinations and tests and soon after signing papers was sitting on a bench in a park glancing down the advertisements.

He found an advertisement which he read: "Wanted—Young healthy man as a sparring partner for Jake Hardy, lightweight East Side prizefighter. Apply John Baskin's Gymnasium."

After several inquiries he reached the gymnasium, and after climbing four flights of rickety steps he came to a room which he entered.

Inside he found a short, heavy-built man. On one side of his desk a young man attired in boxer's trunks and shoes, with a bathrobe carelessly tossed on his shoulders, was puffing on a cigarette.

As the Swede entered, the man, who he after learned was Jake's manager, stood up, and the cigar fell from his mouth. This was caused by his amazement in seeing such a huge man. The Swede, Bert, said in a few brief words that he had applied for the job.

The manager entered in a conversation with him and after twenty minutes Bert was dressed in some trunks and was sparring with Jake. Although the Swede did not fight scientifically by his brutal force it was seen that he got the best of the encounter.

The manager, who liked Bert's fighting, asked Bert if he would not like to fight for him. Bert thought that there might be money in it and so he signed a contract.

The next few weeks were very busy for Bert, and although his footwork was slow he developed a defense that was invincible.

Then came his first bout, which was with a young, springy youth whose ring name was "Spingy Holson," another East Side product.

The night arrived and, accompanied by his manager and Jake Hardy, who was now a friend of Bert's, Bert went to the East Side Boxing Arena, where the fight was to be held.

On arriving Bert went to his dressing room and started to prepare himself. After he had prepared himself by putting on his boxing trunks and bathrobe, his seconds bound his fists in tape.

Then, after a few words with his manager, he was led out, his trainers following. On approaching the ring he nimbly ducked underneath the ropes and walked over to his corner, where a stool had been placed. His trainers then started rubbing him.

The boxing arena was at this time filled, and as Bert looked in the audience all was a fog of cigarette smoke. The boxing arena was bordered by heavy ropes, which were thrown around the oblong shape. A dazzling ray of light was shed on the center of the ring. During the rounds the lights in the arena were out, while in between rounds they were put on. Bert was dazed and did not deliver a blow until the seventh round, and then with a vicious jab he fixed Holson so that he was springless. This was the beginning of a heavyweight's career, which was destined to be succesful.

After everal more bouts he overcame the stage fright. Finally, after many bouts, he came to where he would have to fight another battle to see who would get the chance to fight the champion.

There was not a busier man than Bert. He was all around at once.

First, he would be sparring, then jumping rope, exercising with dumbbells, and then using the shoulder machine. Slowly but surely he was molding into a brutal, scientific prize fighter.

Then one morning he got a telegram, which was delivered just after a brief sparring period.

Clumsily, yet effectively, he tore the letter open, and found a message from his mother. It read something like this, "Have accumulated some money and will arrive by 26th."

It was very strange that this date should be the day before his combat.

However, the operator was crooked, and he gave a duplicate message to Joe Lentz, the man whom Bert was to fight. Lentz, with the aid of his manager, who was a crafty schemer, decided that if Bert's mother did not pass the citizenship tests that Bert would be broken-hearted with grief and probably would not fight, and that the fight would be forfeited to Lentz.

Nothing was done until the morning of the 26th, when Joe's manager, with several hired thugs, entered into the doctor's office at Ellis Island.

A little later two men carrying a white object were seen coming from the doctor's office, where they then went to a motorboat, which made for a cove miles in the distance.

However, a Coast Guard cutter soon got under way in pursuit of this suspicious boat. But to go back to our hero. Accompanied by his manager, he met his mother at the boat pier. They then took her to Ellis Island, where she was taken into the doctor s office.

An hour later she emerged crying and after questioning the two men learned that she had failed to pass the examinations.

However, the ship didn't sail until the next day, so Bert said he would not fight, and with his mother he went to a hotel, where he told the proprietor they wanted no visitors.

However, Jake Hardy stuck his head in the door later on and told Bert that he wanted to see him alone. Bert stepped outside and Jake told him that an East Side friend that had been employed by Joe Lentz, but who had not been paid, told him that there had been a fake doctor, and Jake concluded that his mother could still take another examination.

They all ate super and then hurried down to the building. Everything was closed, so they had to wait until the next day, and after everything was fixed

Bert went to the gymnasium to practice for the last time.

That night Bert, accompanied by his mother, who was very timid, went to Madison Square Garden a confident man—and nothing beats a confident man.

As he ducked underneath the ropes and took his seat he was applauded loudly. Then, standing up with his back to the ring, he got his feet in training. Then his opponent took his seat, and he was loudly applauded.

Then the announcer came up into the ring, and in a loud voice called out the fighter's names. "Ladies and gentlemen, in this corner we have Knockout Lentz, an East Side production, and in this corner Swede Bert, K.-O. man."

Then the two men accompanied by their managers, went over and shook hands, the referee going over the rules. They then returned to their corners, where their robes were slipped off.

As the gong sounded Bert's manager said in an undertone, "Wait until the fourth round." The first round went to Lentz, as he was the only one that scored any blows. The second went to Lentz also, but Bert got the third, as he jarred Lentz's guard and got a jab through.

His mother came over to him at the conclusion of the round and, in a pleading tone, said, "Finish him up. It's bedtime for you, anyway."

At this Bert hugged his mother and said, "Here goes."

When the gong sounded he rushed across the ring before Lentz had hardly left his seat. Bert drove him back up against the ropes with straight jabs. And then, as if for conclusion, he used the famous 1-2 blow, first with the left, then the right. This was enough for Lentz, and he collapsed.

After everything was over and Bert had been congratulated until his back and arms were sore, his mother came to him and silently gave him her praise that only a mother can give a son.

Then, taking his mother on his huge lap, he started to rock her to sleep. When the janitor came around to turn out the lights he found the two asleep, mother and son, and on each face was peace. He softly tiptoed out without waking them up and turned the lights off.

Book Dreams.

(Honorable Mention.)

In my office or at home
Away into bookland I love to roam,
I fly away with the tinkling bells
Away into the fairyland dells.

And when I come out, I go on hikes
To Holland and her thousand dykes,
I see the flaxen-haired girls with buckets on shoulders
Marching along like little soldiers.

I go from there to the land of the skies
And see the people with squinting eyes,
As you know this land is bright Japan
Where black-haired children dress in clothes of red and tan.

I see a part of my inner self
As I travel to countries from the book-shelf,
And there as thru countries I do sway
I keep working and reading day-by-day.

But growing, let them stay.

Rose's Ambition.

(Honorable Mention.)

Rose Hackney was busying herself washing the dinner dishes and singing, at the same time trying not to think of the beautiful evening she was missing. Her mother smiled sadly as she saw her daughter trying to make the best of the situation.

Slowly Mrs. Hackney's sad smile vanished, and she gave a deep sigh. Her thoughts turned back to the memory of her dead husband. How nice everything would be were her husband still alive. Rose would have been able to study art, which had been her father's deepest desire. Mrs. Hackney did her best to help her daughter by doing odd jobs, such as sewing for the village and caring for the sick.

However, this kind of work only allowed them to live in a comfortable cottage a few blocks from the ocean, and there was no extra money for art lessons.

After Rose went to her bedroom she pondered on how to make money for art supplies. It was far past midnight when Rose fell asleep, with the faintest shadow of an idea in her tired head.

The next morning, after doing the housework, Rose walked briskly down to the seashore to think over her newfound plans. It was a calm day, and the beautiful turquoise sea pacified her and calmed her excitement.

Slowly and thoughtfully her plans were laid. She would implore her mother to take out a dollar from the little pile they kept for rent.

With that she would buy cards and some paints, and paint cards to sell, and if she had good luck she would be able to pay back the dollar and also have some spare money with which to buy materials for a large picture.

All of a sudden Rose ran happily home and rushed in the house, where her mother sat peacefully sewing.

Mrs. Hackney glanced up quickly, for she was surprised to see her daughter back so soon.

"Oh, Mother darling," cried Rose, "I have a most wonderful plan!"

Her mother smiled at her eagerness as she laid the dress aside she was making for rich Mrs. Brown's daughter Margaret. She then folded her hands and gave her attention to her daughter Rose.

Cautiously Rose told her about the plan, and ended in saying, "What do you think of it, Mumsy darling?"

Her mother did not give her answer immediately, but asked her until dinner time to think about it. Little ambitious Rose was restless the whole day, and dinner time did not come too soon for her.

All through the meal Rose ate little, but waited impatiently for her mother to finish.

After dinner Mrs. Hackney took her daughter on their small porch, and there she gave her answer.

"Rose," she said, "I've thought this over and I find that it is a good plan. I will give you a dollar for the materials, and I am sure that you will have good luck in your work."

When Mrs. Hackney finished what she had to say she handed her daughter a dollar. Rose was so happy and so excited that she rushed down to Carl's for supplies.

When she returned her mother had the table cleared, the student's lamp lit, brushes and other supplies ready for her.

Rose began her work immediately, her mother watching her between stitches she was making on the dress. It was 11 o'clock before Mrs. Hackney persuaded Rose to stop for the night.

For two weeks she worked every spare moment she had. By that time Rose had enough cards to start selling.

Eagerly she planned her sales campaign of cards. It was not hard for her to sell them, for she had done them very well.

Rose got order after order, and soon she had ten dozen to make.

She worked incessantly hurrying to get them ready. It was a week before Easter when her last dozen were ready for delivery. Rose was overjoyed when she found she had made the sum of $15.

How happy she was when she started on her large picture. It was to be one of the children next door playing in the sand.

One day as her picture was near completion a man stopped to admire it. After a while the man began to question her, and finally asked if the picture was for sale. Rose told him she would love to sell it if it was worth selling.

A few days later the man came to see her about the picture. He admired it so much that he paid $20 for it. He also told her he would consider buying any more she made.

It was not long before Rose was making enough money to take the much-desired art lessons, and to put her mother and herself in a position where they wouldn't have to scrimp and save so much.

"Three Great Americans."

(Honorable Mention.)

If I were asked who I thought was the greatest hero of each century, from its birth, 150 years ago to the present day, I would reply without hesitation.

The greatest figure of the eighteenth century, without doubt, was George Washington.

He was the greatest commander of the Revolution. With his army he suffered the bitter cold and privations of Valley Forge. At the close of the war he was one of the master minds who drew up the Constitution. He was the first President of the United States, and he molded so firmly the foundation of the Government that it is now the greatest republic in the world.

In the nineteenth century, when the Ship of State was floundering in the dark and stormy waters of war, perilously near the rocks of disaster, the hand of Abraham Lincoln guided it safely to the harbor of peace.

The life of this great man was ended by the bullet of an assassin. His tall figure, clothed in an ill-fitting black coat and a rusty silk hat, will go down through ages, the greatest of the nineteenth century.

But what of the twentieth century so far? It has had its warriors, statesmen and inventors, but to me one of these is the greatest. A Western lad unknown a year ago is the greatest of them all. Perhaps what he did was not greater, but the way he did it.

Lindbergh made the first nonstop flight from New York to Paris and he made it alone.

But he did more than that. At the time of his flight there were strained relations between France and the United States.

Lindbergh's modesty and tact did more toward relieving the situation than the diplomats of both countries had done, and this earned for him the title "Unofficial Ambassador."

Myron Herrick, the American Ambassador to France, says of Lindbergh, "If all the United States had been searched for a type to represent the youth of America, no better could have been found."

Lindbergh will be remembered in history not only as an intrepid aviator, but also as one personifying the highest ideals of the youth of twentieth century America.
